TO THE HONORABLE

HORACE GRAY, JR.,

ONE OF THE ASSOCIATE JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT OF MASSACHUSETTS,

THIS WORK IS INSCRIBED IN ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF THE ASSISTANCE RECEIVED FROM HIS JUDICIAL OPINIONS, AND FROM HIS PERSONAL INTEREST IN THE PROGRESS OF ITS CONSTRUCTION,

BY THE AUTHOR.

PREFACE

TO THE FIFTH EDITION.

Mr. Perry's learned and exhaustive treatise upon the law of Trusts and Trustees has, in its different editions, been so constantly consulted, tested, and relied upon by the profession, and is so interwoven with the decisions of the courts, as to make it at the present time one of the leading monuments of the law. As nearly every relation of life, or course of dealing, may readily give rise to a trust, the subject is evidently capable of indefinite expansion, and many extensions or qualifications of the author's statements of principles could now be well made in the text, and pointed illustrations of the application of general rules be there added; but this, although done to some extent by the preceding editors, has not been thought advisable in the present edition, as the judicial opinions, in which the author's sentences are quoted, are now so numerous that the importance of accurately preserving such quoted clauses is clearly apparent. The notes added in this edition, which are indicated by letters, and are in double columns at the foot of the pages, should therefore be consulted with added care, as they often indicate new lines of departure, or qualifications, limitations, or lucid illustrations of the author's rules. This is especially true of resulting and constructive trusts, where part payment of the consideration, or fraud or theft, give rise to delicate problems of substantial justice as to the adjustment of equities between investors, or deceived or trusting property-owners, on the one hand, and innocent purchasers and those familiar with legal rules on the other. Discretionary and implied powers, the duties of life-tenants and remainder-men to each other, agents as trustees, the following of trust funds, and investments, are prominent among the other topics which have been specially developed in this edition, in which about four thousand new decisions and authorities have been added. Examination of the new notes will best disclose the amount of care and labor devoted to the new edition.

TO THE FOURTH EDITION.

In all the courts of last resort in this country, the judges, continually and as a perfectly understood and settled thing, refer to Perry on Trusts as the standard authority upon all questions of law and equity pertaining to its subject-matter. Many times eminent judges in writing their opinions have deemed it sufficient proof of a principle or rule they wished to make use of, simply to state it with a reference to Perry; and indeed few judges could hope to arrive at more correct conclusions or more convincing proof of them than the clear, strong mind and intense industry of the author enabled him to attain. The heart's blood of his best manhood he poured into this study; many buried years bloom in this book, — it is the flower of a vigorous life.

It is analytic, orderly, and symmetrical, and everywhere marked by comprehensive generalization, accurate detail, and exhaustive citation. So perfect is it that the new cases have not called for a single new chapter, and for less than twenty-five new sections. Three thousand cases decided since the last edition, and referring in some way to trusts or trustees, have been examined by the present editor. Most of them were found not to involve any principle of the law of trusts, being merely related in name to our subject, because a trustee was involved in a dispute as to whether a certain contract was within the statute of frauds, or parol evidence was admissible for a given purpose, etc., - matters which pertain to other departments of law than that with which we are dealing. The results of about one thousand new cases have been embodied in the text of this edition. There is a marked tendency in the suits of each decade to leave the old battle-grounds and cluster about a few comparatively new and unsettled points. The existence of an implied or resulting trust, the right of a cestui to follow trust property and its proceeds, and the rights of creditors, have been such muster-fields during the last few years, and many new phases of these old questions will be found in the chapters that treat of them. The old section numbers have not been disturbed, but the figures at the top of each page refer to sections, not to pages as heretofore. The section indices at the heads of the chapters have been much improved by grouping the references under sub-heads, and the main index has been bettered in the same way, and also somewhat enlarged. Every case inserted in this edition has been carefully examined by the editor in person, and it has been his effort throughout to put no work upon the book that would not be in keeping with its high character.

ADVERTISEMENT TO THE THIRD EDITION.

The steady demand for the former editions of this treatise on the Law of Trusts, and the frequent references to it in the reported cases, attest the estimation in which the work is held by the profession, and its assured place among the standard text-books of the law, such as was anticipated for it by those who knew the author best, and were familiar with his studious habit, his ability and learning. It is very much to be regretted that by Mr. Perry's lamented death, at an age when some of the best work might reasonably have been expected from him, we have lost the ripe fruits of the study and thought which he was constantly giving to the subjects of which his book treats, so long as health and strength allowed him to study.

In the preparation of the present edition, notes and references have been made to the decisions, since the publication of the last edition, bearing upon the topics discussed in the book, with occasional additions of old cases which have come under observation, leaving the author's text and notes generally as they were written, without incurring the risk of marring what was well done before. The arrangement and numbering of sections remain as in the last edition. Much time and labor have been expended in revising the citations; and a large proportion of them have been verified or corrected, and inaccuracies which, in the haste of preparation of the former edition, had crept in, have been corrected. I am indebted, for assistance in this work of verification, to my young friends, Messrs. William Perry and Alden P. White of the Essex bar, upon the former of whom now devolves the duty of upholding in the profession the name and fame of a worthy father. The index of subjects has also been revised and enlarged with many additional references, by which, it is hoped, the body of learning in the text has been made more easily accessible, and the general usefulness of the book increased.

TO THE SECOND EDITION.

THE rapid absorption of the first edition of this work into the hands of the profession has not left to the Author so much time as could have been desired for the preparation of a second edition; nor could the necessary work have been done at all, unless it had been constantly in his hands. Even before the first edition had been sent forth, work was done, and materials accumulated, to improve the second, if it should ever be called for. At no time has there been a relaxation of thought and study upon the subject. The new cases have been assimilated as the Reports came along, and old cases have been added as they fell under notice in business or study. The Author owes a debt of gratitude to his professional brethren in every part of the country, for many valuable criticisms, suggestions, and references to authorities. Thirty-three new sections upon the trusts that arise under power of sale mortgages, and deeds of trust in the nature of mortgages, have been added; and many new sections upon important questions are scattered through the work. The numbers of the sections of the first edition are preserved, that there may be no confusion in the citations of the two editions.

The Author has been reluctant to swell the book into two volumes, but it was found impossible to compress the materials into a single volume of a form and size reasonably convenient for use. In sending forth this edition the Author hopes that it may do something to lighten the toils of a laborious profession, and that it may meet with the same kind indulgence which was so liberally bestowed upon the first.

PREFACE.

An American book upon the subject of Trusts has long been needed by the profession. At the solicitation of too partial friends, the writer was induced to undertake its preparation. The result is now given to the public.

The writer of a law-book would be inexcusable if he failed to use all the materials at his command, which could in any way enable him to state and illustrate the law. The treatises and opinions of eminent writers, as well as the reports of the decisions and opinions of judges, must all be studied and mastered. And where the book is intended for the daily use of the lawyer in busy practice, it must contain a notice and citation of the latest cases and authorities. To this end all the treatises and essays, as well as the reported decisions, upon the subject, have been used.

In addition to the original opinions of judges contained in the Reports, the excellent treatise on the Law of Trustees, by Mr. Hill, and the notes and commentaries of the learned American editors, have been carefully considered upon all the subjects treated by them.

The most complete work upon the Law of Trusts is the fifth edition of Mr. Lewin's Treatise. This work, first printed more than thirty years ago, has received xiv PREFACE.

in its various editions the most careful emendations, corrections, and additions by its author, until in the last edition it has grown into a remarkably full and clear exposition of the Law of Trusts, as administered in England.

It has been the constant object of the writer to cover all the ground embraced by the treatises of Mr. Lewin and Mr. Hill, so far as the same is important to the American lawyer; and, in addition, to include such other subjects and matters, relating to the Law of Trusts, not treated fully in those works, as are useful and necessary in American practice.

Perhaps the accumulation of authorities upon the many topics discussed may call for some explanation. A large and increasing number of States and courts are yearly sending out a great number of volumes of Reports. Few lawyers can have access to the whole number, but all desire to see the cases in their own State Reports bearing upon each proposition of the text. It has therefore been the aim of the writer to cite the cases in all the States, although the citation of a few leading cases is always sufficient to sustain an elementary proposition. He cannot hope that he has cited all the cases upon the many matters treated; but it has been his purpose to do so, and this has caused an accumulation of cases which to some may seem unnecessary.

Conscious of defects in the execution of his work, he trusts that a liberal profession will rather consider how much of a difficult task has been accomplished, than how much has been omitted or imperfectly done.

The writer cannot send this book forth to the public without acknowledging the constant kindness and encouragement which he has received from his friends during the labor of its composition; and it is his especial duty and pleasure to acknowledge his obligations to his friend and associate in business for nearly twenty years, William Crowninshield Endicott, Esquire, whose sound learning and clear judgment have been a never-failing resource in matters of doubt and difficulty, and whose refined and severe taste has been freely employed in pruning redundancies and softening asperities of manner and style.

§ 1. In the earlier states of society the rules that govern the ownership, disposition, and use of property are simple and of easy application. But as States increase, as property accumulates, and the business and relations of life become more complex, the rules of law which the new complications demand become themselves complicated, and sometimes difficult to understand and apply. The law, doctrine, and learning of trusts thus had a late origin and a slow and gradual development. The word "trust," in its popular and broadest sense, embraces a multitude of relations, duties, and responsibilities. Thus, executors and administrators, guardians of infants and lunatics, assignees in insolvency and bankruptcy, bailees, factors, agents, commission merchants, and common carriers, as well as the officers of public and private corporations, all exercise a kind of trust. Indeed, one definition of a trustee is "a person in whom some estate, interest, or power in or affecting property of any description is vested for the benefit of another." This definition embraces all the trusts and offices above named, but the law in relation to many, if not all of them, is or may be administered in the common-law courts. It is not of the law of such trusts that this treatise concerns itself.

§ 2. The trusts here treated are defined to be "an obligation upon a person arising out of a confidence reposed in him to apply property faithfully and according to such confidence." 1 Another author says that "a trust is in the nature of a deposition by which a proprietor transfers to another the property of the subject intrusted, not that it should remain with him, but that it should be applied to certain uses for the behoof of a third party." 2 Such trusts originated, and were first defined and reduced to practice, under the jurisdiction of courts by the civil law. It was a rule of that law that a testator could not name a devisee to succeed the first devisee of property, but the first devisee took the absolute legal and beneficial ownership of the property; that is, a testator could not direct and control the use of his property after his death. This rule was modified so far that a testator might name an heir to succeed, if the first heir died too young to make a will, but in all other cases the testator could only rely upon the good faith of the first taker of his property, to bestow the use according to his directions. This trust or confidence was called fidei commissum, but there were no means whereby the performance of the commission could be compelled. It was called infirmum or precarium, because it depended upon the personal inclination, integrity, and good faith of the person trusted. There were many of these imperfect trusts, where in conscience the first taker was bound to give the beneficial use, or to transfer the property itself, to a third person. Such third persons had an equitable, moral claim or right, but no legal remedy. Under these circumstances, application was made to the Emperor Augustus, and he directed the consuls to interpose their authority, and compel the execution of such trusts. Finally a prætor was appointed, called fidei commissarius, who had jurisdiction over all fidei commissa, and full power to give adequate relief in all proper cases.

§ 3. It is supposed that these fidei commissa were the models of uses which were afterwards introduced into England by the clergy to elude and avoid the operation of the statutes of mortmain. After the passing of those statutes, which were intended to forbid and prevent the accumulation of the lands of the kingdom in the hands of religious houses and corporations, it became the practice to convey lands to one person for the use of another, or for the use of a corporation. Thus the legal title was in one individual, but the beneficial use was in another. At this time the writ of subpæna was contrived, which issued out of chancery, and compelled a person who held a legal title to another's use to answer in chancery, and to perform and execute the use. Thus uses were introduced in England to circumvent the public policy of the kingdom and to avoid the statutes of mortmain, and the writ of subpæna was introduced after the model of the jurisdiction of the prætor commissarius to prevent those persons who were trusted to execute a use, from committing a fraud in refusing to perform it.2 These contrivances, originating in evasions of the law, were laid hold of during the civil wars of York and Lancaster to facilitate family settlements, and to prevent the forfeiture of estates for treason during those unhappy strifes. Thus conveyances to uses became the common form of transferring land. (a)

- § 4. Under this practice a very refined system grew up. The legal estate was in one person, and the use and enjoyment was in another. There were two titles and estates in the same land, that of the feoffee, who was the legal owner, and yet had nothing, and that of the cestui que use, who had the whole beneficial right and interest, and yet had no legal right or title. He had nevertheless a substantial interest and estate which he could convey, devise, and otherwise deal with, as with tangible property. Great inconveniences arose from this double system. Bacon's Abridgment, Uses and Trusts, sums them up as follows: "By this course of putting lands into uses there were many inconveniences, as this use, which grew first from a reasonable cause, namely, to give men the power and liberty to dispose of their own, was turned to deceive many of their just and reasonable rights, as, namely, a
- (a) In Pollock & Maitland's recent History of the English Law, Vol. II., p. 226, 227, it is said: "The germ of agency is hardly to be distinguished from the germ of another institution which in our English law has an eventful future before it, the 'use, trust or confidence.' In tracing its embryonic history, we must first notice the now established truth that the English word use when it is employed with a technical meaning in legal documents is derived not from the Latin word usus, but from the Latin word opus, which in old French becomes os or oes. True that the two words are in course of time confused, so that . . . the scribe of the charter will write ad opus (Johannis) or ad usum (Johannis) indifferently, or the fuller formula ad opus et ad usum; nevertheless, the earliest history of 'the use' is the early history of the phrase ad opus. Now this, both in France and in England, we may find in very ancient days. . . . In the thirteenth century we commonly find that where there is what to our eyes is an informal agency, this term ad opus is used to describe it. Outside the ecclesiastical sphere, there is but little talk of 'procuration;' there is no current word that is equivalent to our agent." See also Mr. Maitland's article on the Origin of Uses in 8 Harv. L. Rev. 127.

man that had cause to sue for his land knew not against whom to bring his action nor who was the owner of it. The wife was defrauded of her thirds, the husband of being tenant by curtesy, the lord of his wardship, relief, heriot, and escheat, the creditor of his extent for debt, the poor tenant of his lease; for these rights and duties were given by law from him that was owner of the land, and none other, which was now the feoffee of the trust."

- § 5. Many statutes were passed during a series of years to cure or to prevent these mischiefs or hardships. At last the statute of uses, 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10, was enacted, which converted the beneficial use into the legal ownership; that is to say, if lands were conveyed to A. to the use of B., the statute executed or converted the use into a legal estate in B., and divested all title out of A. By the operation of this statute the Court of Chancery lost for a time much of its business; for after the statute the legal title as well as the beneficial use was in the cestui que use, and he could deal with his estate as his own in every respect; he was no longer compelled to appeal to the conscience of the feoffee to uses, nor to the equity powers of the court.
- § 6. But there were certain gifts, grants, or estates to uses which the statute did not touch, and which remained as before the statute. Thus, if A. enfeoffed B. to the use of C., in trust for D., the statute immediately transferred the legal estate to C., and extinguished all interest in B., but it did not touch or affect the use or trust for D. It had been settled before the statute, as a rule of property, that a use could not be raised upon a use. At law such use raised upon a use was simply void. And at law it was held that the statute extended only to execute the first use by transferring the legal estate from B. to C., and that all its powers were exhausted in that act, and thus C. held a legal title in trust or for the use of D., which the statute did not execute.\(^1\) And although C. was bound in equity and good conscience to give to D. the use and enjoyment of the estate, there was no remedy for D. at law. and he could only proceed as before the statute by subpæna in chancery to compel C. to perform the trust. Again, if A. conveyed land to B. for a term of years for the use of C., the statute did not execute the legal title in C., for it was held, under the words of the statute, that it only executed the legal titles of estates of which the first taker was seized, and that according to the use of the words in the law no one could be said to be seized of a term of years. Thus in this last case C. could have relief only by subpæna in chancery. And, again, the statute did not execute the legal title to the cestui que use, if the first taker was to perform any active duties in regard to the estate; as if he was to hold the same for a certain time, or if he was to improve or lease the same and pay over the rents and profits to the use of C., the statute left the estate where it was before, and C. had no redress for any abuse of the trust or use except by subpæna in chancery. And, further, the statute did not apply at all to personal chattels given to one for the use and benefit of another. In these four cases the parties beneficially interested in the property, and equitably owning the whole of it, had no remedy at law for any withholding of their rights. The Court of Chancery laid hold of these four instances of a want of redress at law, and by its writ of subpona compelled the performance of these four uses under the name of trusts. The legislation of our States now recognizes trusts, and provisions and rules are made for their creation, regulation, and duration, and in some States for their administration; but they are still left to the exclusive cognizance and jurisdiction of courts of equity, or to the equity powers of the common-law courts.

§ 7. Thus interests in land became of three kinds: first, the estate in the land itself, the old common-law fee; secondly, the use, which was originally a creature of equity, but after the statute of uses it drew the estate in the land to itself, so that the fee and use were joined and made but one legal estate, not differing from the old common-law fee except in the manner of its creation; and, thirdly, the trust of which the common law takes no notice, but which in a court of equity carried the beneficial interest and profits, and is still a creature of that court, as the use was before the statute. The statute of uses has never been repealed, and is still in force in many of the United States, so that if a trust should now be created in such form that the statute would have executed it if it had been a use, the statute will now execute the trust by giving the cestui que trust the legal title as well as the equitable without any action on the part of the trustee.²

§ 8. It is thus seen that our present trusts are almost identical with the old uses.3 Of course the growth of this system of jurisprudence has been slow and gradual, and it has sometimes fallen into inconsistencies and absurdities; but the abilities of upright and wise chancellors, aided by a learned and watchful profession, have finally given a regular and simple form to the administration of trusts. Lord Chief Justice Mansfield observed that in his opinion "trusts were not on a true foundation until Lord Nottingham held the great seal. By steadily pursuing from plain principles trusts in all their consequences, and by some assistance from the legislature, a noble, rational, and uniform system of law has since been raised. Trusts are made to answer the exigencies of families, and all other purposes, without producing one of the inconveniences, frauds, or private mischiefs which the statute of Henry VIII. c. 10, was intended to avoid. The forum where they are adjudged is the only difference between trusts and legal estates." 4 During the development of this system a vast number of distinctions and subtleties have been established and exploded. It is not necessary to follow them, as many of them never obtained a foothold in America.5

- § 9. Lord Nottingham became chancellor in 1673; consequently, when America was first settled, the doctrine of trusts had not been reduced to a system. Nor was there occasion for many years to apply the doctrine to the affairs of the colonists. Lands were abundant and cheap, and could be had by the taking; personal property had not accumulated; habits of life were simple and industrious; and there was little occasion for family or other settlements that rendered the intervention of a trustee either convenient or necessary. The statute of uses was passed before the colonists left England, and it became a part of the law of many, if not all the colonies. The system of trusts which grew upon the statute of uses was adopted in America much later. Even in England the development of the equitable jurisdiction of chancery met with great opposition, upon the ground, among others, that it subjected the laws of the realm to the arbitrary discretion of one man, or "made the rights of the subject depend upon the length of the chancellor's foot." Considering this opposition to the equity jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery in England, considering that trusts were not established upon a reasonable foundation when the colonists left England, and considering the pecuniary condition of America, it is not surprising that it was long before the system received any countenance here.
- § 10. Mr. Story says that there was no equity jurisdiction in any State prior to the Revolution, or at least a very imperfect and irregular administration of it. There was an attempt to create such a jurisdiction in the province of New York in the governor and council; but it was so unpopular that it did little or no business. A court was established in Massachusetts in 1692, with full equity powers; but the act failed to receive the approval of the king in council. In 1720 a Court of Chancery was established in Pennsylvania, and continued to administer a jurisdiction in equity in a separate court until 1736. And it is probable that some of the principles of equity were administered in the common-law courts of all the colonies, in order to relieve suitors from hardships which the stricter rules of the common law were unable to effect. In New York, New Jersey, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and South Carolina, the governor of the province was clothed with the power and duty of the chancellor.1 Since the Revolution, equity jurisdiction as a system has been of slow growth, and it is only since the beginning of this century that it has received its present development in America. As property has increased, and pecuniary affairs have become complex, and it has become necessary or convenient to make marriage settlements, or settlements upon families, children, relations, or dependants, and upon charities, the English system of trusts, fully grown, has been introduced into most of the States, and they have conferred full equity powers either upon their common-law courts, or they have established separate courts with an equity jurisdiction very similar to the jurisdiction of the Lord Chancellor in the High Court of Chancery in England.2

§ 11. Mr. Story further observes that it is a favorable circumstance that jurisdiction in equity was conferred upon the courts in America at so late a period, and therefore they did not become acquainted with the system until it had been settled upon a broad and rational foundation; ³ thus they were saved from crude and unintelligent opinions and judgments, which must have been given in the then condition of the law in England, and of the profession in America. These judgments must of necessity have formed a body of precedents which would have continued to plague the profession and the courts, and would have marred the symmetry of the system. As now established, the doctrine of equity and of trusts in the United States is a well-formed system; and Mr. Story thinks it even more symmetrical than the original system in England.

- § 12. It is not the purpose of this treatise to trace the rise and growth of the law of trusts in each one of the States. It is, on the other hand, its purpose to state the general principles which prevail in all the States. It is not possible to know or to state the legislation of so many States upon the various matters connected with the administration of trusts. The intelligent lawyer must do this for himself, when the questions before him depend upon the statutes of his State rather than upon the general principles common to all the States.¹
- § 13. Sir Edward Coke's definition of a use has been adopted as an accurate legal description and definition of a trust. In his words applied to a use, "a trust is a confidence reposed in some other, not issuing out of the land, but as a thing collateral, annexed in privity to the estate of the land, and to the person touching the land, for which cestui que trust has no remedy but by subpæna in chancery." 2 The confidence here spoken of need not be expressly reposed by one party in another, for the law frequently implies or construes it to arise out of transactions between parties, when neither party supposed at the time that a trust was created between them. The trust or confidence is a thing distinguished from legal property, or legal right to property. It is neither jus in re nor jus ad rem,3 and so the confidence may not always be reposed by a person other than the trustee, for any person may convert himself into a trustee, and give from his own acts an equitable right to another person, as cestui que trust. But no person can be both trustee and cestui que trust at the same time, for no person can sue a subpœna against himself. Therefore, if an equitable estate and a legal estate meet in the same person, the trust or confidence is extinguished, for the equitable estate merges in the legal estate. As when a father holds the legal title to land in trust for an only child, and the father dies, such legal title descends to the child as only heir, and thus both estates meet in the same person.¹ But both estates must be commensurate with each other, otherwise there can be no merger.²

§ 14. Again, a trust or confidence is something collateral to the land, and not part or parcel of it. Thus a charge, an incumbrance, or a term of years is a legal title in, or issuing out of, the land itself, and binds every person, however he may come into possession of the estate. The trust or confidence is an incident to the land, and so far collateral that it does not go inseparably with it. Thus it only charges those who are privy in the estate. If the trustee is disseized, or if he is turned out of the possession by a person holding a paramount title, the disseizor is not bound by the trust or confidence, because there is no privity of estate between a disseizor and disseizee. And so there must be privity between the persons to be bound by the trust; as, if a trustee dies, the legal estate will descend to his heir, who will be bound by the trust, because there is both privity of estate and of person in such a case. And so if the trustee sell the estate to a purchaser with full notice of the trust or confidence, or if he transfer the estate to a volunteer without consideration, the estate and the persons to whom it comes in such manner will be bound by the trust, because there is both privity of estate and of persons. But if the trustee sells the estate to a third person for a valuable consideration, without notice of the trust, neither the estate nor the purchaser for value and without notice will be bound by the trust, for there is in such case no privity between the persons.¹

- § 15. All those persons who take under the trustee by operation of law are privies, both in estate and in person, to the trustee. Thus those who take as heirs under the trustee, or as tenants in dower or curtesy, or by extent of an execution,² or by an assignment in insolvency or bankruptcy, are bound by the trust. It has been thought that a lord, who takes by an escheat or by a title paramount, would not be bound by the trust; but the point has not been adjudged.³
- § 16. The doctrines of trusts are equally applicable to real and personal estate, and the same rules will govern trusts in both kinds of property.
- § 17. The cestui que trust has no remedy except by subpæna in chancery; that is, in some court with an equity jurisdiction, adequate to decree relief.⁴ The cestui que trust cannot maintain a real action upon his equitable title, but such action must be brought in the name of the trustee. There is, however, this exception, the cestui que trust may maintain a real action upon his equitable title against a stranger who shows no title, or no title under the trustee.2 But the trustee may successfully defend the legal title against a suit at common law by the cestui que trust unless the trust has ceased, or the trustee is enjoined by a court of equity.3 And so the grantee of the trustee can defend such action, even though the grant may be a breach of trust.4 At one time the common-law courts attempted to punish trustees for a breach of trust in damages, as upon an implied contract,5 but the exercise of such an authority was soon abandoned.6 And the rule of confining the administration of trusts to the courts of equity has been carried so far that the Court of King's Bench may issue prohibitions, forbidding spiritual courts from intermeddling with a trust.7 But a bill in equity cannot be maintained simply to establish the fact of a trust, no other relief being sought, even where its existence is denied; if, however, the supposed trustee is about to leave the jurisdiction, so that no relief could be obtained, the court will entertain the bill, and declare the trust if proved, and retain the bill for further action. In Pennsylvania, ejectment is an equitable action, and may be maintained by the cestui que trust, even against the trustee, when the former is entitled to the possession.2

- § 18. Trusts are divided into simple and special trusts. A simple trust is a simple conveyance of property to one upon trust for another, without further specifications or directions. In such case the law regulates the trust, and the cestui que trust has the right of possession and of disposing of the property, and he may call upon the trustee to execute such conveyances of the legal estate as are necessary. A special trust is where special and particular duties are pointed out to be performed by the trustee. In such cases he is not a mere passive agent, but he has active duties to perform, as when an estate is given to a person to sell, and from the proceeds to pay the debts of the settlor.
- § 19. Trusts have been further divided into ministerial and discretionary trusts. A trust to do a simple act, as to convey to the cestui que trust, at his request, is a ministerial trust, as it is a mere ministerial or instrumental act requiring the exercise of no judgment or discretion; but if a choice of time, manner, or place is given to the trustee, or if he must use his best judgment in the execution of the trust, it is a discretionary trust.3 Mr. Fearne contends that a trust to sell is a ministerial trust, for the price is not arbitrary, nor at the trustee's discretion, but is to be the best that can be obtained; 4 but Mr. Lewin insists that it is a discretionary trust, as there is much room for judgment in the proceeding,5 and it may be added that there is room for skill in procuring the best possible price. But the distinction is not very important, as the duties of a trustee for sale are the same, whether the trust is called ministerial or discretionary.

- § 20. There is a mixed trust and power, as where the settlor sketches the outline of a trust and leaves the details to be settled and carried into effect, according to the best judgment of his trustees. The power joined to the trust in such case is imperative and must be exercised; but the mode of its execution is a matter of judgment and discretionary. But this kind of trust and power is not to be confounded with a trust to which a power is annexed. In this case the trust is complete in itself, and the power is a simple addition, which may or may not be exercised, as the trustee shall choose, as where lands are given to trustees for a particular purpose, and a power of sale, or of changing the securities, is added; the power is no part of the trust, but it is something collateral, which the court cannot compel the trustee to perform. But a trust to distribute the trust fund according to the discretion of the trustee is an imperative trust and power.1
- § 21. Trusts are also said to be legal or illegal. Trusts are legal when they are for some honest purpose, as to pay debts or make a provision for families. They are illegal when they are for purposes of immorality, or vice, or of defrauding creditors, or contravene some statute, or are contrary to public policy. In such case a court of equity will not give its aid in carrying them into execution.² (a)

The holder of certificates of such a "trust," which bind him to the terms of its formation, so far participates in its illegality that he cannot maintain a bill in equity against its trustees for an accounting. The Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, ch. 647 (26 Stat. at Large, 209), known as "The Sherman Anti-Trust Act," and entitled "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," has been held by the United States Supreme Court not to apply to a combination of corporations whose primary business is that of manufacturing rather than of selling, such a combination being regarded as within the police power of the States, and not as infringing upon interstate commerce. being, and twenty-one years and the period of gestation in addition. On the other hand, public trusts or charities, existing for the general and indefinite public, may continue for an indefinite period. It must be kept in mind, however, that this rule against perpetuities only applies to cases in which the power of alienation is suspended, and that the creation of a trust does not necessarily result in such suspension, for the trustee may have the right to alienate, and that the terms of the law are not everywhere the same. For example, in New York the ownership of personal property cannot be suspended for more than two lives, while the alienation of real estate may be suspended for two lives and a minority.

- § 24. Trusts are divided in reference to their creation into express trusts, implied trusts, resulting trusts, and constructive trusts.⁵ Express trusts are also called direct trusts. They are generally created by instruments that point out directly and expressly the property, persons, and purposes of the trust; hence they are called direct or express trusts in contradistinction from those trusts that are implied, presumed, or construed by law to arise out of the transactions of parties. They may be discretionary or imperative, absolute or on condition.⁶ As express trusts are directly declared by the parties, there can never be a controversy whether they exist or not. In such trusts these questions arise: Are they legal or illegal, and what is the construction of the various terms and provisions which they contain?
- § 25. Implied trusts are trusts that the courts imply from the words of an instrument, where no express trust is declared, but such words are used that the court infers or implies that it was the purpose or intention of the parties to create a trust.

- § 26. Resulting trusts are trusts that the courts presume to arise out of the transactions of parties, as if one man pays the purchase-money for an estate, and the deed is taken in the name of another. Courts presume that a trust is intended for the person who pays the money.
- § 27. A constructive trust is one that arises when a person, clothed with some fiduciary character, by fraud or otherwise gains some advantage to himself. Courts construe this to be an advantage for the cestui que trust or a constructive trust.

- § 28. It may be stated, as a general proposition, that every one competent to enter into a contract, or to make a will, or to deal with the legal title to property, may make such disposition of it as he pleases; and he may annex such conditions and limitations to the enjoyment of it as he sees fit; and he may vest it in trustees for the purpose of carrying out his intention. All persons, sui juris, have the same power to create trusts that they have to make a disposition of their property. A conveyance or disposition of property by persons not sui juris is valid to the extent of their legal capacity.
- § 29. The king may, by charter, grant his private property to one person upon trust for another. But the trust must appear upon the face of the patent, and cannot be proved by parol.² He can also by will in writing under the sign-manual bequeath his private personal property to trustees for the use of another.3 He may by warrant grant prizes taken in war to trustees, to be distributed among the captors,4 and by statute he is authorized to convey trust property which has escheated to the Crown to trustees to execute the trust.5

citizens, and they can convey their private property to trustees in the same manner as private individuals. The State itself by its legislation, or by its public officers duly authorized, can create a trust, convey property, and appoint trustees; ¹ and such trustees are equally amenable to the jurisdiction of chancery.² But a State cannot remove the trustees of a private corporation and appoint others in their stead.³

- § 31. All corporations, subject to the terms of the charters and laws under which they exist, may alienate their property; and their power to appoint trustees and to declare in what manner the property shall be enjoyed, is coextensive with the right of alienation.⁴
- § 32. By the civil law married women could alienate their property and dispose of it by will. By the common law they were almost wholly incapacitated from dealing with their estates. The tendency of modern legislation is to remove these disabilities, and to enable them to make contracts and wills, as if they were sole, in relation to property held by them in their own right. By joining their husbands in fines and recoveries in England,⁵ and in deeds in America executed according to the prescribed formalities, they can, as a general rule, convey their property to trustees.⁶ In those

States where a married woman can convey her real and personal property without joining her husband, she can convey it to trustees to such uses as she may appoint; and where statutes have given her a testamentary capacity, she can create trusts and appoint trustees by her will. A married woman is considered in all respects as a feme sole in regard to property settled to her separate use; 2 as if real estate is conveyed to a trustee and his heirs, or if personal estate is assigned to a trustee and his executors, for her sole and separate use, the absolute interest to be at her sole disposal, she has the entire control, and may exercise her ownership or implied power of appointment by creating a trust extending even beyond her coverture.3 If she is tenant for life, to her sole use, she can make a settlement of her life-estate. But if the power of anticipation is restrained, she can make no disposition except of the annual produce which has actually accrued or become due. A married woman will be treated as a feme sole only in regard to property settled upon her; and her power of disposing of property thus settled will be governed by a strict interpretation of the instrument of settlement. If the deed of settlement points out the manner in which she may dispose of her interest, she must follow that particular manner; as if the power is given her to convey or appoint by deed, she cannot convey or appoint by will; and if by will, she cannot convey by deed. If the instrument is silent as to her power to convey, she may devise the property by will.4 Savings by a wife out of an allowance made by her husband for her separate maintenance are treated in equity as her separate estate, which she may dispose of; 5 and so are the accumulations

§ 33. Infants can create trusts which are good until they are avoided.3 The tendency of modern decisions is to hold that the acts and contracts of infants are voidable only, and subject to their election when of age either to avoid or confirm them.4 Mr. Greenleaf says that "it may be safely stated as the result of the American authorities, that the act or contract of an infant is in no case to be held purely void, unless from its nature and solemnity, as well as from the operation of the instrument, it was manifestly and necessarily prejudicial to him. Wherever it may be for his benefit, it is at most but voidable; and if it be an act which it was either his duty 5 to do, or was manifestly for his benefit, it shall bind him."6 But a court of equity would not allow an equitable interest to be enforced against an infant to his prejudice, and would give him the same power of avoidance over the equitable, as over the legal estate. And if the infant died without having avoided the trust, the court will still investigate the transaction and see that no unfair advantage was taken.¹ But if the infant is still alive, no one but himself can object to his deed.²

§ 34. The effect of a marriage settlement by a female infant, by which her real and personal estate is conveyed to trustees, has been frequently mooted in courts. It has been decided that as infants may contract marriage, a settlement made by the consent of their parents and guardians in consideration of a marriage to be afterwards solemnized, should be binding, inasmuch as if the marriage afterwards takes place, the situation of the parties is altered, and the interests of third persons, or children born of the marriage, may be affected. Lord Macclesfield and Lord Hardwicke upon these considerations refused to disturb such settlements.3 But Lord Thurlow dissented from these opinions; 4 and the law is now settled, that a deed, executed by a female infant in consideration of marriage, does not bind her real estate, unless, having come of age, she assents to it after the death of her husband.⁵ There is no reason why the marriage settlement of a male infant should not be governed by the same rule, except that he could confirm the same after he became of age, and before the death of his wife. The settlement will bind the husband if he is of full age. 6 It has been settled, however, after considerable conflict, that a female infant may bar herself of dower and of a distributive share in her husband's estate, by accepting a jointure before marriage. And she may, before marriage, make a binding settlement of her personal estate, for such a settlement will be for her benefit, otherwise it would vest in the husband, and it would in effect be his settlement and not hers; but such settlement is not good of chattels that would not go to the husband. It is now settled in England by statute that a male infant over twenty years of age and a female over seventeen may make a valid marriage settlement of their real and personal estates, under the sanction of the Court of Chancery.

§ 35. It was a maxim of the common law, that no man of full age could be allowed to stultify himself; hence the acts, deeds, and feoffments of idiots and lunatics were held to be binding, and not voidable by the party himself, though they could be avoided by his heirs, executors, or administrators. This maxim never prevailed in the United States, and is not now the law of England. The conveyance of a lunatic is not, however, absolutely void, but only voidable by himself as well as by his friends and representatives. But after inquisition declaring him incompetent, all contracts made

It follows that a conveyance by a lunatic upon a trust will be good until it is avoided, and a court of equity would not set it aside, if it was fair and reasonable, and if the parties could not be restored to their original condition; nor would the court interfere against bona fide purchasers without notice of the lunacy.

- § 36. An alien may take real estate by devise or purchase, though he cannot take by operation of law, as by descent, or as tenant by curtesy. If an alien takes land by purchase, he may hold it until office found; and if he conveys it in trust or otherwise, his grantee will hold it until office found. An alien can therefore create a trust of real estate only until the State interposes. An alien may exercise all rights of ownership over personal property, consequently he can create a valid trust in it.⁴
- § 37. By the bankrupt law of England all the property which the bankrupt is entitled to up to the date of the certificate of his discharge vests in his assignees; ⁵ and he can create no trust in it, except in the surplus that may remain after the payment of all his debts. ⁶ Under the bankrupt laws of the United States and the insolvent laws of the various States, only the interests of the bankrupt existing at the date of the assignments vest in his assignees; ⁷ he may, therefore, create a valid trust in property acquired after the assignment and before the certificate.

II. Who may be a Trustee.

§ 38. It is a rule that admits of no exception, that equity never wants a trustee, or, in other words, that if a trust is once properly created, the incompetency, disability, death, or non-appointment of a trustee shall not defeat it. Thus, if property has been bequeathed in trust, and no trustee, or a trustee disabled from taking, or one who is dead, or refuses to take, is appointed, the court will decree the execution of the trust by the personal representatives, if it is personal property, and by the heirs or devisees, if it is real estate.2 Property once charged with a valid trust will be followed in equity into whosesoever hands it comes, and he will be charged with the execution of the trust, unless he is a purchaser for value, and without notice.3 The holder of the legal title and the absolute interest in property may convert himself into a trustee by making a valid declaration of trust upon good consideration; 4 or if he conveyed the property by some conveyance which was inoperative in law, equity would hold him to be a trustee; 5 as if a man convey property directly to his wife, a transaction inoperative in most of the States, equity would uphold the act, and decree the husband to be a trustee.¹

§ 39. It may be stated, in general terms, that whoever is capable of taking the legal title or beneficial interest in property, may take the same in trust for others.2 Whatever persons or corporations are capable of having the legal title or beneficial interest cast upon them by gift, grant, bequest, descent, or operation of law, may take the same subject to a trust, and they will become trustees. But it does not follow that whoever is capable of taking in trust, is capable of performing or executing it. The inquiry, then, is not so much who may take in trust, as it is who may execute and perform a trust. Sometimes the law provides against the appointment of non-residents as trustees.3 If a trust is cast upon a person incapable of taking and executing it, courts of equity will execute the trust by decree, or they will appoint some person capable of performing the requirements of the trust. Mr. Lewin says that "in general terms, a person to be appointed trustee should be a person capable of taking and holding the legal estate, and possessed of natural capacity and legal ability to execute the trust, and domiciled within the jurisdiction of the court." 4 Sir George J. Turner, L.J., laid down the general rules which govern courts in making appointments of trustees as follows:—

"First, the court will have regard to the wishes of the persons by whom the trust has been created, if expressed in the instrument creating the trust or clearly to be collected from it. I think this rule may be safely laid down, because if the author of the trust has in terms declared that a particular person, or a person filling a particular character, should not be trustee of the instrument, there cannot, as I apprehend, be the least doubt that the court would not appoint to the office a person whose appointment was so prohibited; and I do not think that upon a question of this description any distinction can be drawn between express declaration and demonstrated intention. The analogy of the course which the court pursues in the appointment of guardians affords, I think, some support to this rule. The court in those cases attends to the wishes of the parents, however informally they may be expressed.

"Another rule which may, I think, safely be laid down, is this, — that the court will not appoint a person to be trustee with a view to the interest of some of the persons interested under the trust, in opposition either to the wishes of the testator, or to the interests of other of the cestuis que trust. I think so for this reason, that it is of the essence of the duty of every trustee to hold an even hand between the parties interested in the trust. Every trustee is in duty bound to look after the interests of all, and not of any particular member or class of members of his cestuis que trust.

"A third rule which may be safely laid down is that the court, in appointing a trustee, will have regard to the question whether his appointment will promote or impede the execution of the trust; for the very purpose of the appointment is that the trust may be better carried into execution." 1

§ 40. The sovereign may sustain the character of a trustee. He has a legal capacity to take and hold the estate, and to execute the trust; ² but there is a difficulty in every country in executing the judgments and decrees of a court against the sovereign power of the country. In England, it is said that the Court of Chancery has no jurisdiction over the king's conscience, for the Lord Chancellor only exercises the equitable authority of the king himself in judging between his subjects. But the greater difficulty is in enforcing the decrees of a court against the sovereign power; for "the arms of equity are very short against the prerogative." 1 The subject may have a clear right, but no remedy either at law or equity against the Crown; in such case his only resource is an appeal to the king by a petition of right, and it cannot be supposed that he would be refused. The question is now of less importance; for by statute, if trust property vests in the Crown by escheat, the king is enabled to grant it to trustees for the purpose of executing the trust.2 And by an amendment it is further provided that property held in trust shall not escheat or be forfeited to the Crown by the failure or forfeiture of the trustee; 3 and it is still further provided, that in such cases trust property shall be under the control of the Court of Chancery for the use of the parties beneficially interested, and that new trustees shall be appointed.4 Under these statutes it is said that an equity will be enforced against the Crown.⁵ The only cases where the question is still open, whether a trust can be enforced against the Crown, is where the person of the sovereign takes by descent as heir, or by representation, or where he may have held as trustee previously to his acquiring the crown, or where a grant or bequest is made to him as a trustee.6

pose. 1(a) But a court cannot execute its judgments and decrees against a sovereign State with any more effect than the courts of England can enforce their orders against the king. The arms of equity in America are as short against the sovereign power as they are in England against the prerogative. Mr. Justice Gray has clearly shown that a State cannot be sued in law or equity against its consent, or unless there is some general or special statute authorizing the suit. A subject may have a clear right, but no remedy; in such case he must petition the legislative power, and there is no reason to suppose that his right would be refused. If a State accepts a trust by grant or bequest, it must act through its legislative powers in administering the trust, or in creating and appointing agents or officers to perform the duties which it assumes; as the United States acted in relation to the bequest of James Smithson in trust for the establishment of the Smithsonian Institution for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men.3 A limitation over of a charitable devise to the States of Maryland and Louisiana in case of forfeiture by the first takers was held not to vitiate the bequest.4

§ 42. It was formerly laid down that corporations could not be seized of lands to the use of another, and could not be trustees. The reason assigned for this rule was that no trust or confidence could be reposed in them; that they could not be compelled to execute a use or perform a trust, for courts of equity, in decreeing the execution of a trust, lay hold upon the conscience; 2 and it is impossible to attach any demand upon the conscience of a body so artificially created that it cannot in the nature of things have a conscience. Again, it was said that they could not be imprisoned if they refuse to obey the decrees of the court. But the technical rules upon which it was held that corporations could not be trustees have ceased to operate; and at the present day corporations of every description may take and hold estates, as trustees, for purposes not foreign to the purposes of their own existence; and they may be compelled by courts of equity to carry the trusts into execution.3 If they misapply the trust fund, or refuse to obey the decrees of the court, the proper remedy is by distringas, sequestration, or injunction, or by removal and appointment of new trustees.4

§ 43. It must be understood, however, that corporations are the creatures of the law, and that as a general rule they cannot exercise powers not given to them by their charters or acts of incorporation.⁵ For this reason they cannot act as trustees in a matter in which they have no interest, or in a matter that is inconsistent with, or repugnant to, the purposes for which they were created.1 Nor can they act as trustees if they are forbidden to take and hold lands, as by the statutes of mortmain, nor if they are not empowered to take the property. But if the trusts are within the general scope of the purposes of the institution of the corporation, or if they are collateral to its general purposes, but germane to them, as if the trusts relate to matters which will promote and aid the general purposes of the corporation, it may take and hold, and be compelled to execute them,2 if it accepts them. Thus towns, cities, and parishes may take and hold property in trust for the establishment of colleges,3 for the purpose of educating the poor,4 for the relief of the poor, though not paupers, by furnishing them fuel at a low price,5 and for the support of schools,6 or for any educational or charitable purposes within the scope of its charter.7 So also overseers of the poor, supervisors of a county,8 commissioners of roads in South Carolina, trustees of the poor in Mississippi, and also trustees of the school fund, 10 are corporations sub modo; and they may take and execute trusts within the scope of their official duties (a).

maintain a hospital, and if this could not be done legally, they were to apply for an act of incorporation, and at all events the estate should be held by an heir charged with the trusts, it was held that the designation of the trustees by their official character was equivalent to naming them by their proper names; that the trust was not to be executed by them in their official character, but in their private and individual capacity; and that if the trust had been to the officers named and their successors to execute, and no other provisions had been made, it would have fallen within the case of Baptist Association v. Hart's Executors, and would have been void. It was further held that it was a good executory devise to a corporation to be created in future, and in the mean time that the estates in the hands of the heir would be held charged with the trusts.1 A bequest to the chancellor of the Exchequer for the time being for the benefit of Great Britain was held good; 2 and the Governor-General of India may take in trust for the benefit of the city of Decca.3 Where a British subject bequeathed funds to the President and Vice-President of the United States and the Governor of Pennsylvania for the time being, to establish a college in the State of Pennsylvania, and directed that moral philosophy should be taught, and that a professor should inculcate the rights of the black people of every clime, until they were restored to an equality of rights throughout the Union, the Court of Chancery directed an inquiry to be made whether the President, Vice-President, and Governor would accept the trust, and it appearing that they declined to act, it was held that the trust failed; and as it could not be carried into effect, ey pres, in a foreign country, that the gift fell into the residue.4 A bank comptroller is a trustee of the various securities held by him for the several banks; but the State itself is not liable as a trustee for his acts.5

§ 48. Married women may become trustees by deed, gift, bequest, appointment, or by operation of law. If an estate comes to a married woman in any way, charged with a trust, her coverture cannot be pleaded in bar of the trust; 2 and a court of equity will enforce its execution; as when the legal title to land in trust was cast by descent upon a married woman, and the law required that a deed executed by her should be acknowledged, as executed voluntarily, and she refused so to acknowledge it, the court compelled her by decree.3 But specific performance will not be enforced against a feme covert trustee for sale upon her contract as trustee to convey.4 There is no less judgment and discretion in a woman after marriage than before. Sir John Trevor thought she rather improved by her husband's teaching.5 The reasons for her disabilities are founded upon her own interests, or her husband's, or both; 6 or rather upon the broader policy of the law which, for the purpose of domestic peace and happiness, merges the proprietary interests of the wife during coverture in her husband, and will not permit her to hold interests separate from, and independent of, and possibly antagonistic to him. The policy of the law has, however, been very much modified by legislation in later years. But where such interests are not concerned, she possesses the same legal capacity as if she were sui juris. Thus, she may execute any kind of power, whether simply collateral, appendant, or in gross; and it is immaterial whether it is given to her while sole or married.7

- § 49. In equity, the absolute interest in the trust fund is vested in the cestui que trust, the trustee is a mere instrument, and any power or authority in the trustee must have the character of a power simply collateral; ¹ therefore there is nothing, as respects legal capacity, to prevent a married woman from administering a discretionary trust.² But she cannot create a trust in her absolute property except by joining her husband in conveying it, or in executing a declaration of trust.³
- § 50. At the same time a husband must always have a large influence over a feme covert trustee; indeed, as he would be answerable for her acts, and liable for her breaches of trust, he must, for his own protection, look to the manner in which she administers the fund; and she must join her husband in suits in relation to the trust property.4 Again, if land is conveyed to a married woman upon a declared trust without powers of sale, and it becomes necessary to sell and convey the land, is the husband to join or not in the conveyance; and to whom is the purchase-money to be paid, and upon whose receipt ?5 Mr. Lewin thinks that the joint receipt of the husband and wife should be taken; but that the safest way would be to pay the money into some bank upon their joint receipt, to remain until wanted for the purposes of the trust, and that if the husband took it out for any other purpose, he would be liable as for a breach of trust.⁶ Another inconvenience arises in probate and other trusts, where the trustee may be required to give bonds for the faithful administration of the trust. A court of equity may require the trustee to give security for the property, even though the trust arises by operation of

- law. A married woman can enter into contracts only in relation to her sole and separate estate; and how far she can bind herself, or her estate, by a bond to execute a trust in property, the beneficial interests in which belong to another, would always be a perplexing question, although the sureties in such a bond might be liable.
- § 51. Subject to these inconveniences, a married woman can always be a trustee; and she may even be a trustee for her husband,² (a) as well as her husband for her,³ and courts will find means to enforce the trusts; but they will not appoint married women to such offices, nor will they appoint them to be guardians of minors; ⁴ a woman, on the contrary, will be removed from the office if she is appointed while sole and afterwards marries.⁵ For the same reason it is undesirable to appoint a feme sole trustee; for should she marry, her husband, being liable for her breaches of trust, ought to have control of her acts, and the character of the trust is changed. On these grounds the courts at one time refused to appoint a feme sole trustee; ⁶ but it is a matter of sound discretion in the court, and in a more recent case a feme sole was appointed.⁷

§ 52. Infants labor under still greater disabilities than married women, for a married woman has judgment, discretion, and capacity, though she cannot in all cases freely exercise them; but an infant wants judgment and capacity.1 From this want of judgment and capacity an infant can do nothing that requires the exercise of discretion. It is true that his acts are voidable only and not void; 2 but every act, not simply ministerial, is at least voidable; but where he signs an acquittance without receipt of the money, it is an exercise of discretion, and is actually void.3 An infant is capable of executing a naked power unaccompanied with any interest, or not requiring any discretion.4 If a power is given to an infant relating to his own estate, it must be inserted in the deed that he may execute it during his infancy, or his execution of it will have no effect.5 As was shown before, trustees generally exercise powers over the trust fund simply collateral; 6 but if the exercise of these powers requires the application of any prudence or discretion, an infant is incapable of executing them.7 (a)

Long, 90 Tenn. 445; Simmons v. Baynard, 30 F. R. 532. In Mellor v. Porter, 25 Ch. D. 158, upon a review of the authorities, it was held that a direction to convey when the infant is twenty-one years of age would not warrant declaring him a trustee before that age; and in the case of an equitable mortgage, the following form of direction in the decree - that "the infant defendants upon their attaining twenty-one execute a proper conveyance to the plaintiffs to be settled by the Judge in case the parties differ," and giving them a day to show cause—was approved. The infant himself should be made a party to a bill affecting his title to real estate. Tucker v. Bean, 65 Maine, 352; Wakefield v. Marr, id. 341.

the trust by himself or guardian, or would remove him and appoint some one competent to act. So an estate charged with a trust may be cast upon an infant by descent, or by operation of law; as where a father bought and paid for land, but took the conveyance in the name of a son five years old, the court held that the land in the hands of the son was charged with a resulting trust for the father. In another case, where the father had purchased land in the name of an infant son, it was presumed to have been an advancement, rather than to make the infant a trustee. From the great inconvenience attending the appointment of an infant as trustee, a strong presumption arises that property conveyed to an infant is intended for his benefit, as an advancement or otherwise, and the court will not infer an intention that he is to take it in trust, unless it distinctly appears.

But an alien cannot plead his alienage to defeat any trust that may be charged upon the lands that come to him, nor in bar of any contract made by him in relation to the purchase of lands. If lands in the hands of an alien charged with a trust escheat to the State, the State as a general rule takes only the title that the alien had; and there are statutes in many States that provide for carrying the trust into execution. It has been held that an alien may be a corporator and trustee for a corporation; and that if an alien trustee sold and conveyed the trust estate, equity would not set the sale aside.3 As to personal property aliens have the same rights and privileges as citizens, and they can execute trusts of personal chattels to the same extent as citizens. An alien may take a mortgage of land as security for debt, and he may have a decree of foreclosure or sale of the land for the payment of the debt.4 But if the alien is domiciled abroad, it is an objection to his fitness for the office, as he is not within the jurisdiction of the court. 5 (a)

Cestuis que trust are not incapable of taking in trust for themselves and others, but they are not altogether fit persons to be appointed, by reason of a possible conflict between their duty and interest. But if the trustee is to do anything with the land, that is, if the trust is executory, the court will do nothing to transfer the right of the alien to the State. As where a testator directed lands to be sold and the proceeds divided among certain persons, some of whom were aliens, the court considered that as done at the time of the death which was ordered to be done, and that it was a devise of mere personalty, and it refused to allow the Crown to elect to keep the funds in land in order to work a forfeiture. 1 So where an agent to collect a debt for an alien took a deed of real estate in trust to sell and pay the proceeds to the alien creditor, the heirs of the agent were ordered, having sold the land, to pay the proceeds to the principal.2 But where an alien paid the money for lands, and took the deed in the name of a citizen as trustee, the trustee was adjudged to hold the land in trust for the commonwealth.3 Equity will not raise a resulting trust in favor of an alien.4 Nor will it allow a legacy given to an alien to be charged upon real estate, 5 nor lands liable to escheat to be sold for the payment of debts in order that aliens may take their legacies out of the personalty.6 Aliens may be the cestuis que trust of personal property without objection; 7 and trustees for aliens, and alien cestuis que trust may maintain actions in our courts to maintain their rights in the trust property.8

- § 65. There is another class of cases that illustrates the principle that the beneficial done of property cannot take as cestuis que trust, if he is prohibited from taking the legal title to that property; as where a slave is prohibited from holding property, he cannot be made a cestui que trust of property. 1 In Virginia, a free negro was prohibited from holding slaves, and it was held that he could not be a cestui que trust of slaves.² So where emancipation was forbidden, a slave could not be the cestui que trust of his own freedom.3 But in Mississippi it was held that land purchased with money furnished by a slave with the acquiescence of her master, and the title taken in the name of a freeman, was held in trust for the slave after her actual emancipation by living in Ohio, and that the trust could be enforced against all persons who took the land with notice of the facts. 4 So where an individual took stock in trust for a corporation that had no right to hold shares in another corporation, it was held that such shares did not go to the assignees upon the bankruptcy of the individual, but that they must be disposed of as the corporation, as cestui que trust, should direct.5

§ 66. But in charitable trusts the cestuis que trust are not, and need not be, capable of taking the legal title, as when property is given in trust for the poor of a parish, or for the education of youth, or for pious uses, or for any charitable purpose, the beneficiaries are generally unknown, uncertain, changing, and incapable of taking or dealing with the legal title; but such trusts are valid in equity, and courts of equity will administer them and protect the rights of the cestuis que trust.⁶ And in trusts not charitable it is not always necessary that the cestui que trust should be in existence at the time of the creation of the trust; as a devise to a father in trust for accumulation for his children lawfully begotten at the time of his death was held to be good,

although the father had no children at the time of the vesting of the funds in him as trustee. 1 So an illegitimate child born, or in ventre sa mère, may be a cestui que trust (a); 2 but a trust for illegitimate children to be thereafter begotten will not be enforced, as being against good morals. 8 Nor will a court of equity establish or execute a trust that is founded upon a consideration that is fraudulent, or malum in se, or malum prohibitum, or immoral, or corrupt, or contrary to public policy.4 But a trust not charitable created in præsenti for cestuis que trust does not take effect until the cestuis que trust are identified; as where land was conveved under articles of agreement in trust for the subscribers thereto, the title of the grantor was not divested until there were subscribers.⁵ In some cases a person is capable of taking an equitable interest, in a manner in which the legal interest could not be limited. Thus at law no property can be so limited to a married woman as to exclude the legal

Every kind of vested right which the law recognizes as valuable may be transferred in trust, as a receipt for a medicine, the copyright of a book, a patent right, (a) a trade secret, or growing crops.
- § 68. At common law no possibility, right, title, nor chose in action could be granted or assigned to strangers. But in equity the rule is different, and choses in action, expectancies, 10 contingent interests, 11 and even possibilities 12 may be assigned, and a valid trust created in them. Equitable reversionary interests stand upon the same ground. Property not owned by the assignor at the time, and not even in esse, may be assigned in equity; 2 and a valid trust may be created in a naked power or authority. 3

§ 69. But there are some choses in action, rights, claims, and interests that cannot be assigned in equity; either because some statute prohibits, or because it is against public policy to allow assignments of them to strangers. Thus an officer in the army cannot assign or pledge his commission, nor his full or half pay. A judge cannot assign his salary; nor can a pension given for the honorable support of the dignity of a title be assigned. The principle seems to be that when a salary, annuity, or pension is given by the State for the support of its own dignity and the administration of its affairs, it is not becoming that its officers should deprive themselves of the means of support which it gives to them; but a pension or annuity for past services may be assigned. The mere right to file a bill in equity for a fraud committed upon the assignor, or to sue for a tort, cannot be assigned and a trust created in such rights. A mere naked expectancy arising from a peculiar position, such a position as that a person expects to make a favorable bargain and purchase (and he employs an agent to negotiate the purchase, and such agent purchases for another), is not such property that a trust can be created in it. 3

§ 70. The question has been frequently mooted in courts, how far a trust could be engrafted and enforced upon foreign property, or property beyond the limits of the jurisdiction of the court where the suit is pending. In regard to personal property there is no difficulty, for it follows the person; and if the court has jurisdiction over the parties, it has jurisdiction over the subject-matter, and can enforce a trust or any other equity. If the personal property is, however, in fact beyond the jurisdiction of the court, there may arise some practical obstructions to the execution of the decrees of the court. Where the trust is created by a judicial decree in another State, as by probate of a will in New York State, the trustee is accountable in the courts of that State; and where the will has not been proved or recorded in the State of the former, nor any letters testamentary or of administration or trusteeship have been issued there, the trustee cannot be compelled to execute the trust, though residing in the State of the former; such is the settled law of Massachusetts. Such a case differs entirely from one in which the trust is created by instrument inter partes without judicial decree.²

in case of fraud, of trust, or of contract, the jurisdiction of a Court of Chancery is sustainable wherever the person be found, although lands not within the jurisdiction of that court may be affected by the decree." 1 But if the person is not within the jurisdiction of the court, and the land is, the court cannot decree a specific performance of an agreement for a sale.2 If a trust is created by the will of a citizen of a particular State, and his will is allowed by the Probate Court of that State, and a trustee is appointed by the Probate Court, courts of equity will have jurisdiction over the trust, although both the trustee and the property are beyond the jurisdiction of the court. Chief-Justice Bigelow, in determining this point, said: "The residence of the trustee and cestui que trust out of the commonwealth does not take away the power of this court to regulate and control the proper administration of trust estates which are created by wills of citizens of this State, and which have been proved and established by the courts of this commonwealth. The legal existence of the trust takes effect and validity from the proof of the will, and the right of the trustee to receive the trust fund is derived from the decree of the Probate Court. If the trustee is unfaithful or abuses his trust, that court has jurisdiction to remove him in concurrence with this court on the application of those beneficially interested in the estate."3 And where A. had fraudulently obtained a deed of land, in a foreign State, from B., and had conveyed it to C. without consideration, it was held that although the courts of other States would not declare such deeds to be nullities, yet they would order reconveyances from the parties before the court; and if such parties went beyond the jurisdiction, the court could appoint special commissioners to execute such reconveyances. And so trustees to whom property has been conveyed by the owner by a direct conveyance can sue in any and all courts which have jurisdiction over the parties or the subject-matter of the suit; but if the trustee depends upon some court to clothe him with the office and title of trustee, he, like an administrator or executor, can only sue within the country or State over which the jurisdiction of the court appointing him extends. 2

§ 72. The foundation of this doctrine is the jurisdiction of the court over the person, which was originally the only jurisdiction of courts of equity. They cannot, when the property is in a foreign jurisdiction, make a decree in rem, binding upon the land; but they can enter a decree in personam and compel its performance by process in contempt; hence if the parties are not before the court, or the court has no jurisdiction over them, the specific performance of a contract cannot be decreed; and if the court cannot give relief by a decree against the person, but must go further and make a decree to be executed by its own officers against the land, it must, of course, if the land is beyond its jurisdiction, refuse to act. (a) It is not necessary that the person to be bound by a decree should be domiciled within the jurisdiction of the court. It will be sufficient if the person is found and served with process within the jurisdiction, and a ne exeat may be obtained to prevent his departing until the decree of the court is performed; or if a person is prosecuting a suit at law within a jurisdiction, a suit in equity may be maintained, and an injunction may be decreed against him, and service on his attorney in the suit at law would be a good service to bring him within the jurisdiction. So if courts of equity have jurisdiction over the parties to a controversy, they can enjoin them from proceeding in the courts of foreign States or countries. This power does not depend upon any superintending power of the courts

As to conflict of laws in regard to trusts, it is now considered imperative, as to real estate, that jurisdiction of the res shall be sufficient to enable adequate relief to be given in all matters where equitable interests have attached, care being taken that absent parties have notice and ample opportunity to protect their rights, while trusts in personal property are to be determined by the

of one country over those of another, which does not exist; but it is founded wholly upon the power which courts of equity have over all litigants within its actual jurisdiction. This jurisdiction is in personam, and the decrees are directed against the persons or parties. If the decree should be disregarded, and a litigant should prosecute a suit in a foreign tribunal, no action could be taken against the agents, officers, or judges of such foreign tribunal, but the remedy would be confined to proceeding against the party who has proceeded in contempt of the injunction. There is, however, an exception to this practice in the case of the courts of the several States and of the courts of the United States. These courts have concurrent jurisdiction over many causes; and to prevent unpleasant conflicts of jurisdiction, it has been held, upon grounds of public policy, that they have no power to restrain or enjoin suitors from pursuing their rights in the courts of their choice, whether of the State or of the United States.2

§ 111 a. New York Statute Law.

§ 73. HAVING considered who may be the parties to a trust, and what may be the subject-matter of it, it is now to be considered in what manner a trust may be created, or how it may arise. Trusts are divided in this respect into direct or express trusts, implied, resulting, and constructive trusts. Direct or express trusts are created by the direct or express words of a grantor or settlor. Implied, resulting, and constructive trusts arise by operation of law upon the transactions of the parties, and they will be hereafter discussed. This chapter will treat of the creation of direct or express trusts. In this connection it will be necessary to inquire: (1) how trusts were created in lands at common law prior to the statutes of frauds and of wills; (2) how trusts are created in lands since the statutes; (3) how trusts may be created in personal property; and (4) the effect of a voluntary conveyance or declaration of trust.

§ 74. At common law a deed in writing was not necessary to transfer land. What was called a feoffment was the common and earliest mode of conveyance. The feoffment was a short and simple charter, and was accompanied by livery of seizin; the feoffor went upon the land in the presence of the freeholders of the neighborhood with the charter, and made a manual delivery to the feoffee of some symbolical thing in the name of delivering seizin, or ownership and possession of all the lands named in the charter. But not even this deed or charter was necessary. The land could be conveyed by mere livery of seizin in the presence of the freeholders of the neighborhood, who might be called upon to witness the act. The feoffment and livery of seizin operated upon and transferred the possession, and it barred the feoffor from all future right or possibility of right in the land, and vested an estate in freehold in the feoffee.

§ 75. It has been a mooted question whether at common law uses could be raised by parol, or even by deed without seal, upon a conveyance of lands.² But there seems to be no good reason for the doubt. As the estate itself could be transferred without writing, it would seem to follow that uses declared at the time in the presence of witnesses might be effectually established. Mr. Sanders says that in their commencement uses were of a secret nature, and were usually created by a parol declaration.³ Mr. Lewin says that trusts like uses are in their own nature averrable, i. e., may be declared by word of mouth without writing, in the absence of a statute requiring it; as if an estate had been conveyed unto and to the use of A. and his heirs, a trust might have been raised by parol in favor of B.4 Lord Chief-Baron Gilbert reconciled most of the conflicting cases by stating the law thus: "At common law a use might have been raised by words upon a conveyance that passed the possession by some solemn act, as a feoffment; but where there was no such act, then it seems a deed declaratory of the use was necessary; for as a feoffment might be made at common law by parol, so might the uses be declared by parol. But where a deed was necessary for passing the estate itself, it was also requisite for the declaration of the uses. Thus a man could not covenant to stand seized to uses without a deed; but a bargain and sale by parol has raised a use without." 1 Lord Thurlow observed that "he had been accustomed to consider uses as averrable; but perhaps when looked into, the cases may relate to feoffment. and not to conveyances by bargain and sale or lease and release." 2 And Duke says expressly, "that when the things given may pass without deed, then a charitable use may be averred by witnesses; but where the things cannot pass without deed, there charitable uses cannot be averred without a deed proving the uses."3 This question is almost purely speculative in the United States, where the statute of frauds is perhaps universally adopted, and all conveyances of land and of interests in land must be by deed acknowledged and recorded; but it may arise when questions arise upon transactions prior to the passage of the statute, as it arose in Ohio upon a conveyance before 1810, the time when the statute of frauds was adopted in that State; and it was determined that a trust in land could be created, at common law, by parol,4 and as the seventh, eighth, and ninth sections were omitted from the Ohio statute, a trust in real estate may still be created by parol. The same question arose in Connecticut, and it was denied that at common law a trust in lands could be raised by parol. The court said that the rules of evidence as well as the statute prevented it.6 In some other States the statute, or at least the seventh section of the statute, has not been adopted; and in those States it has been determined that trusts in land can be proved by parol, as in Texas,7 North Carolina,8 Tennessee, and Virginia. In Pennsylvania, under the act of 1799, it was determined that trusts in land might be created by parol. The statute was amended, however, in 1851. In Kentucky, the seventh section was omitted; but the courts treat all parol agreements that would create a trust as agreements for the sale or purchase of some interest in land, and therefore void as within the fourth section of the statute. In nearly all the other States the statute of frauds was substantially re-enacted at an early day in its full extent, and in those States it has not since been an open question whether parol trusts could be created.

- § 76. It must also be observed that if a trust is declared in writing, courts never permit parol proof of a trust to contradict an intention expressed upon the face of the instrument itself, 7 for that would be to allow parol evidence to vary, contradict, or annul a written instrument; nor is it necessary, in order to exclude evidence, that the beneficial estate should be expressly conferred upon the grantee of the legal estate, for a trust cannot be raised by parol if, from the nature of the instrument or from any circumstance of evidence appearing upon the face of it, an intention can be clearly implied of making the holder of the legal estate also the holder of the beneficial estate. Thus a trust cannot be proved by parol where a valuable consideration was paid from the grantor's own money.2 Oral proof cannot be heard, to engraft an express trust on a conveyance absolute in its terms. 3 (a) Nor will subsequent declarations of the grantor, oral or written, avail for this purpose.4 To establish by parol that the grantee in an absolute deed is a trustee, it must be shown that the whole or a part of the purchasemoney was not his, or that fraud, artifice, solicitation, or persuasion entered into the inducements for executing the deed. A mere breach of a parol agreement is not enough to create a trust. A parol trust is not, however, an absolute nullity in any case, but rests in the election of the trustee in those cases where the cestui cannot enforce it. The courts will protect the trustee in the execution of the trust if he chooses so to do, and as far as possible will protect the beneficiaries in the enjoyment of the fruits of its execution.2 But where A. agreed to purchase land for B., and purchased it and took an absolute title to himself, it was held that B., not being privy to the deed, was not bound by it, and might prove a trust by parol.3 And where one holds lands in secret trust to defraud creditors, a subsequent parol agreement by which the land is to be held in trust for the creditors, &c., will be good.4

§ 77. If a trust is once effectually created by parol, it cannot subsequently be revoked or altered by the party creating it, for it is governed by the same rules that govern trusts created by writing.⁵ And if a parol trust has been executed it cannot be revoked, and if money has been paid upon it, it cannot be recovered back.⁶ The declarations of the grantor, to create a trust, must be prior to, or contemporaneous with, the conveyance, for it would be against reason and the rules of evidence to allow a man who has parted with all interest in an estate to charge it with any trust or incumbrance after such conveyance; 1 (a) nor can the cestui que trust give his own declarations in evidence to create a trust in his favor; but where parties may be witnesses, he can testify to the facts like any other witness; and if the circumstances are such as to raise a resulting or implied trust upon the conveyance, the person entitled to such beneficial interest has the right at any time to declare the trust.2 The declarations of a trustee can be given in evidence to show how he held the estate; 3 that is, in those States where the trust may be proved by parol. But these declarations must be clear and explicit, and point out with certainty both the subject-matter of the trust and the person who is to take the beneficial interest. Casual and indefinite expressions of mere inchoate intentions, not carried into effect, are insufficient to raise a trust.4 If a pension from the government is granted to A., a trust cannot be raised by parol in favor of B., for a pension is conferred as an honor, and is founded upon the personal services and merits of the annuitant.5

In Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, Missouri, New Jersey, and South Carolina, the statute of Charles is re-enacted, almost in words, and the trust or confidence must be "manifested or proved by some writing signed by the party."

In Alabama, California, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, and Wisconsin, "the trust must be created or declared by instrument in writing signed by the party creating or declaring the same."

In New York, the seventh section was re-enacted; but in the revised statutes it was enacted "that the trust should be created or declared by deed or conveyance in writing," signed, etc.; but in 1860 it was enacted "that any writing signed by the parties" should be sufficient.

In Pennsylvania, the seventh section was not enacted, and trusts could be created and proved by parol; but in 1856 the seventh section was substantially enacted.

In Texas, North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, Connecticut, Delaware, Kentucky, Indiana, and Ohio, the seventh section does not seem to be reenacted. See ante, § 75.

In Iowa, declarations and creations of trust or powers in relation to real estate must be executed in the same manner as deeds of conveyance.

The ninth section seems to be in force in all the States.

estate parol proof is insufficient. They must be manifested or proved by some writing, signed by the party to be charged with the trust. They need not be created and declared in writing, but only manifested or proved by writing; for if there be written evidence of the existence of the trust, the danger of parol evidence, against which the statute was directed, is effectually removed.2 It may be questioned whether it was not the intention of the statute that the creation or declaration itself should be in writing; for the ninth section enacts that "all grants and assignments of any trust or confidence shall likewise be in writing, signed by the party granting or assigning the same, or by his last will or devise;" but whatever may have been the actual intention of the legislature, the construction put upon the clause is now firmly established.3 A mere admission in writing that parol promises to hold the land in trust were made at the time of the conveyance is not enough to give life to the trust.4

It is to be remembered, however, that in suits to enforce contracts, correct mistakes, and punish or prevent frauds, it may be necessary to show incidentally an express trust by parol. Id. 592. And so a parol trust may be proved in order to show that the apparent owner has no interest in the land which equity will subject to the lien of a judgment. Hays v. Reger, 102 Ind. 524.

It is well established that the interest of the cestui que trust in land cannot be conveyed by parol.¹

§ 80. In many of the United States the words of the seventh section are replaced by words to the effect that "the trust must be created or declared by an instrument in writing signed by the party;" ² (a) and the question has arisen whether this is a change of the law as established under the words of the original statute of frauds.

§ 81. The question has not been directly adjudged in a reported case raising the exact point; but it has arisen incidentally before the courts, and the intimations are that these words do not change the law, and that "created and declared" are equivalent to "manifested and proved." In practice, the great majority of trusts are not created by a deed or conveyance of land, but they arise from the transactions and agreements of parties; and if these transactions or agreements are evidenced in writing, the trust is sufficiently created, declared, manifested, or proved. Thus Mr. Justice Bennett, in Vermont, where the words are "created and declared by instrument," said, that "our statute is the same in effect as the English statute." 3 And Mr. Justice Story said, that "in his opinion, there was no substantial difference between the Massachusetts statute of frauds" (which is in substance the same as the statute of Vermont) "and the statute of 29 Car. II. c. 3; and such is the conclusion to which I have arrived upon an examination of these statutes." 4 And in Wisconsin, where the statute is the same as the statutes of Massachusetts and Vermont, it was held that an express trust need not be declared in express terms; that it is sufficiently declared or created if shown by any proper written evidence, such as an answer to a bill in equity, note, letter, or memorandum, disclosing facts which create a fiduciary relation. In New York, the words of the statute were that "the trust should be created or declared by deed or conveyance in writing." In relation to this Mr. Justice Strong said, that "the definition of the term conveyance given in the Revised Statutes 2 comprehends a declaration of trust, although not under seal, as it is an instrument by which the title to such estate may be affected in law or equity." 3 In another case, Chief-Justice Ruggles said: "The statute prescribes no particular form by which the trust is to be created or declared. Under our former statute, in relation to this subject, it was only necessary that the trust should be manifested in writing, and therefore letters from the trustee disclosing the trust were sufficient; such is the law of England.4 Our present statute requires that the trust should be created or declared by deed or conveyance in writing, subscribed by the party creating or declaring the trust; but it need not be done in the form of a grant. A declaration of trust is not a grant. It may be contained in the reciting part of a conveyance. Such a recital in an indenture is a solemn declaration of the existence of the facts recited; and if the trustee and the cestui que trust are parties to the conveyance, the trust is as well and effectually declared in that form as in any other." 6 (a) Upon sound reason, then, and upon the decided cases, it would seem that the peculiar form of words in some of the statutes of the American States has not altered the general rule, as established under the English statute; and that the same evidence would be generally received in the United States to establish a trust, as in England.7

§ 82. There is no particular formality required or necessary in the creation of a trust.1 All that is required is written evidence supplying every essential detail of the trust.2 In New York, a trust is valid if the intention is clear to create a trust to accomplish one of the purposes named in the statute,3 whether it is stated in the precise words of the statute or not.4 But trusts not authorized by the statute are void. A sealed paper, delivered with the deed and mentioned in the deed as part of it, is a part of it, even though the instructions were that the sealed document should not be opened until after the death of the grantor.6 Any agreement or contract in writing, made by a person having the power of disposal over property, whereby such person agrees or directs that a particular parcel of property or a certain fund shall be held or dealt with in a particular manner for the benefit of another, in a court of equity raises a trust in favor of such other person against the person making such agreement, or any other person claiming under him voluntarily or with notice; (a) and the statute of frauds

486. Mr. Browne, in his able treatise upon the Statute of Frauds, cites the case of Jaques v. Hall, where the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, notwithstanding the words of the Massachusetts statute, considered an entry in a private memorandum book of the trustee, setting forth clearly a previous transaction by which he had become trustee, as a satisfactory declaration of trust. There was other evidence; and, as the case is not put upon this ground, in the printed report, 3 Gray, 194, the court probably chose to rest the decision upon other grounds. In Titcomb v. Morrill, 10 Allen, 15, Mr. Justice Chapman said it was not necessary to decide the question. See Browne on Statute of Frauds, § 104, 1st ed.

was used in good faith in the lease as the trustee of B., it was held that the assignces of A. took nothing in the property. 1 But it must clearly appear that the parties intended a trust by the transaction, and parol evidence is competent to explain receipts and other papers connected with the case which may be explained by parol in other cases.2 A mere declaration of motive, as a grant to A. in order that he may maintain his children, will not create a trust; 3 nor will a mere request of an owner to his heirs to convey land to a person named in the letter expressing his wish.4 In case of a deposit in bank in trust for another there must be an intent to pass the beneficial interest during the life of the donor, and not merely a testamentary intent that the person named as cestui shall have the money at the decease of the donor, who retains complete control of the fund during his life.5 The general rule is that a deposit of money in the name of the depositor, in trust for another, transfers the title to the latter.6 Where a savings-bank depositor "in trust" kept the book, but before his death told the beneficiary in substance, "That money I put in the savings bank for you, is yours," a finding that there was a perfected gift was justified.7 The question is, Do the facts show

§ 83. The same principles of construction apply to trusts proved by this description of evidence as in other cases; and the objects and nature of the trust must always appear from such writings with sufficient certainty, and also their connection with the subject-matter of the trust. Indeed, courts require demonstration on the latter point; and the trust will not be executed if the precise nature of it, and the particular persons who are to take as cestuis que trust, and the proportions in which they are to take, cannot be ascertained.2 When all these particulars properly appear from writings signed by the party, the trust will be executed; but if the terms of the trust are collected from several papers, it is not necessary that all of them should be signed, provided they are so referred to and connected with the paper that is signed that they may be identified and read as genuine papers, and a part of the transaction. 3 (a) Nor need there

The party whose signature is essential is the party who by law is enabled to declare the trust; and it has been decided, that, whether the property is real or personal, the party enabled to declare the trust is the owner of the beneficial interest, who has therefore the absolute control over the property, the holder of the legal estate being a mere instrument or conduit pipe for him.² But if there is an absolute conveyance of the legal title to a supposed trustee, and there is no declaration of a trust prior to or at the time of the conveyance by the grantor, and the cestui que trust attempts to charge the grantee with a trust in respect to the land, he must produce some writing signed by the grantee of the legal title in order to charge him with the trust.3 (a) It is only when there is no dispute concerning the existence of a trust, or when the trust arises by operation of law as a resulting or implied trust, that the cestui que trust himself can declare its terms.¹

§ 84. It remains to consider when and how far trusts may be declared or proved by the answers of parties in chancery. It has been decided that a defendant is bound to answer to a bill suggesting a parol trust, and that a general demurrer 2 would be overruled; but perhaps this doctrine is confined to parol trusts that arise from fraud, accident, or mistake: for in the case of express trusts, if it can be gathered from the bill that the plaintiff relies upon parol evidence alone, with no circumstances to take it out of the statute, it has been held that the defendant may demur.3 But the general rule is that if a trust is alleged in a bill it will be presumed to be legally created, i. e., in writing, unless the contrary appears; therefore it must clearly appear from the bill that the alleged trust rests in parol only, or the demurrer will be overruled.4 It has also been decided, that if the bill simply omits to state that the trust is in writing, a demurrer will be overruled; for, as the statute only requires that it should be proved, not created, by writing, the writing is no part of the trust, but only evidence of the trust to be adduced at the hearing.⁵ In all cases, however, the defendant may answer, and if in his answer he confess the trust without insisting upon the statute of frauds, he will be held to have waived the benefit of the statute, and his answer may be used as a written declaration and proof of the trust, on the ground that the plaintiff is not called upon to introduce evidence, and the trust appears upon the written answer before the court. (a)

§ 85. Resulting and implied trusts that arise from fraud can be proved by parol, although the defendant in his answer denies the trusts and sets up the statute in bar; for such trusts are not within the statute. In cases of express trusts, if the defendant denies them, or if he denies them and at the same time sets up the statute, or if he do not answer at all, only legal evidence or evidence in writing can be given in proof.² And if the defendant confesses the parol trusts

(a) As the character of the trust, as an express or implied one, depends on the nature of the facts which brought it into being, and not on the manner in which its existence is proved after its creation, the fact that it is fully set forth by the trustee in his answer in chancery, does not change a resulting trust into an express trust. Warren v. Tynan, 54 N. J. Eq. 402.

The statements of a party who is compelled to answer, either by answer in chancery or by deposition, will not be treated as a declaration of trust, when the statute of frauds is pleaded in bar. Davis v. Stambaugh, 163 Ill. 557; Mayfield v. Forsyth, 164 id. 32; Myers v. Myers, 167 id. 52.

in his answer, and at the same time sets up the statute in bar, he will have the benefit of the statute, and the court will not use the answer as a written declaration and proof of the trust. In one case it was held that a trust appearing from defendant's answer would be executed by the court although it was entirely different from the trust alleged in the bill; but this case has not been followed. In a late case where a bill was filed setting forth a fraud and asking to have a resulting trust declared and a deed set aside, and the defendant confessed an express trust by parol, and offered to execute it, Chancellor Vroom said, "I am inclined to believe that if the present complainant had filed a bill claiming this deed to be a deed of trust, and praying that it might be so decreed according to the original intention of the parties, the answer of the defendant admitting the trust would have been good evidence of it. It would have amounted to a sufficient declaration of trust. But it would seem to be different when a complainant seeks on the ground of fraud to set aside a deed absolute on its face, and confessedly without any consideration paid; for, to suffer a defendant in such case to come in and avoid the claim by setting up a trust would be to permit him to create a trust according to his own views, and thereby prevent the consequences of a fraud." It must be observed, that if the answer of the trustee is used to prove the trust, the terms of the trust must be gathered from the whole answer as it stands, for one part of the answer cannot be read and another part rejected. If, therefore, the plaintiff read the answer in proof of the trust, he must at the same time read the particular terms of the trust as therein stated. (a) In States where the statute of frauds is not in force, trusts may be proved by parol, in opposition to the defendant's answer denying them.

¹ Dean v. Dean, 1 Stockt. 425; Whiting v. Gould, 2 Wis. 552. The proposition in the text was long a disputed point. It was apparently held that, as the defendant by his answer had admitted the trust, the plaintiff was not called upon to introduce any evidence. There was no danger of fraud and perjury; as the court had the defendant's statement of a trust in writing under oath, and as equity takes hold of a party's conscience, he ought to be held to execute the trust which he confesses, notwithstanding the statute. On the other hand, in bills for the specific performance of a parol contract for the sale of lands, the defendant was held not bound to execute the contract if he set up the statute, although he confessed the contract in his answer. There would seem to be no reason for a different rule in the two cases; and since it is now established that a defendant may demur to a bill that on its face alleges a mere parol trust, it would seem to follow that the confession of a defendant should not be used to override a positive rule of law. The two cases cited establish the proposition of the text, and it is presumed that the same rule would be held in all the United States. It is a question of pleading and practice, and it is considered here only incidentally in considering how trusts may be created under the statute of frauds. The reader will find a full discussion of the question in Story's Eq. Pleading, §§ 765-768.

- § 86. Personal chattels are not within the terms of the statute, and trusts in personal property may be declared and proved by parol, though Mr. Eden said that "he had not been able to find an instance of a declaration of trust of personal property, evidenced only by parol, having been carried into execution." And certainly the English cases usually referred to do not establish the proposition in express terms.⁴ There

- ⁴ Nab v. Nab, 10 Mod. 404, 1 Eq. Cas. Ch. 404, and Jones v. Nabbe, Gil. Eq., are usually cited to sustain the proposition, but they do not. In Crook v. Brooking, 2 Vern. 50, 106; Inchiquin v. French, 1 Cox, 1; Metham v. Devon, 1 P. Wms. 529, and Smith v. Attersoll, 1 Russ. 274, there were written declarations of trust, and the question was as to the effect of the writings, though it was remarked in these cases that trusts of personalty could be evidenced by parol. The case of Benbow v. Townsend, 1 My. & K. 506, was this: A. had loaned £2,000, and taken a mortgage in the name of B., his brother, declaring that he intended it for the benefit of

does not seem to be any objection, however, to the establishment of a trust in personal property by parol. The owner in the absence of a statute has entire control of it; he can sell and transfer it without writing and by parol, and if he can transfer it by parol, there is no reason why he may not by parol transfer it upon such lawful terms, and to such uses and trusts, as he may desire. It has been so ruled in express decisions in the United States. When a person sui juris

B. After the death of A. his executor brought a bill against B. to obtain the mortgage, and the question was whether the representatives of A. were entitled to the mortgage. It was held that B. was entitled to hold the mortgage, and it was remarked that a trust of personal property was not within the statute of frauds. It will be observed that the mortgage was in writing in the name of B., and that the parol evidence was not used to establish a trust in B., but to rebut a trust resulting to A. from his having paid the purchase-money. If A. had taken the mortgage in his own name, but had declared that it was in trust for B., the question would have fairly arisen, whether a parol declaration could create a trust in a mortgage of real estate. Bayley v. Boulcott, 4 Russ. 346, only establishes the proposition that a paper prepared under the direction of the owner, but which she refused to execute, will not create a trust. But in McFadden v. Jenkyns, 1 Phill. 153, 1 Hare, 458, it was directly held that a parol declaration was sufficient to create a trust in personal property. If there are doubts and difficulty upon the supposed words, the court will give weight to the fact that they were not written to infer that they may not be the deliberate sentiments of the party. orally or in writing explicitly or impliedly declares that he holds personal property in presenti for another, he thereby constitutes himself an express trustee.1 Under these decisions trusts may be created by parol in any mere personal property, as in the shares of corporations, although the corporations themselves own real estate.² If one receives notes of another in trust to pay such person's debt, and agrees with creditor to turn over the notes or their proceeds to him, a trust arises.3 So where a fund is received and held to invest for another.4 Money or a debt secured by mortgage of real estate is a personal chattel, and a trust in the money or mortgage debt, and in the mortgage itself, may be created by parol; 5 and although a parol declaration of trust will not affect land, yet if the land is to be converted into money, and is converted, a parol declaration will bind the proceeds or the money.6 And this will hold though the parol agreement to hold the money in trust is subsequent to the parol trust respecting the land, no sale by the parol trustee having been contemplated.7 Mr. Hill says that "it would seem to follow that legacies and annuities, and other sums of money charged on land, do not come within the operation of the statute respecting parol declarations of trusts in land."8 But all chattels real are within the statute, and trusts in them must be evidenced in writing, as in case of freehold or leasehold interests.9 The same remarks are to be made in relation to

parol trusts of personal property that were made in relation to parol trusts of real estate where such trusts are possible.1 The subject-matter of the trust must be clearly ascertained, as well as the purposes of the trust and the persons who are to take the beneficial interests. Loose, vague, and indefinite expressions are insufficient to create the trust.2 A mere declaration of a purpose to create a trust is of no value unless carried into effect. A simple promise of a future donation without consideration good or valuable creates no trust that equity can enforce.3 If the trust is once created in writing it cannot be varied by parol, and if it is once created by parol it cannot be altered or varied by other declarations of the trustee; as where a daughter delivered to her father $7000 upon the parol trust that he would secure the money in trust for her and invest it for her sole benefit, and the father made his will giving said notes to two trustees to receive and pay over the income and interest to the daughter during her life, and at her decease to pay the principal to such persons as she by her last will should direct and appoint, and in default of such appointment, to her heirs-at-law: the father died, and his estate turning out insolvent, she brought a bill praying that the notes might be delivered to some person to be appointed by the court as trustee for her. Mr. Justice Wilde, in delivering the opinion of the court, said, "It is very clear that the father, his executor, and his heirs and creditors, are bound by the trust. It was not in the power of the trustee to divest or defeat the trust without the consent of the cestui que trust, except by a sale of the trust property to a bona fide purchaser, for a valuable consideration, and without notice of the trust. Nor could the trustee vary the terms of the trust, or declare

§ 87. Under the statutes relating to the execution of last wills and testaments, no parol declaration can take effect as a nuncupative will, except in the case of soldiers in actual service, and mariners at sea. These persons may, according to the statutes of nearly all the States, make nuncupative wills of their wages and other personal property. It would seem to follow that they can create valid trusts in their wages and other personal property by nuncupative wills so made as to be proved and allowed in the courts of probate, or other courts having jurisdiction in such matters. Personal property may be so given and delivered to one in trust for another for a particular purpose that it will be good as a donatio causa mortis, and the trust will be executed by courts of equity; 2 but courts do not favor donations mortis causa. (a) It has been held that a gift, mortis causa, of a fund in trust to be disposed of for benevolent purposes, at the absolute and unlimited discretion of the donee, could not be sustained.3

An attempt was made at one time to hold gifts to charitable uses as excepted from the statute; but Lord Talbot decided,¹ and Lord Hardwicke affirmed the decision,² and Lord Northington said every man of sense must subscribe to it, that a gift to a charity must be treated on the same footing with any other disposition.³
- § 89. In addition to the statute of frauds, which forbids the creation of express trusts in lands unless the trust is evidenced by some writing signed by the party, there are statutes in every State that regulate the execution of wills. By the original statute of frauds, all wills to pass real estate were required to be in writing, signed by the testator, and attested in his presence by three or four witnesses.4 This statute has been substantially adopted in all the States, though there is some diversity in the number of witnesses required. By this statute nuncupative wills of personal chattels were not prohibited, but they were placed under such regulations that they ceased to be in common use. Written wills of personal property were not required to be attested by witnesses. But in England at the present time, and in most of the United States, a will to pass personal property must be executed with the same formalities, and attested by the same number of witnesses, that are required to wills affecting real estate.5
- § 90. It follows from these statutes, that no trusts in real or personal estate can be created by any declaration of trust for the charity could not be executed on account of its vagueness and uncertainty.

in a will, unless the will is executed in such form that it can be allowed in the court of probate having jurisdiction, and in such form that it will pass the estate that it is intended to operate upon. Mr. Hill lays down the proposition, that if an instrument containing a declaration of trust by reason of some informality cannot be supported as a will, it may, nevertheless, if signed by the party, be a sufficient evidence of the creation of the trust to take it out of the statute. And Lord Northington declared his opinion generally, "that a writing signed by the party who has power to make the trust, declaring a trust upon the will, is good, though such writing be not attested by three witnesses according to the solemnities of the statute of frauds." 2 But these propositions, in the broad form in which they are stated, are clearly not law. The dictum of Lord Northington stands alone, and the highest authorities are in opposition to it.3 (a)

- § 91. There is one state of facts in which the above proposition of Mr. Hill may be good law. If a testator in making his will should declare by way of recital that a certain parcel of land, or sum of money, was held by him upon trusts therein stated, and the will should be so informally executed that it could not be proved in a court of probate, still, if it was signed by him, it would seem to be as good proof of the trust as letters and other memoranda signed by the party and found after his death. (a) In such case the will could have no effect in creating the trust, it would be simply proof in writing of a trust already created and existing at the date of the will. But if the validity of the trust in any way depended upon the effect of the will in transferring the title to the property, the will could not be used in evidence, unless it was itself so executed as to be valid as a will.1 In all cases where trusts originate in a will, the will must be executed according to the statute, or it cannot be used as a declaration and proof of the trusts. (b)
- ¹ Hill on Trustees, 61. Mr. Hill cites Nab v. Nab, 10 Mod. 404, 1 Eq. Ca. Ab. 404, Gil. Eq. 146. The case was this: "A daughter put into her mother's hands £180, and afterwards made a will, which was duly executed, and appointed her mother executrix, but made no mention of the £180. After making the will she desired her mother to give the money to a third person. After the death of the daughter, this third person brought a bill in chancery, alleging that the mother held this money in trust. The mother admitted the trust in her answer, and set up that she was not to give the money except at her option. The court held that the trust was admitted by the answer, and that the trust should be executed. It will be observed that the question as to a will informally executed did not arise. The question was wholly upon the effect of the defendant's answer in chancery. And the court, as reported in 1 Eq. Cas. Ab. 404, said that if the mother had set up the statute of frauds the trust could not have been carried into effect.

§ 92. Mr. Lewin clearly states the law and gives the reasons, as follows: "We must bear in mind that the absolute owner of property combines in himself both the legal and equitable interest, and when the legislature enacts that no devise or bequest of property shall be valid without certain ceremonies, a testator cannot by an informal instrument affect the equitable any more than the legal estate, for the one is a constituent part of the ownership as much as the other. Thus a person cannot, but by will duly signed and attested, give a sum of money originally and primarily out of land; for the charge is part of the land and to be raised out of it by sale or mortgage.2 And if a testator by will duly signed and attested give lands to A. and his heirs

'upon trust,' but without specifying the particular trust intended, and then by a paper not duly signed and attested, as a will or codicil, declare a trust in favor of B., the beneficial interest under the will is a part of the original ownership, and cannot be passed by the informal paper, but will descend to the heir-at-law.1 Again, if a legacy be bequeathed by a will in writing to A. 'upon trust,' and the testator by parol express an intention that it shall be held by A. upon trust for B., such a direction is in fact a testamentary disposition of the equitable interest in the chattel, and therefore void by the statute, which imposes the necessity of a written will. If it be said that such expression of intention, though void as a devise or bequest, may yet be good as a declaration of trust, and, therefore, that where the legal estate of a freehold is well devised a trust may be engrafted upon it by a single note in writing; and where a personal chattel is well bequeathed, a trust of it, as excepted from the seventh section of the statute of frauds, may be raised by a mere parol declaration, - the answer is, that a wide distinction exists between testamentary dispositions and declarations of trust. The former are ambulatory until the death of the testator, but the latter take effect, if at all, at the time of the execution. 'The deed,' observed Lord Loughborough, in a similar case, 'is built on the will; if the will is destroyed, the deed I should consider absolutely gone; the will without the deed is incomplete, and the deed without the will is a nullity.'2 And Mr. Justice Buller observed, 'A deed must take place upon its execution or not at all: it is not necessary for a deed to convey an immediate interest in possession, but it must take place as passing an interest to be conveyed at the execution: but a will is quite the reverse, and can only operate after death.'3 We may therefore safely assume, as an established rule, that if the intended disposition be of a testamentary character and not to take effect in the testator's lifetime, but ambulatory until his death, such disposition is inoperative, unless it be declared in writing in strict conformity with the statutory enactments regulating devises and bequests." 1 (a)

- § 93. There is an additional reason in the United States why a will or testamentary paper informally executed cannot be used as an original declaration of trust. In nearly all the United States no will can be used to prove the transfer of any interest, legal or equitable in property of the testator, unless such will has been duly proved, allowed, and recorded, in a court of probate having jurisdiction over it; 2 and if such will is to be used to affect the title to property in any State other than the one where it is originally proved, it must be recorded in such other State; 3 so a court in equity has no jurisdiction over trusts created by the will of a foreigner, a certified copy of which is not filed in the probate court of the jurisdiction where the remedy is sought.4 But no will can be proved and allowed in a probate court unless it is duly executed under the statutes in force where it is made. This rule does not interfere with the doctrine that a testator may by his last will refer to and incorporate therein any document or paper which is in actual existence at the time, and is thus made a part of his will.5 In such cases, all such papers must be clearly iden-

If they are made afterwards, they must be so executed that they may be probated as a revocation of the will, or as a codicil thereto, or they will have no effect; (a) as where a testator made an absolute devise of an estate, and left a declaration of trust not referred to in the will, and not duly attested, and not communicated to the devisee nor assented to by him in the testator's lifetime, the devisee is entitled to both the legal and beneficial interest, because it is a good devise on the face of the will, and the informal declaration of trust cannot be probated or admitted in evidence. So, if a testator should devise real

Statutes require last wills to be solemnly attested or witnessed by a certain number of witnesses. Whether papers referred to in the will as in actual existence but not attested by the witnesses can be probated, and if they cannot be probated whether they can have any effect upon the disposition made by the will, or of the construction of it, has not been determined.

But if any words in the will itself clearly qualify an absolute devise in the will, and show the testator's intent that others should share the property, the devisee holds in trust.

§ 94. Even at common law parol evidence could not be received to convert a devisee under a will in writing into a trustee. In Vernon's Case it was resolved that a devise implies a consideration, and therefore that it cannot be averred or proved by parol to be for the use of another; "for that," said Lord Ch. B. Gilbert, "were an averment contrary to the design of the will appearing in the words;" and in Lady Portington's Case, the court refused to receive parol evidence, not only because of the statute of frauds, but also from the nature of the thing. For the same reason, at common law parol evidence of a trust was always inadmissible against a legatee under a written will. Until a late statute in England a person appointed executor had the title to all the personal property, and was entitled to take the surplus, after paying debts and legacies, beneficially to himself, and no parol evidence was admissible to convert him into a trustee for the heirs or next of kin. 1 But the authorities seem to establish that if there was any circumstance appearing on the face of the will, as the gift of a legacy to the executor, the law presumed that it was not intended that he should take the surplus beneficially; the executor might rebut that presumption by parol evidence,2 when, of course, the next of kin might fortify the presumption by opposing parol evidence in contradiction. Where, however, the will itself invested the executor with the character of trustee, as by giving him a legacy "for his trouble," or by styling him a "trustee" expressly, the prima facie title to the surplus was then in the next of kin, and parol evidence was not admissible to disprove the express intention.³ By the act referred to in England, and by statutes in all the United States, an executor is made prima facie a trustee for the next of kin.4

giving up the said suit and resuming cohabitation with him, it was held that the consideration was illegal; but the dissent by Holmes is far weightier than the majority opinion. 1 (a) If a deed is given by B. to A. on condition that A. will support B. and C., a trust is created that equity will enforce.2 Wherever a valuable consideration is paid, the contract will be executed as near to the intention of the parties as possible; as where for a valuable consideration a man executed a deed of land purporting to be under his hand and seal, but no seal was affixed, by reason of which defect the legal title did not pass, the court held that the defective deed might be used as a declaration of trust, and that the holder of the legal title should hold it in trust for the grantee in the deed, and that he should be ordered to convey; 3 and where a husband for a meritorious consideration conveyed personal property directly to his wife by deed, which could not operate, because a husband cannot convey directly to his wife, the court ordered the deed to stand as a declaration of trust for the wife, and the husband's representatives to hold the legal title in trust for her.4 The authorities establish this proposition, that where there is a valuable consideration the court will enforce the trust, though it is not perfectly created, and though the instruments do not pass the title to the property, if from the documents the court can clearly perceive the terms and conditions of the trust, and the parties to be benefited. In such cases, effect is given to the consideration to carry out the intentions of the parties, though informally expressed. But if no cestui que trust is named, or so designated that he can be identified, the court cannot carry a trust into effect, however clearly it may be

In Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray, 227, the settlor had purchased stocks in various corporations in the name of H. P. K., and took from H. P. K. a declaration that she held the stocks upon certain trusts therein particularly specified. Afterwards the settlor caused H. P. K. to indorse and sign upon the backs of the certificates a transfer to the plaintiff and a power of attorney to the plaintiff to complete the transfer, and took from her a declaration of trust, stating the purposes for which she held the stock. The settlor died, and a question arose as to the title to the stock. Chief-Justice Bigelow said: "The key to the solution of the question raised in this case is to be found in the equitable principle now well established and uniformly acted on by courts of chancery, that a voluntary gift or conveyance of property in trust, when fully completed and executed, will be regarded as valid, and its provisions enforced and carried into effect against all persons except creditors and bona fide purchasers without notice. It is certainly true that a court of equity will lend no assistance towards perfecting a voluntary contract or agreement for the creation of a trust, nor regard it as binding so long as it remains executory. But it is equally true that if such an agreement or contract be executed by a conveyance of property in trust, so that nothing remains to be done by the grantor or donor to complete the transfer of the title, the relation of trustee and cestui que trust is deemed to be established, and the equitable rights and interests arising out of the conveyance, though made without consideration, will be enforced in chancery. The leading case in which the principle is declared and acted upon is Ellison v. Ellison, 6 Ves. 656, in which Lord Eldon decreed the enforcement of a trust which in its creation was wholly voluntary and without consideration. This has been followed by many other cases in which the same principle was recognized. Pulvertoft v. Pulvertoft, 18 Ves. 84; Ex parte Pye, id. 140; Sloan v. Cadogan, Sugd. Ven & Pur. (11th ed.) 1119; Fortescue v. Barnett, 3 My. & K. 36; Wheatley v. Purr, 1 Keen, 551; Blakely v. Brady, 2 Dru. & Wal. 311; Browne v. Cavendish, 1 Jon. & La. 637; Kekewich v. Manning, 1 De G., M. & G. 176. The last-named case contains a full discussion of all the authorities, and a clear and accurate statement of the law upon the subject.

"The application of the principle established by these authorities is entirely decisive of the rights and duties of the parties to this suit. conveyance or transfer of the shares to the plaintiff in her capacity of trustee was full and complete, and vested in her the legal title to the property. No further act was to be done by the original owner of the shares to consummate the plaintiff's title, as between the parties the delivery of the certificates of stock, with the assignments of some of them and the power of attorney to transfer the others, was equivalent to a complete executed transfer of the shares. Nor is it at all material to the validity of the plaintiff's title that transfers of the shares had not been recorded in the books of the different corporations and new certificates of stock taken out by her. That was not necessary to the conveyance of the legal title as between the donor and the plaintiff. This is well settled by the authorities in this State. Quinn v. Marblehead Social Ins. Co., 10 Mass. 476; Ellis v. Essex Merrimack Bridge, 2 Pick. 248; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. 96; Eames v. Wheeler, 19 Pick. 444. Such, too, is the plain import of the statute. . . . Nothing therefore was left in fieri. The transaction was a completely executed transfer of property, and fully created a trust which, according to the principles already stated, a court of equity is bound to recognize and enforce." § 99. The trust must be for a lawful purpose and perfectly created. If a will creates several trusts, some of which are legal and others not, the lawful ones will be upheld if they can be separated from the others. Whether the trust is perfectly created or not, is a question of fact in each case; and the court, in determining the fact, will give effect to the situation and relation of the parties, the nature and situation of the property, and the purposes or objects which the settlor had in view in making the disposition. ² See Brabrook v. Savings Bank, 104 Mass. 228, where deposits in savings banks are fully discussed. Jones v. Lock, L. R. 1 Ch. 25. In this case a father put a check for £900 into the hands of his child, nine months old, with the strongest expression of an intent to give the check to the child. He afterwards took the check and locked it up, saying he should keep it for the child, and died the same day. A bill was brought in behalf of the child against his father's representatives to enforce his interest in the check as a trust. Lord Cranworth said: "No doubt a gift may be made by any person sui juris and compos mentis, by conveyance of real estate or by delivery of chattels; and there is no doubt also that by some decisions, unfortunate I must think them, a parol declaration of a tru t of personalty may be perfectly valid even when voluntary. If I give any chattel, that of course passes by delivery, and if I say expressly, or impliedly, that I constitute myself a trustee of personalty, that is a trust executed, and capable of being enforced without consideration. I do not think it necessary to go into any of the authorities cited before me. all turn upon the question whether what has been said was a declaration of trust or an imperfect gift. In the latter the parties would receive no aid from a court of equity, if they claimed as volunteers; but if there has been a declaration of trust, then it will be enforced whether there has been a consideration or not. Therefore the question in each case is one of fact, has there been a gift or not, or has there been a declaration of trust or not? This case turns on the very short question whether the father intended to make a declaration that he held the property in trust for the child, and I cannot come to any other conclusion than that he did not." His Lordship then comments upon the evidence, and says "that it was all very natural, but that the father would have been very much surprised if he number of cases have been decided involving the last three propositions. There is much seeming conflict in the decisions, and it would be an endless, perhaps useless, task to attempt to reconcile them. The proposition laid down by Lord Cranworth, that it is a question of fact in each case whether a perfect trust is created or not, goes far to reconcile the differences. Some judges give greater prominence to one element of fact in the case than other judges, and thus different judges might decide the same question upon the facts in a different manner; but so long as it is a question of fact in each case, the rule of law is the same, however the fact may be found. When a deed fully declaring the trust is executed and delivered, and nothing further remains to be done by the grantor, the trust is created.1 Failing to name the beneficiary will not be fatal, if the title is properly conveyed and the trustee admits that he holds for the plaintiff.2 In New York, however, it is held that the absence of a defined beneficiary capable of enforcing the trust is in general fatal, and that giving power to the trustee to select the beneficiary is not sufficient, unless the persons among whom the choice is to be made are so defined and limited that a court of equity could in default of selection by the trustee enforce the trust by a distribution among all the beneficiaries.3 In this case the trust was to have prayers had been told that he had parted with the £900, and could no longer dispose of it; and that the child, by his next friend, could have brought an action of trover for the check." See Scales v. The decisions are not uniform as to the effect of a deposit in Savings Bank and entry in the books for the benefit of, or in trust for a child or other beneficiary; in some cases it is held sufficient declaration of a trust, and in others something further is required, as notice, or delivery of the book.

offered in a Roman church for the repose of the souls of the grantor, his family, and all others in purgatory. A deed saying, "The following notes I leave in trust with E. C. to be divided among A., B., and C. at my death," was held to create a perfect present trust.\(^1\) A conveyance may be made upon trusts to be subsequently declared, and when the subsequent declaration occurs, the trust is treated in the same way as if declared at the time of the deed.\(^2\) The consent or even knowledge of the cestui is not a necessary element in the creation of a valid trust. A transfer of stock, for instance, in proper form vests the title in the transferee subject to his repudiation when informed of the transaction.\(^3\)

§ 100. If the donor or settlor propose to make a stranger the trustee of his property, and the property is a legal estate, capable of legal transfer and delivery, the trust is not perfectly created, unless the legal interest is actually transferred to or vested in the trustee. It is not enough that the settlor executed a paper purporting to pass it, if in fact the paper does not have that effect. The intention of the settlor to divest himself of the legal title must be consummated and executed, or the court will not enforce the trust. As, for instance, if a settlor execute a deed in trust of scrip, stock, or shares in corporations, which scrip, stock, or shares can be transferred only by assignment upon the backs of the certificates, and upon the company's books, the deed, if voluntary, will not create a trust which the court will execute, unless the stocks are actually transferred in fact.⁴

And so of mortgages, mortgage debts, and other securities. If anything remains for the donor to do to vest the legal title in the donee, the court cannot execute the trust, if it is voluntary. Lord Eldon stated the principle thus: "I take the distinction to be, that if you want the assistance of the court to constitute a cestui que trust, and the instrument is voluntary, you shall not have the assistance for the purpose of constituting a cestui que trust, as upon a covenant to transfer stock, &c.; but if the party has completely transferred stock, &c., though it is voluntary, yet the legal conveyance being effectually made, the equitable interest will be enforced by this court.

§ 101. But if the subject of the trust is a legal interest that cannot be transferred or assigned at law, as a bond or any other chose in action, what then is the rule? On the one hand it has been argued that in equity the universal rule is, that a court will not enforce a voluntary agreement in favor of a volunteer, and as by the supposition the legal interest remains in the settlor (who, therefore, at law retains the full control and benefit of it), a court of equity will not, in the absence of a valuable or good consideration, deprive him of that interest, with which he has not actually parted. And this reasoning has been sustained by numerous cases.² On the other hand, as the settlor cannot divest himself of the legal interest, to say that he shall not constitute another as trustee without passing the legal interest, would be to debar him from the creation of a trust at all in the hands of another, and that the rule, therefore, should be, that if the settlor make all the assignment of the property in his power, and perfect the transaction as far as the law permits, the court should recognize the act and support the validity of the trust. And this reasoning has also been supported by many decided cases. In a late leading case, Lord Justice K. Bruce made a thorough examination of all the authorities, and established this proposition: "It is upon legal and equitable principles, we apprehend, clear that a person sui juris, acting freely and fairly, and with sufficient knowledge, ought to have, and has it in his power to make in a binding and effectual manner a voluntary gift of any part of his property, whether capable or incapable of manual delivery, whether in possession or reversionary, or howsoever circumstanced."2 Mr. Lewin says, "that it is conceived that this principle will, for the future, prevail," 3 and it has been followed in the later cases.4 But if part of the property be capable of delivery and transfer, and part of it incapable of delivery, and that which might have been legally assigned and delivered is not so assigned and delivered, no trust is created.5

§ 102. It is well established that if the subject of the trust is an equitable interest, the cestui que trust may create a valid trust by executing an assignment of his interest to a new trustee, for the equitable interest can be transferred from one to another, and as the relation of trustee and cestui que trust already exists, the original settlor need not be called upon to do any act. 1 Lord Justice K. Bruce said: "Suppose stock or money to be legally vested in A. as a trustee for B. for life, and subject to B.'s life-interest for C. absolutely, surely it must be competent for C., in the lifetime of B., with or without the consent of A., to make an effectual gift of his interest to D. by way of pure bounty, leaving the legal interest and legal title untouched. If so, can C. do this better or more effectually than by executing an assignment to D?"2 So the cestui que trust can assign voluntarily his equitable interest to a stranger in trust for himself.3 Or by a new declaration of trust the cestui que trust can direct the old trustees to hold his interest thereafter upon new trusts.4 But it has been decided that a voluntary assignment of a mere expectancy in an equitable interest did not perfectly create a trust that the court would enforce; that any dealing with what a person only expects to have must in some sense be in fieri. And if a settlor intend to make a voluntary settlement in a particular mode, as by conveying the legal title, and he fails to convey the

In case of a sale of real estate for a valuable consideration, nothing passes by the deed, although it is signed and sealed, until the purchase-money is paid and the deed delivered to the vendee, or until so much is done that the law will construe the deed to be for the use, or under the control, of the vendee; but if a party execute a voluntary settlement and the deed recites that it is sealed and delivered, it will be binding upon the settlor although he never parts with it, but keeps it in his possession until his death. Garner v. Ger. L. Ins. Co., 110 N. Y. 266. It must be observed, however, that the absence of a power to revoke a voluntary revested in the settlor. In all these cases the first perfectly created trust will be upheld, with all its consequences, and settlement or trust is viewed by courts of equity as a circumstance of suspicion, and very slight evidence of mistake, misapprehension, or misunderstanding on the part of the settlor will be laid hold of to set aside the deed. The following opinion by the Chancellor (Runyon) in a late case in New Jersey, Garnsey v. Mundy, 24 N. J. Eq. 243, reprinted in 13 Am. Law Reg. (N. S.) 345, with a learned note by Mr. Bispham, gives a very clear view of the law applicable to voluntary settlements without a power of revocation made under circumstances which may lead to the conclusion that the settlor did not intend to put the property entirely beyond his control, or that he acted unadvisedly or improvidently:—

"On the 4th of July, 1861, the complainant, Sarah M. Garnsey, who was then a single woman (her maiden name being Sarah M. Mundy), and of the age of about twenty-one years, was seized in her own right, in fee, in possession, through inheritance from her father, James Mundy, deceased, of a parcel of unimproved farming land of about seven acres in Middlesex County in this State, and was also the owner of an undivided third of the remainder, in fee, of two other lots there, - one a wood-lot of about two acres, and the other the house-lot, containing about nine and a half acres, which had been set off to her mother, Elizabeth Mundy, in dower. She had no other property, real or personal. By a deed of that date she conveyed in fee to her mother, for the expressed consideration of natural love and affection to the grantor's daughter, Elmina May, and of fifty cents to her paid by her mother, the whole of said property on the following trust: 'That the said Elizabeth Mundy shall and will hold, use, occupy, and rent the same, and receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof to and for the maintenance of said Elmina May Mundy until she shall arrive at the age of twenty-one years, or in case of her death, the said Elizabeth Mundy, her heirs or assigns, shall pay the rents or profits arising as above to the said Sarah M. Mundy, and in further trust to convey the land and premises with the appurtenances herein before mentioned, in fee-simple, to the said Elmina May Mundy, or in equal shares to her and any other children of said Sarah M. Mundy (should there be any other), when the youngest of said children shall have attained the age of twenty-one years; and in the event that no issue of the said Sarah M.

the settlor will be declared to be a trustee. (a) A trust once created and accepted without reservation of power can

Mundy shall survive to inherit the same, that the estate herein named shall be conveyed according to the direction of the executor of the will of the said Sarah M. Mundy heretofore made.'

"In 1864 Sarah M. Mundy was married to Silas Garnsey. The bill is filed by her and her husband against her two children and her mother, the trustee, to set aside the deed. The property at the time of making the conveyance in question was and still is of but little value as farming land. The buildings upon the house-lot, which alone was improved, were old and dilapidated and have gone to decay, and even the fences on the premises are down. The trustee, who is a woman of advanced age, was and is wholly without means, except her dower. The deed is voluntary. It was made at the suggestion and on the advice of the grantor's mother, and of her uncle, Dr. Jacob Martin, her mother's brother. The grantor neither proposed nor suggested it. Indeed, it appears she knew nothing of it until it was presented to her for her signature, and she was urged by her mother and her uncle to execute it, 'for her good.' Their motive, they say, was to save the property for her, to prevent her from improvidently disposing of it. No professional advice whatever was taken. The deed was drawn by a son of Dr. Martin, at the latter's direction; and its execution was witnessed by Dr. Martin, who, being a commissioner of deeds, took the grantor's acknowledgment. The grantor had no advice whatever, except that which her mother and uncle gave her. Not only was she not consulted in regard to the matter in any way, but it was clear that she did not understand the provisions of the deed, nor their effect. She did not suppose that the effect of the conveyance would be to place the property beyond her reach and control. Nay, her mother and uncle both supposed that the trust was revocable, and that the grantor under it retained full power to sell the property, with the trustee's consent.

only be revoked by the full consent of all parties in interest; 1 if any of the parties are not in being, or are not sui juris, it

conveyance not only deprived the grantor of all her property, without reserving a power of revocation to enable her to meet the exigencies of life, but the arrangement which it made was in other respects injudicious, disadvantageous, and improvident. The motives and intentions of the mother and uncle were most praiseworthy. Their design manifestly was simply to put the property in such a position that the grantor could not dispose of it without her mother's consent and concurrence. They in good faith urged her to make the deed. She and they were alike under an erroneous impression as to the effect of it. From the operation of such a conveyance, made under such circumstances, equity will relieve the complainants. The rigidity of the ancient doctrine, that a voluntary settlement, not obtained by fraud, is binding on the settler, and will not be set aside in equity, although the settlor has not reserved a power of revocation (Villers v. Beaumont, 1 Vern. 100; Petre v. Espinasse, 2 M. & K. 496; Biil v. Cureton, 2 M. & K. 503), has been relaxed by modern decisions. In the case first cited, Villers v. Beaumont, decided in 1682, the Lord Chancellor said: 'If a man will improvidently bind himself up by a voluntary deed, and not reserve a liberty to himself by a power of revocation, this court will not loose the fetters he hath put on himself, but he must lie down under his own folly.' Recent cases, however, have narrowed the doctrine, and have held, not only that the absence of a power of revocation throws on the person seeking to uphold the settlement the burden of proving that such a power was intentionally excluded by the settlor, and that in the absence of such proof, the settlement may be set aside, but that equity will set aside the settlement on the application of the settler, when it appears that he did not intend to make it irrevocable, or when the settlement would be unreasonable or improvident for the lack of a provision for revocation. (a) In Everitt v. Everitt (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 405, — a case

(a) Voluntary settlements, without consideration, when testamentary in character, are now often treated as revocable, though a power of revocation may not be therein reserved. Neal v. Black, 177 Penn. St. 83; Chestnut St. Nat. Bank v. Fidelity Ins. Co., 186 id. 333; Sturgeon v. Stevens, id. 350; Wilson v. Anderson, id. 531; Krankel v. Krankel (Ky.), 47 S. W. 1084. The absence of such power of revocation is thus regarded as merely one circumstance to be considered in weighing all the circumstances of the case. Brown r. Mercantile Trust Co., 87 Md. 377. In Massachusetts and Texas, it is held that a voluntary trust completely established, with no power of revocation reserved, cannot be avoided by the person by whom and with whose property it cannot be revoked at all. It is perfectly clear that where the settlor did not misapprehend the contents of the deed, almost precisely similar in its facts to that under consideration, — a voluntary settlement was set aside on the application of the donor. The court said: 'It is very difficult indeed for any voluntary settlement, made by a young lady so soon after she attained twenty-one, to stand, if she afterwards changes her mind and wishes to get rid of the fetters which she has been advised to put upon herself.'

"In Wollaston v. Tribe (1869), L. R. 9 Eq. 44, a voluntary gift which was not subject to a power of revocation, but was meant to be irrevocable, was held to be invalid, and was set aside on the donor's application. In pronouncing the decree, the court said: 'Of course a voluntary gift is perfeetly good if the person who makes it knows what it is, and intended to carry it into execution.' In Coutts v. Acworth, L. R. 8 Eq. 558, it was held that 'Where the circumstances are such that the donor in a voluntary settlement or gift ought to be advised to retain a power of revocation, it is the duty of the solicitor to insist on the insertion of such power, and the want of it will in general be fatal to the deed.' In Prideaux v. Lonsdale (1863), 1 De G., J. & S. 433, a voluntary settlement, which the settlor was advised to execute by persons under whose influence, as regarded money matters, she was, and which subjected her property to trusts and contained provisions which the court thought it was impossible to suppose she understood, and against which she ought to have been advised and cautioned, was set aside. In Hall v. Hall, L. R. 14 Eq. 365, it was held that a voluntary settlement should contain a power of revocation; and if it does not, the parties who rely on it must prove that the settlor was properly advised when he executed it, and that he thoroughly understood the effect of omitting the power, and that he intended to be excluded from the settlement, and further, if that is not established, and the court sees from the surrounding circumstances that the settlor believed the instrument to be revocable, it will, even after the lapse of twenty years and the death of the settlor, interfere and give relief against it. The decree in that case was reversed. (1873, L. R. 8 Ch. App. 430.) In his opinion, was created. Lovett v. Farnham, 169 Mass.1; Monday v. Vance (Tex.), 49 S. W. 516. Also, in Massachusetts, that such a trust can be set aside only because of unsoundness of mind, fraud, mistake, or undue influence; and that the mere omission of a power of revocation in the trust-deed of a woman, made in contemplation of marriage, is not a mistake entitling her to relief. Taylor v. Buttrick, 165 Mass. 547. In Richards v. Reeves, 149 Ind. 427, it was held that the absence of a power of revocation in a voluntary settlement is prima facie evidence of mistake. and there was no fraud or undue influence, and no power of revocation was reserved, the settlor is bound, though some Selborne, L. C., said: 'The absence of a power of revocation in a voluntary deed, not impeached on the ground of any undue influence, is of course material where it appears that the settlor did not intend to make an irrevocable settlement, or where the settlement itself is of such a nature, or was made under such circumstances as to be unreasonable and improvident, unless guarded by a power of revocation.' Forshaw v. Welsby, 30 Beav. 243, was a case where a voluntary settlement was made by one, in extremis, on his family. It contained no power of revocation in case of the settlor's recovery. On his recovery it was set aside on his application, on the ground that it was not executed with the intention that it should be operative in case of his recovery from his illness. See also Huguenin v. Baseley, Lead. Cas. in Eq. 406; Cook v. Lamotte, 15 Beav. 241; Sharp v. Leach, 31 Beav. 491; Phillipson v. Kerry, 32 Beav. 628. It is not necessary, however, to rest a decision of this case adverse to the deed on so narrow a foundation as the mere absence of a power of revocation. The circumstances under which a voluntary deed was executed may be shown, with a view of impeaching its validity, and if it appears that it was fraudulent or improperly obtained, equity will decree that it be given up and cancelled. In the present case there is no room for doubt that the grantor was induced, by those in whom she very justly placed confidence, and by whose better judgment she was willing to be guided, to execute a voluntary deed whose effect she and they not only did not understand, but, on the other hand, misapprehended; and which, so far from being according to their intentions, was in two very important respects, at least, admittedly precisely the reverse. It was irrevocable; but they all supposed it was revocable, and intended that it should be so. It deprived the grantor of the power of sale; but they all supposed that she would have that power, and intended that she should have it, clogged only by the necessity of obtaining her mother's consent and concurrence in any bargain or conveyance she might make. The deed contains no power of sale whatever. The testimony of all the parties to the transaction — the grantor, her mother and uncle — has been taken in the cause. It satisfies me that the deed was not 'the pure, voluntary, well-understood act of the grantor's mind' (Lord Eldon in Huguenin v. Baseley), but was unadvised and improvident, and contrary to the intention of all of them. The fact that the infant children of the grantor are beneficiaries under the deed will not prevent the court from setting it aside. Huguenin r. Baseley; Everitt v. Everitt, ubi sup. There will be a decree that the deed be delivered up to be cancelled." See also Rhodes v. Bates, L. R. 1 Ch. 252; Leach v. Farr, 13 Am. Law Reg. 350 (N. s.); Villers v. natural course of descent of the property, and is not needed for the protection of the life cestui, who is the grantor, equity will, on application of the cestui, terminate the trust and decree a conveyance. In this case the trust was made by a woman before marriage for herself for life, remainder to her appointees by will, or her heirs-at-law, if she died intestate. After marriage she applied for a conveyance and discharge of the trust, and as the natural descent was not broken, and the laws of the State sufficiently protected married women, the request was granted.

§ 105. Nor is notice to the cestui que trust or to the trustee, and acceptance by him, essential to the validity of a voluntary trust as against the settlor, if it is otherwise perfectly created.² But the absence of notice may become a fact of more or less importance in determining whether the trust is perfectly created or not.³ As between purchasers for value, notice or no notice may have important effects; but a voluntary trust, as between the settlor, the trustee, and the cestui que trust, can be perfectly created without it.

§ 106. Under the statute of uses, uses could be raised either upon a valuable or pecuniary consideration, or upon what was called a good or meritorious consideration; that is, a consideration arising out of blood, marriage, or family affection, and the moral obligation that every one is under to provide for his family or relations. Thus, a covenant to stand seized to the uses of a stranger, founded upon a valuable consideration, operated under the statute as a deed of bargain and sale to be enrolled, and conveyed the land to the stranger. But a covenant in consideration of blood or marriage, to stand seized to the use of a wife or child or other relation, created a use only in the cestui que trust, and the deed need not be enrolled. In all cases the consideration of this conveyance was the foundation of it. Therefore, a covenant to stand seized to the use of a stranger in consideration of love or affection for him was inoperative for want of a consideration; and a covenant in consideration of blood or marriage, to stand seized to the use of a relative and a stranger, vested the whole use in the relative, and was inoperative as to the stranger. From this brief statement can be seen the effect and meaning of what was called a good or meritorious consideration under the statute of uses. 1

§ 107. In analogy to this doctrine, under the statute of uses it has been urged that a voluntary post-nuptial settlement in favor of a wife or child, executory in all its aspects, would be enforced in favor of such wife or child on the ground of a good or meritorious consideration for such settlement.² And in Ellis v. Nimmo, Sugden, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, after a most exhaustive examination of the authorities, decided that the meritorious consideration of providing for a child was sufficient to lead a court of equity to enforce an executory contract against the settlor.³ This case met with considerable criticism, and several cases were decided, more or less in opposition to it. In Moore v. Crofton, he allowed it to be overruled, declaring, however, at the same time, that he still thought it decided upon sound principles of equity, so that now it may be considered as settled in England, that an executory agreement founded on a meritorious consideration only will not be executed against the settlor himself.

§ 108. As to other parties claiming under the settlor, if he had sold the estate, or become indebted, the equity of a wife or child claiming as cestui que trust, on the ground of a meritorious consideration, would not be enforced against a purchaser or creditors.4 But if the settlor subsequently made a voluntary settlement, or died without disposing of the estate by some act inter vivos, there were authorities that the voluntary cestui que trust could enforce his equity as against other volunteers under another settlement,5 or against devisees or legatees,6 or against the heir-at-law or next of kin.7 There was, however, this condition, that the persons against whom the settlement was sought to be enforced could not also plead a meritorious consideration; for if they also were children of the settlor, the considerations would be equal. In such cases the court referred it to a master to report whether they had an adequate provision independent of the estate.¹ But at the present day in England it would appear that even as against volunteers claiming under the settlor, with or without an adequate provision, a voluntary executory agreement, whether under seal or not, cannot be enforced on the mere ground of a meritorious consideration.²

Mr. Lewin (p. 95 of his 3d ed.) has discussed this whole matter with a fulness that leaves little to be said. He says: "It has also been supposed that where the trust is imperfectly created, the court, without proof of valuable consideration, will act upon a meritorious consideration, as the payment of debts or provision for wife or child. The covenant to stand seized to uses, and the jurisdiction of the court in supplying surrenders and aiding the defective execution of powers, have generally been referred to as establishing, or at least countenancing, this doctrine.

"As regards the covenant to stand seized to uses, it is evident that mere meritorious consideration was not a sufficient ground to attract the jurisdiction of the court; for no use would have arisen in favor of a wife or child unless there had been a covenant. 'There are several ways in the law,' said Lord Justice Holt, 'for declaring uses, whether upon transmutation of the possession or not. If a use be declared upon a transmutation of the possession, as in a fine of feoffment, it is sufficient for the party on the transmutation to declare that the use shall be to such a party of such an estate; but if the use arise without transmutation of the possession, the use then does not arise by virtue of any declaration or appointment, but there must be some precedent obligation to oblige the party declaring the use, which must be founded on some consideration; for a use, having its foundation generally on grounds of equity, could not be relieved in chancery without transmutation of possession, or an agreement founded on a consideration; and therefore if bargain and sale were made of a man's lands, on the payment of the money, the use could have arisen without deed by parol; but if the use was in consideration of blood, then it could not arise by parol agreement without a deed, because that agreement was not an obliging agreement: it wanted a consideration, and therefore to make it an obliging agreement, there was necessity of a deed.' Jones v. Morley, 12 Mod. 161.

"Thus, if equity be governed by the strict analogy of uses, the court cannot act upon meritorious consideration where the contract is by parol; and though, where the agreement is under seal, the argument of analogy applies, yet it follows not that equity will now raise a trust because formerly it would have created a use. A bargain and sale for 5s. consideration still operates by way of conveyance to transfer the estate; but should the bargain and sale be void as such for want of an indenture or an indenture duly enrolled, it could not be argued that the agreement at the present day would be specifically executed upon the basis of a trust. It may further be remarked that if the covenant to stand seized to uses were now to regulate the administration of trusts, there would still be no ground for extending the relief to creditors, who, however, it is admitted on all hands, are equally entitled to the benefit of meritorious consideration. And the covenant to stand seized to uses extended, we must remember, not only to wife and child, but also to brothers, nephews, and cousins; but no one at the present day would think of admitting the same latitude in the execution of a trust.

"With respect to the jurisdiction of the court in supplying surrenders of copyholds, the principle upon which the relief is founded appears to be this, that as the heir was never meant by the law to take otherwise than in default of the ancestor's will, if the ancestor manifests any intention in favor of a meritorious object, the court will not suffer the mere want of form to carry a benefit to the representative. 'I have looked,' said Lord Alvanley, 'at all the cases I can find upon what principle this court goes in supplying the defect. It is this: whenever a man having power over an estate, whether ownership or not, in discharge of moral or natural obligation, shows an intention to execute such power, the court will operate upon the conscience of the heir to make him perfect this intention. This is not to be confounded with the case of the heirs being disinherited by a will of freeholds not duly executed: there is no will at all. The court cannot see that there is such an instrument; but whenever there is such a power, it has been executed.' Chapman v. Gibson, 3 Bro. Ch. 230. see Ellis v. Nimmo, Lloyd & Goold, 341.

"The ground upon which the courts aid the defective execution of powers will be found upon examination to be precisely that upon which it supplies the surrender of copyholds. The power to the extent to which it may be exercised is regarded in equity as part of the dominion,—as a portion of the actual estate; and the donee of it is pro tauto the bona pide owner of the property, and the person taking in default of the donee's disposition is a quasi heir. Holmes v. Coghill, 12 Ves. 213; Coventry v. Coventry, at the end of Francis's Maxims in Equity. The only distinction between an actual heir and the person taking in default of the power is this: that the former is so constituted by course of law, while the latter is a quasi heir specially appointed by the settlor. Thus in aiding the defective execution of powers the court says, as in supplying surrenders, the donee of the power, who is the owner of the property to the extent of that or child founded upon a meritorious consideration, if the instrument is under seal, though the rule is not fully estab-

power, has indicated an intention of providing for a meritorious object, and the person taking in default of the power, who is a kind of heir, shall not, through want of form, run away with the estate from those who are much better entitled.

"It is clear that an agreement founded on meritorious consideration will not be executed as against the settlor himself. Antrobus v. Smith, 12 Ves. 39. Indeed, relief in such a case would offend against the security of property; for if a man improvidently bind himself by a complete alienation, the court will not unloose the fetters he hath put upon himself, but he must lie down under his own folly. Villers v. Beaumont, 1 Vern. 101; but if the court interpose where the act is left incomplete, what is it but

Ware, 1 Barr, 445; Cressman's App. 42 Penn. St. 155; Bunn v. Winthrop, 1 Johns. Ch. 329. The above cases of McIntire v. Hughes, Mahan v. Mahan, and Bright v. Bright, are direct decisions upon the point, and fully establish the rule for the State of Kentucky, while the cases of Bunn v. Winthrop, Dennison v. Goehring, Jones v. Obinchain, and most of the other cases, presented a completely executed trust for enforcement, and the court was not called upon to decide whether a meritorious consideration alone would support an executory trust. In Hayes v. Kershaw, the settlement was for a collateral relative, and the Vice-Chancellor declined to support it, but intimated in strong language that an executory trust for a wife or child would be supported upon meritorious consideration merely. The cases are very fully commented upon by the learned editors to 1 Lead. Cas. in Eq. 330-333, with a strong leaning to the opinion that voluntary executory trusts for a wife or child would be supported. The learned editors also express strong doubts whether the case of Ellis v. Nimmo, 1 Lloyd & Goold, 333, is overruled by the cases which are usually thought to overrule it; and their criticism is ingenious and acute. They do not, however, advert to the case of Moore v. Crofton, 3 Jon. & La. 442. See Cox v. Sprigg, 6 Md. 274.

lished, and perhaps, upon thorough consideration, would not be acted upon. But the rule would be strictly confined to a wife and child, and would not be extended to brothers, sisters, nephews, or parents, and probably not to grand-children, nor to illegitimate children.

to wrest property from a person who has not legally parted with it? Another observation that suggests itself is, that during the life of the settler the ground of the meritorious consideration scarcely seems to apply; for can it be thought to be the duty of a husband to endow his wife, during the coverture, with a separate and independent provision? or is a parent bound by any natural or moral obligation to impoverish himself (for such a case may be supposed) for the purpose of enriching a child? or has a court of equity the jurisdiction to appropriate a specific fund to creditors, when the debtor is still living? the presumption of law is that the creditor can obtain satisfaction of his debt by the usual legal process. It is after the decease of the settlor that meritorious consideration becomes such a powerful plea in a court of equity. The wife and children have then lost the personal support of the husband and parent, and who can have a juster claim to the inheritance of the property? The creditor is then barred, by Act of God, of his remedy against the debtor; and should the assets prove insufficient, how but by the assistance of equity can he hope to be satisfied in his demand? Another objection to the execution of a voluntary contract against the settlor himself, at least in respect of land, is the principle expressed by Lord Cowper, that equity, like nature, will do nothing in vain. Seeley v. Jago, 1 P. Wms. 389; Billingham v. Lawthen, 1 Ch. Cas. 243; Pulvertoft v. Pulvertoft, 18 Ves. 99; as if money be directed to be converted into land, or land into money, the devisee or legatee may elect to take the property in the original state, for should the court direct an actual conversion, the devisee or legatee might immediately annul the order by resorting to a reconversion; and so, should the court decree a specific performance of a contract regarding realty for meritorious consideration, the property the next moment might be disposed of to a bonâ fide purchaser, and the settlement become nugatory. Again, if the imperfect gift can be enforced against the settlor himself, then the equitable right must form a lien upon the property; and upon the death of the settlor his heir would, in all events, be bound to convey: but even in aiding the defective execution of powers and supplying surrenders of copyholds, a previous inquiry by the master is invariably directed whether the heir of the settlor has any other adequate provision."

- § 110. Marriage is a valuable consideration, therefore executory agreements, made in contemplation of marriage, will be enforced if the marriage actually takes place. ¹
- § 111. A contract under seal imports a consideration, and an action at law can be maintained upon such a contract. And it has sometimes been supposed that a court of equity would enforce a contract in favor of a volunteer whenever an action of law could be sustained upon the instrument.2 But equity never enforced a voluntary covenant, though under seal, to stand seized to the uses of a stranger; and it is now settled, in England, that equity will not enforce a voluntary contract, although under seal.3 Equity will not decree the specific performance of a contract, where a court of law would give only nominal damages. In the United States, however, considerable stress is laid upon the solemnity of a seal. The courts say that they will not execute a voluntary executory agreement unless it is under seal,4 thereby implying that an executory contract under seal will be enforced, though voluntary. And in Kentucky, where the distinction between sealed and unsealed instruments is now abolished, a voluntary executory contract not under seal has been upheld.⁵ But there is the same uncertainty whether a seal would render a voluntary executory contract binding in equity, as there is whether a mere meritorious consideration will enable the court to enforce the settlement. Generally, in America, very little regard is paid to mere formalities, and a seal is regarded in most States as a mere formality. A mere scratch or scroll of the pen passes for a seal, and in some States they are abolished altogether. Why any effect should be given to a form that has ceased to be a solemnity would be hard to explain on principle, and is equally uncertain upon the authorities.

§ 111 a. By the construction given to the New York statutes a trust to sell land for the benefit of creditors and legatees must be absolute and imperative without discretion in the trustee; and a trust to receive rents and profits is not valid if there is no direction to apply them to the use of any person or for any period.¹

IMPLIED trusts are those that arise when trusts are not directly or expressly declared in terms, but the courts, from the whole transaction and the words used, imply or infer that it was the intention of the parties to create a trust. (a) Courts seek for the intention of the parties, however informal or obscure the language may be; and if a trust can fairly be implied from the language used as the intention of the parties, the intention will be executed through the medium of a trust. Implied trusts may arise out of agreements and settlements intervivos where there is

- (a) In Gorrell v. Alspaugh, 120 N. C. 362, 366, Douglas, J., said: "Implied trusts are either resulting or constructive. In this State all implied trusts are generally denominated parol trusts, referring to their origin and nature of proof rather than their incidents and results. Some eminent authorities, as Lewin and Perry, make a separate division of implied trusts as distinguished both from resulting and constructive trusts; but this distinction does not seem to be recognized in this State, nor, indeed, in the Statute of Frauds (29 Charles II., ch. 3, § 8), which refers to a trust 'arising or resulting by implication or construction of law.'"

a sufficient consideration; but they more frequently arise from the construction of wills where a consideration is implied. In Pennsylvania, such words as "my wish is," "my further request is," or others merely expressive of a desire, recommendation, or confidence, are not sufficient to convert a devise or bequest into a trust. But the general rule is that if a testator make an absolute gift to one person in his will, and accompany the gift with words expressing a "belief," "desire," "will," "request," "will and desire;" or, if he "will and declare," "wish and request," "wish and desire," "most heartily beseech," "" order and direct," "12 (a) "authorize and empower," "13

And so, where a testator gave a sum of money to trustees "to pay the income yearly to his son for the support of himself and family, and the education of his children," it was held that the income was taken in trust by the son, and that the wife and children could enforce its appropriation in part for their support. Technical language is not necessary to create a trust. It is enough if such intention is apparent. Thus words of recommendation. request, entreaty, wish, or expectation, addressed to a devisee or legatee. will make him a trustee for those persons in favor of whom such expressions are used; provided that, from the construction of the whole will, such is the apparent intention of the testator, and provided that he has pointed out with sufficient clearness and certainty both the subjectmatter and the object of the trust. Thus, in Massey v. Sherman, Amb. 520, a testator devised property to his wife, not doubting that she would dispose of the same to and among his children as she should please, it was held to be a trust for the children. See also Macey v. Shurmer, 1 Atk. 389; Wynne v. Hawkins, 1 Bro. Ch. 179; Parsons v. Baker, 18 Ves. 476; Malone v. O'Connor, 2 Lloyd & Goold, 465. And in Pierson v.

daughter A. I give [naming certain property] for the support of my daughter C." creates a trust.

Garnet, 2 Bro. Ch. 38, 226, a testator gave a residue to A., with his dying request that if A. died without issue he would dispose of it in a certain manner pointed out; but Lord Kenyon and Lord Thurlow held that, in the event, a trust was implied and created. And see Re O'Bierne, 1 Jon. & La. 352. And so in Malim v. Keighley, 2 Ves. Jr. 333, 359, a testator recommended a daughter, to whom he made a bequest, to dispose of it at her death in a certain manner, and it was held to create a trust. See also Paul v. Comptom, 8 Ves. 380; Ford v. Fowler, 3 Beav. 146; Knott v. Cottee, 16 Beav. 77; Cholmondeley v. Cholmondeley, 14 Sim. 590. But in Meggison v. Moore, 2 Ves. Jr. 630, the word "recommend," under the peculiar circumstances of the case, was held not to create a trust; but the case throws no particular light upon the principle. In Bird v. Wade, 3 Ves. & B. 198, 2 Ves. 467, the testator added to his bequest of a part of his property that it was his will and desire that the bequest be left entirely to her disposal among such of her relations as she may think proper. The devisee having died without disposing of the property, it was held to be a trust for her next of kin. See also Brest v. Offley, 1 Ch. R. 246; Harding v. Glyn, 1 Atk. 469; Earl of Bute v. Stuart, 2 Eden, 87; 1 Bro. P. C. Taml. 476; Wright v. Atkyns, 19 Ves. 299; Cooper, 111; Cary v. Cary, 2 Sch. & Lef. 173, 189; Forbes v. Bale, 3 Mer. 441; Horwood v. West, 1 Sim. & St. 387.

In Prevost v. Clarke, 2 Madd. 458, a testatrix gave property to her daughter, and "entreated" her son-in-law, husband of the daughter, if he should not have children by her daughter and should survive her, that he would leave any part of the property that came to him to her other children and grandchildren at his decease. These words were held to create a contingent trust for her other children and grandchildren. So in Pilkington v. Boughey, 12 Sim. 114, where a testator recited in his will that he had purchased an estate for a particular purpose, and then devised it to certain individuals in trust, and "trusted" that they would apply it to such purposes as they knew he would most approve of, it was held to be a trust. In Foley v. Parry, 2 My. & K. 138, a testator gave property to his wife for life, the remainder to his nephew for life, and then declared it to be his particular wish and request that his wife, or a third person, should superintend and take care of the education of his nephew; and it was determined that there was a trust in the life-estate given to the widow to maintain and educate the nephew until he was twenty-one. See also same case in 5 Sim. 138. So more doubtful expressions have been held to create trusts: as "I desire him to give," Mason v. Limbury, cited Vernon v. Vernon, Amb. 4; "I hereby request," Nowlan v. Nelligan,

§ 113. On the other hand, it has been held that no trust was implied when property was given to a donee connected

1 Bro. Ch. 489; "I empower and authorize her to settle and dispose of the estate to such persons as she shall think fit by her will, confiding in her not to alienate the estate from my family," Griffiths v. Evans, 5 Beav. 241 (see also Brook v. Brook, 3 Sm. & Gif. 280; Alexander v. Alexander, 2 Jur. (N. S.) 898; "I advise him to settle," Parker v. Bolton, 5 L. J. (x. s.) Ch. 98; "My last wish, my dear daughter, is that you do give my granddaughter £1000," Hinxman v. Poynder, 5 Sim. 546; "require and entreat," Taylor v. George, 2 Ves. & B. 378; "trusting that he will preserve the same, so that, after his decease, it will go and be divided," etc., Baker v. Mosely, 12 Jur. 740; "under the conviction that he will dispose," etc., Barnes v. Grant, 26 L. J. Ch. 92, 2 Jur. (N. S.) 1127; "to apply the same," Saulsbury v. Denton, 3 K. & J. 392; "the other children may be allowed to participate," etc., Liddard v. Liddard, 6 Jur. (N. S.) 459, 28 Beav. 266. As before said, however, such expressions will not create a trust, if by the context no trust is intended to arise; as if a trust is at one time created, but by a codicil is revoked on account of the inconvenience, and there is a direction that the "property be disposed of for the good of the family," Alexander v. Alexander, 2 Jur. (N. S.) 898. The question in all cases is, is the devisee or legatee a beneficiary or a trustee of the gift bestowed upon him; and that depends upon the intention of the testator. But parol evidence of the intention of the testator cannot be introduced, Irvine v. Sullivan, L. R. S Eq. 673. If there is a direct trust, there is no doubt; if there are precatory words, then it remains to determine whether there is an imperative trust, or whether the words are merely suggestions to guide the discretion of the devisee in disposing of the property, the testator having implicit confidence and reliance in him, and leaving him the sole judge whether he will follow the suggestions or not. If the testator supposed that he was creating an imperative trust, whether express or imperative from precatory words, a trust will be raised because such is the intention; and if such trust fails because the purposes of the trust are uncertain, or the amount of the property of the trust is uncertain, or for any other reason, it will still be a trust; but it will result to the heirs-at-law, next of kin, or residuary legatees. See post, $$ 153-161. But such uncertainty in the objects of the trust, or in the persons to be benefited, or in the amount of the property to be subjected to the trust, or in the manner of applying it, are facts and circumstances, if they exist in the will itself, which are to be taken into consideration in construing it. See post, § 116; Barnard v. Minshull, 1 Johns, 287, 1 Jarm. on Wills, 359 (3d Lond. ed.). There is also another consideration. If there is an absolute gift in the first instance to the donee, mere precatory words will not in general annex a trust to the gift: as in Meredith v. Heneage, 1 Sim. 542, 10 Price, 306, the bequest was to the

with expression of kindness and good-will towards other persons, as with a hope that "he would continue it in the

donee, "unfettered and unlimited," followed by precatory words, and they were held not to create a trust. In Bonser v. Kinnear, 2 Gif. 195, there was a gift to the wife "for her sole use and benefit, she maintaining the children:" it was held to be a trust, the words implying the trust being a part of the gift. But in Wood v. Cox, 1 Keen, 317, there was a gift to the devisee "for his own use and benefit," trusting and wholly confiding in his honor to act in strict conformity to the testator's wishes. There were some other circumstances, and Lord Langdale held it to be an implied trust; but Lord Cottenham said that, to make the devisee a trustee, the words "for his own use and benefit" must be expunged from the will: 2 My. & Cr. 686; and see the judgment in the case of Irvine v. Sullivan, L. R. 8 Eq. 673. In Winch v. Brutton, 14 Sim. 379, and in Bardswell v. Bardswell, 9 id. 319, there were gifts to the use, benefit, and disposal, absolutely of the devisees, "nevertheless earnestly conjuring them," to dispose of them in a certain manner; and it was held that, under the form of the gifts there, there were no trusts. See also White v. Briggs, 15 Sim. 33; Fox v. Fox, 27 Beav. 301. So in Johnson v. Rowlands, 2 De G. & S., a gift to be disposed of as she shall think proper, followed by a recommendation, was held not to create a trust. The case of Williams v. Williams, 1 Sim. (N. S.) 358, is nearly to the same effect; and see Green v. Marsden, 1 Drew. 646. In some of these cases the element of uncertainty enters into the construction: see Bardswell v. Bardswell, 14 Sim. 379; Williams v. Williams, 1 Sim. (N. S.) 358; Webb v. Wools, 2 Sim. (N. S.) 267, was a strong case in this respect. The gift was to the wife, her executors, administrators, and assigns, "to and for her and their sole use and benefit, upon the fullest trust and confidence that she will dispose of the same," &c. It was said that to allow the latter words to create a trust would be to counteract the former words. In other cases where the gift was in nearly the same words but "in full confidence that she will bestow it, on her decease, to my children," &c., Le Marchant v. Le Marchant, L. R. 18 Eq. 414; Curnick v. Tucker, L. R. 17 Eq. 320, it was held that the widow took a life-estate, with a power to appoint among the children: Ware v. Mallard, 21 L. J. Ch. 355; 16 Jur. 492; Gully v. Cregoe, 24 Beav. 185. If the words of gift to the wife may be construed as making the gift to her sole and separate use, independent of her husband, the trust may be sustained: Cholmondeley v. Cholmondeley, 14 Sim. 590. See also Stubbs v. Sargon, 2 Keen, 255, 3 My. & Cr. 513; but see Green v. Marsden, 1 Drew. 646. If the expressions are mere statements of good-will towards other persons, a trust will not be implied: Buggins v. Yeats, 8 Vin. Ab. 72, Pl. 27; Sale v. Moore, 1 Sim. 534; Hoy v. Master, 6 Sim. 568; Reeves v. Baker, 18 Beav. 372; Lechmere v. Lavie, 2 My. & K. 197; Abraham v. Almon, 1 Russ. 509;

family;"¹ or, with a request, "to distribute it among such members of the donee's family" as he should deem most deserving;² or, "in full confidence that the donee would devise it to such heirs of the testator's father as she might think best deserved a preference; "³ or with a recommendation that the donee "would consider the testator's relations; "⁴ or, where the recommendation was "to consider certain persons, "⁵ "to be kind to them," 6 "to remember

Harland v. Trigg, 1 Bro. Ch. 142; Curtis v. Rippon, 5 Madd. 434. But where a testator gave property to his son, and ordered him to take care and provide for his daughter, it was held that she was entitled to a provision: Broad v. Bevan, 1 Russ. 511, n. It must be repeated, that in many cases the element of uncertainty as to the property to be affected by the words of recommendation has entered largely into the construction given to wills by courts; and in that, as in most other circumstances attending the construction of a will, each case must depend upon the particular words of the will and the context in which they are found. See Lefroy v. Flood, 4 Ir. Ch. 1, 12; Wynne v. Hawkins, 1 Bro. Ch. 179; Horwood v. West, 1 Sim. & St. 387; Huskisson v. Bridge, 15 Jur. 738; Young v. Martin, 2 Y. & C. Ch. 582, Ex parte Payne, id. 636; Knight v. Knight, 3 Beav. 148; Knight v. Boughton, 11 Cl. & Fin. 513; 12 Beav. 312; Bonser v. Kinnear, 2 Gif. 195; Quayle v. Davidson, 12 Moore, P. C. 268; Maud v. Maud, 27 Beav. 615. But see Malone v. O'Connor, 2 Lloyd & Goold, 465. Of course, if no trust is implied from the words of recommendation used in the will, the donee takes the absolute beneficial as well as legal interest to the extent to which it is limited. Stubbs v. Sargon, 2 Keen, 255; 3 My. & Cr. 507; Gloucester v. Wood, 3 Hare, 131; 1 H. L. Cas. 272; Briggs v. Penny, 3 De G. & S. 547; 3 Mac. & G. 546; Fowler v. Garlike, 1 R. & My. 232. But if a trust is intended, but it is so uncertain that it cannot be executed, it will result to the heir or next of kin, or residuary legatee or devisee, according to the circumstances.

other similar words found so often in wills, express a state of mind in the testator, and they generally operate as a direct gift, devise, or bequest; but they are frequently so used that it is doubtful whether they are absolute directions, or mere suggestions to be acted on or not according to the discretion of the donce. Every case must depend upon the construction of the particular will under consideration. (a) The

(a) In Hill v. Hill, [1897] 1 Q. B. 483, 486, Lord Esher, M. R., said: "I have the strongest conviction that, when the court is called upon to place a construction upon words spoken or written for the purpose of adjudicating upon them, the same rule applies in courts of equity as in courts of law, namely, that the words must have their ordinary signification, unless in the particular case there is something which obliges the court to give them a meaning other than their ordinary meaning. The words which we have to consider in this case are words of request. Words of request in their ordinary meaning convey a mere request, and do not convey a legal obligation of any kind either at law or in equity. But in any particular case there may be circumstances which would oblige the court to say that such words have a meaning beyond their ordinary meaning, and import a legal obligation." Lord St. Leonards in his Law of Property, p. 375, says: "It is not an unwholesome rule, that if a testator really means his recommendation to be imperative, he should express his intention in a mandatory form; but this conclusion was not arrived at without a considerable struggle." The recent authorities tend strongly to recognize this rule. In Williams v. Williams, [1897] 2 Ch. 12, 18, Lindley, L. J., said: "In each case the whole will must be looked at; and unless it appears from the whole will that an obligation was intended to be imposed, no obligation will be held to exist. . . . The term 'precatory' only has reference to forms of expression. Not only in wills but in daily life an expression may be imperative in its real meaning although couched in language which is not imperative in form. A request is often a polite form of command. . . . A condition of this kind is enforceable in equity, and need not amount to a commonlaw condition involving a forfeiture." In Colton v. Colton, 127 U.S. 300, 312, Mr. J. Matthews said: "If there be a trust sufficiently expressed and capable of enforcement by a court of equity, it does not disparage, much less defeat it, to call it 'precatory.' The question of its existence, after all, depends upon the intention of the testator as expressed by the words he has used, according to their natural meaning, modified only by the context and the situation and cirpoint really to be determined in all these cases is whether, looking at the whole context of the will, the testator intended to impose an obligation on his legatee to carry his wishes into effect, or whether, having expressed his wishes, he intended to leave it to the legatee to act on them or not at his discretion. It is doubtful if there exist any formula for bringing to a direct test the question, whether words of "request," "hope," or "recommendation," are or are not to cumstances of the testator when he used them."

The statements of the author in the text (supra, §§ 112, 113), apart from the qualifications here stated, appear, in following the older authorities, to go too far in holding that particular words in a will created a trust. While confidence, if the context shows that a trust is intended, may make a trust, yet if, upon construing the whole will, the confidence is merely that the legatee will do what is right in disposing of the property, a binding trust is not imposed. Raynor, 7 App. Cas. 321, uncertainty as to the nature and amount of the property given over was held a strong indication that words of desire were not intended to be imperative. When an absolute ownership is clearly conferred, a trust will not be inferred; nor can a trust be implied merely from the words indicating the motives which induced the gift. Giles v. Anslow, 128 Ill. 187, 196; Randall v. Randall, 135 Ill. 398; Bain v. Buff, 76 Va. 371; Seamonds v. Hodge, 36 W. Va. 304. Warner v. Bates, 98 Mass. 276; Williams v. Williams, 1 Sim. (N. s.) 358, by Sir Knight Bruce. In Wright v. Atkyns, 1 T. & R. 157, Lord Eldon said that in order to determine whether the words create a trust or not, it is matter of observation, - first, that the words should be imperative : secondly, that the subject must be certain; and thirdly, that the object must be as certain as the subject. See Wood v. Cox, 2 My. & Cr. 684: Pope v. Pope, 10 Sim. 1. In Knight v. Knight, 3 Beav. 148, Lord Langdale said, "It is not every wish or expectation which a testator may express, nor every act which he may wish his successors to do, that can or ought to be executed and enforced as a trust; and in the infinite variety of expressions employed, and of cases which arise, there is often the greatest difficulty in determining whether the act desired or recommended is an act which the testator intended to be executed as a trust. In the construction of wills it is the duty of the court to give effect to the intention of the testator, whenever it can be ascertained." Then, after stating that in decreeing trusts wills have been made rather than executed, and that caution is necessary, his lordship goes on to say, "that as a general rule it has been laid down that when property is given absolutely to any person, and the same person is by the giver, who has power to command, recommended or entreated or wished to dispose of the property in favor of another, the recommendation or entreaty or wish shall be held to create a trust: first, if the words are so used that, upon the whole, they ought to be construed as imperative; secondly, if the subject of the wish be certain; and, thirdly, if the objects or persons intended to have the benefit of the recommendation or wish be also certain." Same case under the name of Knight v. Boughton, 11 Cl. & Fin. 548.

The learned editors to Hill on Trustees, p. 73 (4th Am. ed.), have examined the American and English cases, and state the following rules, which seem to be fairly deducible from the adjudged cases:—

- 1. Precatory words in a will, equally with direct fiduciary expressions, will create a trust; the wish of a testator, like the request of a sovereign, is equivalent to a command.
- 2. Discretionary expressions which leave the application or non-application of the subject of the devise to the objects contemplated by the testator entirely to the caprice of the devisee, will prevent a trust from attaching; but a mere discretion in regard to the method of application of the subject, or the selection of the object, will not be inconsistent with a trust.
- 3. Precatory words will not be construed to confer an absolute gift on the first taker, merely because of failure or uncertainty in the object or subject of the devise.
- 4. But failure or uncertainty will be an element to guide the court in construing words of doubtful significancy adversely to a trust.

state a few general rules that lead to the construction of particular wills.

§ 115. However strong the language of recommendation or request may be, a trust will not be implied if the testator declare that such is not his intention, as if he declares that the gift shall be "unfettered or unlimited," or if he "recommends but does not enjoin."1 And so a trust will not be implied if such a construction of the precatory words would render them repugnant to, or inconsistent with, other parts of the same instrument.2 If construing a recommendation or the expression of a wish into a trust would contradict in terms the preceding bequest, a trust will not be implied.3 As if the gift is absolute, and of all the testator's property, and of both the legal and equitable interest in it, words of recommendation will not cut it down into a trust; or, in the words of Kindersley, V. C., "where the later words of a sentence in a will go to cut down an absolute gift contained in the first part of a sentence, and are inconsistent with such gift, the court will, if it can, give effect to the absolute gift." 4 The same rule was stated by Lord Cottenham thus: "Though' recommendation' may in some cases amount to a direction and create a trust, yet that being a flexible term, if such a construction of it be inconsistent with any positive provision in the will, it is to be considered as a recommendation and nothing more." 5 The flexible term must give way to the inflexible, if the two cannot stand together as they are expressed.

§ 116. Again, a trust will not be implied from precatory words where it would be impracticable for a court to deal with and execute it; as if a testator should devise a house to his wife, and express a wish that his sister should live with her, for the sister takes no interest in the house, and a court cannot decree two persons to live together. So where a testator devised a dwelling-house and an annuity to a niece, for the support of herself and her nephews and nieces then living with her, and of such other persons as she from time to time might request to be members of her family.2 Nor will a trust be implied if there is uncertainty as to the property to be subjected to the trust,3 or as to the persons to be benefited by the trust,4 or as to the manner in which the property is to be applied. Lord Alvanley stated the rule to be "that a trust would be implied only where the testator points out the objects, the property, and the way in which it shall go." 5 If the subjects and objects of the supposed trust are left uncertain by a testator, the court will infer that no obligation was intended to be imposed upon the donee, but that the whole disposition was left to his discretion.¹ So if a mere power to appoint is given to the first taker, to be exercised or not at his discretion, no trust will be implied.² And no trust will be implied, if, taking the whole instrument and all the circumstances together, it is more probable than otherwise that the testator intended to communicate a discretion and not an obligation.³

§ 117. There is another variety of cases, where trusts are sometimes implied from the words used, though an express trust is not declared, as where property is given to a parent or other person standing in the relation of parent, and some directions or expressions are used in regard to the maintenance of his family or children. The question to be decided in this class of cases is, as in the others, did the settler intend to create a trust and impose an obligation, or did he merely state incidentally the motive which led to an absolute gift ? 4 In the following cases a trust was clearly implied by the court; where property was given, that "he may dispose thereof for the benefit of himself and children," 5 or, "for his own use and benefit, and the maintenance and education of his children," 6 "for the maintenance of himself and family,"7 "for the purpose of raising, clothing, and educating" the children of the legatee,8 "at the disposal of the legatee for herself and her children,"9 or "all overplus towards her support and her family," or to "A. for the education and advancing in life of her children." In Byne v. Blackburn, it was held that the fact that the property was given to a trustee instead of to the parent was sufficient to show that no sub-trust was intended; but this case is in conflict with other cases; and in Chase v. Chase, where property was given to trustees to pay the income yearly to a son for the support of himself and family and the education of his children, it was held that the income was taken in trust by the son as sub-trustee, and that the wife and children could in equity enforce its appropriation in part for their support. Where a testator gave his wife the entire

In this case Chief-Justice Bigelow said: "The intent of the testator to give the benefit of the income of the trust fund created by his will to the wife and children of his son Philip, as well as to his son, is clear and unequivocal. It was intended for their joint support, and for the education of the children. The only question arising on the construction of the will is, whether the income of the trust fund, when received by the son, is held absolutely by him to be disposed of at his discretion, or whether he takes it in trust so that the wife and children can seek to enforce its due appropriation, in part for their benefit, in a court of equity. We cannot doubt that the latter is the true construction; otherwise it would be in the power of the son to defeat the purpose of the testator, by depriving his family of the support and education which was expressly provided for by the will. The adjudicated cases recognize the rule that where income arising from property is left to a person for the maintenance of children, he will be entitled to receive it for that purpose only so long as he continues properly to maintain them. It can make no difference in the application of the principle, that the person who is to receive the income also takes a beneficial interest in it for his own support. He is not thereby authorized to appropriate the whole of it to his own use, and deprive the other beneficiaries of the share to which they are entitled. Hadow v. Hadow, 9 Sim. 438; Jubber v. Where a testator gave to his wife all his personal property for her benefit and support and the benefit of his son, it was held to be a trust in the widow, the income of one-half for her own benefit and of the other half for the support of the son. 8 Loring v. Loring, 100 Mass. 340; Jubber v. Jubber, 9 Sim. 503. When a testator has stated the motive which leads to the gift, the inquiry arises, is the motive or purpose of the gift so stated that the donee is under an obligation to apply the gift, or any part of it, to the benefit of another person? There are three classes of cases: (1) When a complete and obligatory trust is created in the first donee; as a gift to A. "to dispose of among her children," or for bringing up her children, gives no interest to A., but creates a complete trust. Blakeney r. Blakeney, 6 Sim. 52; Pilcher v. Randall, 9 Week. R. 251; Taylor v. Bacon, 8 Sim. 100; Chambers v. Atkins, 1 Sim. & St. 3-2; Fowler v. Hunter, 3 Y. & Jer. 506; In re Comac's Trust, 12 Jur. 470; Barnes v. Grant, 26 L. J. Ch. 92; Jubber v. Littlefield, 35 Maine, 439; Wright v. Miller, S N. Y. 9. (2) There is a large class of cases where the first donee has a discretion to apply a part or the whole of the gift to a third person. This discretion, if exercised in good faith, will not be interfered with by the court, and the property unapplied by the donee will belong beneficially to him. Thus in Hornby v. Gilbert, Jac. 351, where a gift was made to A., to be laid out and expended by her at her discretion, for or towards the education of her son, and that she should not be liable to account to her son or any other person, it was held that the property belonged to her beneficially, subject to a trust to apply a part to the education of the son during his minority. And so where income is given for life, to be applied to the education and maintenance of children in the discretion of the donee, the income must be paid to the person named, and the part unexpended belongs to such person beneficially. Gilbert v. Bennett, 10 Sim. 371; Hadow v. Hadow, 9 Sim. 438; Leach v. Leach, 13 Sim. 304; Brown v. Paul, 1 Sim. (N. s.) 92; Bowden v. Laing, 14 Sim. 113; Longmore v. Elcum, 2 Y. & C. Ch. 363. And if the interest or income of legacies to the children is given to a parent, to be applied to the maintenance and education of the children, the parent will take the surplus beneficially if he performs his duty, unless a contrary intention is expressed: and providing for other trustees in case of the parent's death does not indicate a contrary intention. Brown v. Paul, 1 Sim. (x. s.) 103. Sometimes the gifts to a parent are so expressed that the parent takes the property in trust, subject to a large discretion; and sometimes the parent takes the property for life, subject to a power of appointment for the children. The latter construction is the more favored by the courts. See Crockett v. Crockett, 2 Phill. 553; Gully v. Cregoe, 24 Beav. 185; Hart v. Tribe, 18 Beav. 215; Ware v. Mallard, 21 L. J. Ch. 355, 16 Jur. 492. In Raikes v. Ward, 1 Hare, 445, a gift was made to a wife "to the intent she may dispose of the same for the benefit of herself and our children as she may deem most advantageous," and the court determined that the children had no absolute interest, but that their interests were subject to her honest discretion. Connolly v. Farrell, 8 Beav. 347; Woods v. Woods, 1 My. & Cr. 401; Costababie v. Costababie, 6 Hare, 410; Cowman v. Harrison, 10 Hare, 234; Smith v. Smith, 2 Jur. (N. s.) 967; Cooper v. Thornton, 3 Bro. Ch. 96; Robinson v. Tickell, 8 Ves. 142; Wood v. Richardson, 4 Beav. 174; Pratt v. Church, id. 177. (3) The third class of cases contains those in which it is held that the primary donee is absolutely entitled to the whole interest given, without any rights in third persons, as in Brown v. Casamajor, 4 Ves. 498, where a legacy was given to a father "the better to enable him to provide for his children." These and similar words merely express the motive of the gift, but import or imply no obligation or discretion which courts can enforce or control. Hammond v. Neame, 1 Swanst. 35; Benson v. Whittam, 5 Sim. 22; Thorp v. Owen, 2 Hare, 607; Andrews v. Partington, 3 Bro. Ch. 60. See also Biddles v. Biddles, 16 Sim. 1; Berkley v. Swinbourne, 6 Sim. 613; Oakes v. § 118. In cases where a trust for the maintenance of children is implied, the person bound by the trust is regarded in the same light as the guardian of a lunatic or of a minor: 1 he is entitled to receive the fund, and can give a valid receipt for it; 2 and, so long as he discharges the trust imposed upon him, he is entitled to the surplus for his own benefit, nor is he obliged to account for the past application of the fund.3 And the future application is very much according to his discretion, provided he educates and supports the children reasonably, according to their position in the world and the intention of the testator.4 The court, in cases where a question is raised, will order payment to be made to him, with liberty to the wife and children to apply for further orders; 5 if he becomes unfit to educate the children, the court can apportion the fund, and prevent him from receiving the portion necessary for the children and family; 6 and if he assigns his interest in the fund, the court can apportion it, and set apart what is needed for the support and education of the children, and give the remainder to his assignee. 7 Of course, if there are no children, or if they die, the person bound by the trust takes the whole benefit of the fund.8 But if the devisee die before the chil-latterly courts are not so astute to discover and enforce trusts from precatory words, and are more inclined to find in the words the mere statement of a motive, or the vesting of a discretion in the donee.

dren, the trust remains for them. 1 The trust also ceases as to children who become forisfamiliated, or cease to be members of the trustee's family, and, by marriage or otherwise, become members of another home or establishment; for it would not generally be implied that a testator intended 2 an income for the support and education of his family to be divided up into as many families as he left children.3 Whether a child's right to maintenance under such a will ceases by the fact of his attaining twenty-one years of age is in many cases an open question.4 On the one side it may be said that the trust ought not to continue after the child is of age, and is educated and prepared to acquire a livelihood for himself.⁵ On the other hand, if the child is willing to remain at home, and there is no reasonable objection to his so remaining, or if it is a female with no other protection and means of support, it would seem that the trust ought not to cease on the mere ground that the child has attained twenty-one.6 The great majority of cases will, of course, depend upon the particular words used in the particular will, and they will be so construed by the court as to carry out the intentions of the testator. The a trust is to a widow for life for the support of herself and the support and education of her children, and the property is to go to them absolutely upon her death, one of them, on coming of age, cannot call for his proportion, even with the concurrence of the widow, if such transfer would so diminish the fund as to endanger the rights of the other children to support and education during the life of the widow. In such case the court has ordered a part of such child's share to be paid over on his undertaking to account for the income if needed, and on the footing that the residue should be retained for security, that the income should be paid over if required. The children have such an interest in the fund given for their maintenance that it cannot be reached by a creditor's bill or trustee process against the parent or other person charged with the obligation of maintaining the children or family; that is, if the fund is given to a person for a particular purpose, it cannot be diverted from that purpose by creditors of the donee.²

§ 119. But no trust is implied where the words simply state the motive leading to the gift, as where the gift is to a person "to enable him to maintain the children," or an absolute gift is made, and the motive stated "that he may support himself and children," or a gift is made absolutely for her own use and benefit, "having full confidence in her sufficient and judicious provision for the children." When a testator gave to his wife "the use, benefit, and profits of his real estate for life, and all his personal estate, absolutely, having full confidence that she will leave the surplus to be divided justly among my children," it was held that the widow took the personal estate absolutely subject to no trust, and that the word "surplus" meant what was left consumed or undisposed of by her. that the mere expression of a purpose for which a gift is made does not render the purpose obligatory. Even if the purpose of the gift was to benefit the donee solely, he can claim the gift without applying it to the purpose named, whether the expression be obligatory in form or not. Thus if a gift be made to a person to purchase a ring,1 or an annuity, 2 or a house, 3 or to set him up in business, 4 or for his maintenance and education, or to bind him apprentice, 6 or towards the printing of a book, the profits of which to be for his benefit,7 the legatee may claim the money without applying, or binding himself to apply, it to the purpose specified, even although there is an express declaration that he shall not otherwise receive the money.8 These cases go upon the principle that a court of equity will not compel a legatee or other party to do what he may undo the next moment; for as soon as such party has received his ring, or house, or annuity, he may sell it or give up his business.9 And where money is given to trustees, and a discretion is given to them how much and in what manner they shall apply it, the cestui que trust has no right to more than the trustees see fit to apply. 10

§ 120. If a trust is implied, it is governed in some respects by rules entirely different from the rules that govern a direct trust. Generally in a direct trust the trustee takes no beneficial interest in himself, but in an implied trust the trustee may take the whole beneficial interest for life, with a right even to expend some part of the principal fund. Thus, where an estate was devised to A. and her heirs in the fullest confidence that at her decease she would devise the property to the heirs of the testator, Lord Eldon held that A. had all the rights in the estate of a tenant for life, and so it was also held in the House of Lords. But where a testator devised an estate to his wife and her heirs, under the firm conviction that she would dispose of and manage the same for the benefit of her children, it was held that the widow was not entitled to a beneficial interest as tenant for life.

§ 121. Trusts sometimes arise by implication from the provisions of a will, in order to carry out the testator's intention. As where a testator leaves property to A. with the request that he shall leave it to B., a trust in favor of B. is created, which is not affected by the death of A. before the testator.3 A direction to continue the testator's business creates a trust.4 So where a testator gave his wife an annuity of $1000 a year, to be paid her by a trustee named, to enable her to live comfortably and to support and educate her children, and if in any year said sum were insufficient, the trustee was to pay her an additional sum not exceeding $1000. The testator gave a few legacies, and then gave the remainder of his estate to his daughters, and gave nothing to the trustee in words, but he authorized the trustee to sell certain of his real estate, and also to sell the personal property not specifically devised. The personal property was only sufficient to pay the debts of Sim. 229; Rudland v. Crozier, 2 De G. & J. 143; Cowper v. Mantell, 22 Beav. 231.

the testator, and the trustee had no funds from which to pay the annuity to the wife. It was held by the court that the trustee took the real estate in trust by implication, that the daughters took the remainder after the trusts were executed. and that the widow could enforce the payment of the annuity by bill in equity against the trustee. 1 So if a testator direct his real estate to be sold, or if he charge it with the payment of debts or legacies, it may descend to an heir, or pass to a devisee, but the court will consider the direction as an implied declaration of trust, and enforce its execution in the hands of those to whom it has come.2 So a condition annexed to a devise which, being broken, might work a forfeiture of the estate, has in equity been construed into an implied trust, and enforced as such; as where a house was devised to A. for life, "he keeping the same in repair," or where an estate is given to one in fee, "he paying the testator's debts within a year." 3 Sometimes it is very difficult to determine whether or no a trust ought to arise by implication, as where there is an absolute devise to C. and conjoined therewith expressions indicating a trust in E.4 Where a testator gave his wife a life estate and then left it to her discretion to give such aid to his relations as she might deem proper and just of her own will, it was held that there was no sufficient expression of desire to create a trust.⁵ So where a testator gave his estate to his daughter, saying, "I enjoin upon her to make such provision for my grandchild . . . in such manner and at such times and in such amounts as she may judge to be expedient and conducive to the welfare of said grandchild, and her own sense of justice and Christian duty shall dictate," it was held that there was no trust.1 A gift "relying" on the donee to do so and so creates no trust.2 Giving the wife the use or proceeds of property after expenses are paid, and providing for sale and distribution after her death, creates a trust, and gives the wife merely a life right to the rents and profits.3 An executor is always a trustee of the personalty, and the jurisdiction of equity courts over trusts gives them a right to construe wills whenever necessary to guide a trustee.4 Wherever the duties imposed on the executors are active, and render possession of the estate reasonably necessary, they will be deemed trustees.⁵ But merely calling an executor "trustee" in a will which creates no trust estate or duties will not make him a testamentary trustee.6

§ 122. Again, courts of equity will imply a trust from the contracts of parties, although there are no words of trust in the instrument; ⁷ as if a person for a valuable consideration agrees to settle a particular estate upon another, ⁸ or if he agrees to sell an estate to another, ⁹ the settlor or vendor becomes a trus-

Where money is deposited in a commercial bank, no trust in general arises, but only a relation of debtor and creditor; when, however, the money is paid into bank for a specified purpose other than that of a loan to the bank, a fiduciary relation is created, and some cases go so far as to hold that after the bank has gone into insolvency, money so paid may be recovered from the assignee in preference to the general creditors. In an article upon Irrevocable Trusts, in 11 Jurid. Rev. 55, 65, A. M. Hamilton, Esq., says of the law of Scotland: "Of the obligatory and irrevocable nature of an antenuptial contract there is no room for doubt; but a post-nuptial settlement admittedly is less onerous, and in certain aspects is no substitute for an ante-nuptial contract. On this account it has been attempted to treat such contracts as equivalent in a question of revocability to a voluntary trust. But it may now be considered settled that while in a question with creditors it may be right to do so, intra familiam they have all the force of ante-nuptial contracts. A unilateral deed may be so referred to in a marriage contract as to become a part of it."

§ 124. It has been seen from the preceding chapters that trusts are created by the express dispositions of parties, or they are implied by courts from the words used in such ex press dispositions. There is another class of trusts which result in law from the acts of parties, whether they intended to create a trust or not, and they are aptly designated as resulting trusts (a). They are sometimes called presumptive trusts, because the law presumes them to be intended by the parties from the nature and character of their transactions with each other, although the general foundation of this kind of trusts is the natural equity that arises when parties do certain things. Thus, if one pays the purchase-money of an estate, and takes the title-deed in the name of another, in the absence of all evidence of intention, the law presumes a trust, from the natural equity that he who pays the money for property ought to enjoy the beneficial interest. The statute of frauds does not affect the creation of these trusts, for the reason that, where there is no evidence of intention, it could not be expected that a declaration of intention in writing, properly signed, would be made or could be produced.

§ 125. Lord Chancellor Hardwicke said that a resulting trust arising by operation of law existed: (1) when an estate was purchased in the name of one person and the consideration came from another; (2) when a trust was declared only as to part, and nothing was said as to the residue, that residue remaining undisposed of, remained to the heir-at-law; and he observed that he did not know of any other instances, unless in case of fraud. In this chapter resulting trusts will be examined under five heads: (1) when the purchaser of an estate pays the purchase-money and takes the title in the name of a third person; (2) where a person standing in a fiduciary relation uses fiduciary funds to purchase property, and takes the title in his own name; (3) where an estate is conveyed upon trusts, which fail, or are not declared, or are illegal; (4) when the legal title to property is conveyed, and there is no reason to infer that it was the intention to convey the beneficial interest; and (5) where voluntary conveyances are made, or conveyances without consideration.

§ 126. Where, upon a purchase of property, the conveyance of the legal title is taken in the name of one person, while the consideration or a part of it is given or paid by another, not in the way of a loan to the grantee, the parties being strangers to each other, a resulting trust immediately arises from the transaction (unless it would be enforcing a fraud to raise a resulting trust 1), and the person named in the conveyance will be a trustee for the party from whom the consideration proceeds.² In a Minnesota case the court said when the means of identification fail, as when an executor converts an estate into money and mixes it with the general mass of his own money, and there is no identifying the particular money of the trust, the distributees or legatees have no preference over his other creditors, but they must prove their claims.1 If, however, a trustee purchase an estate with trust funds, and add funds of his own to the purchasemoney, a trust will result to the cestui que trust; and the burden will be on the trustee to show the amount of his own funds in the purchase, otherwise the cestui que trust will take the whole.2 If the purchase is partly with trust funds and partly not, the cestui has a lien on the whole property for the amount of the fund misapplied.3 It has been said in some cases that the cestui que trust has no interest in the property purchased with the trust fund in the name of the trustee, but only a lien on the property in the nature of a vendor's lien for the purchase-money, with a right to a decree for a sale to reimburse the trust fund. This is certainly one of the rights of the cestui que trust, if he elects to proceed in that manner, and he may hold the trustee responsible, if there is a loss on such sale. On the other hand, the trustee can make no profit to himself by dealing with the trust fund; 5 and, if he makes a purchase with it, the cestui que trust can elect to treat the property as a part of the trust property, and he is entitled to all the advantages of the speculation or investment thus made with the property in the name of the trustee. 1 No trust results to the holder of property (II.) from the fact that money has been given to B. by C. in order that B. may purchase the said property. H. cannot offer a deed and demand the money.2 So where A. sells land in which he (A.) has an interest as well as E., A. giving a bond for the making of a future good title to the whole, and then investing the money received in other property, there is no trust for E. in this property; the purchasemoney was obtained by A., not in consideration for E.'s interest in the land, but in consideration for the promise made by A. in his bond.3 And if trust-money is expended not in the purchase of land but in improvements upon it, no trust results to the owner of the money.4 If one who stands in no fiduciary relation to another appropriates the other's money, and invests it in real estate or other property, no trust results to the owner of the money.⁵ There is no doubt of this principle upon all the cases, but there is some question in the books as to what is a fiduciary relation, as where a clerk pilfered money from the store of his employer and invested it in real estate, it was held that there was no such resulting trust; that the employer could compel a conveyance of the land.⁶ But where a clerk in a bank embezzled money, and invested it in stocks in the names of his sisters as mere volunteers, it was held that a trust resulted to the owners of the money, and that equity would execute it by compelling a conveyance;7 and this would seem to be the better opinion, as a clerk certainly holds a confidential relation to his employer. In Newton v. Porter, it was held that the holders of the proceeds of stolen property might be charged as trustees for the owner, and there would seem to be no principle to the contrary. It may depend, however, upon the extent to which the clerk is trusted. In Lehmann v. Rothbarth the husband of a trustee taking upon himself the management of the estate was held to account as trustee to the cestui for funds coming to him as self-constituted agent for the true trustee. § 129. If a person standing in a fiduciary relation makes use of his position to purchase an interest in the trust property with his own funds, as a reversion, a junior or senior mortgage, or other interest from a third person; or if he purchase other property so immediately connected with the trust estate, that it must be used with the trust estate, and the independent ownership of which would seriously affect the use and value of the trust property, he cannot retain the same for his own benefit, but he must hold it upon a resulting trust for his beneficiary.³ The prohibition of the purchase of trust property by the trustee does not depend on any question of fraud, but is made absolute to avoid the possibility of fraud.⁴ The temptation of self-interest is too powerful and insinuating to be trusted. A trustee must put himself in a position where his private profit will oppose the interests of the estate. If a trustee buys an outstanding claim against the trust property, the transaction will be treated as a payment only, and he will be allowed only what he gave.² Railway directors cannot deal with the property for their individual benefit, and a sale of it to any one of the board would be voidable in equity at the instance of any one interested in the road.3 A trustee may not buy for himself an outstanding title to the estate.4 One in a fiduciary position must not so conduct himself as to bring his private interests in conflict with the duties of his office. If an administrator buys land sold to pay a debt due his intestate, the heirs and distributees can elect to take the land and allow him his bid.⁵ A purchaser from a trustee who has acquired the trust property stands in no better position than the trustee, if said purchaser has notice of the facts. 6 A mere agent, who purchases a reversion in the lands of his principal at a public sale from third persons with his own money, will not be held as a trustee, unless he purchase under some agreement to that effect;7 and the same rule applies to a tenant in common.8

mortgage, or other personal interest, in the name of a third person, the equitable ownership results to the person from whom the consideration moves; but it is said that a resulting trust cannot be set up in personal property perishable in its nature.

§ 131. Nor can a resulting trust be set up if it would break in upon the policy of the law, or a public statute; 3 as if an alien forbidden to hold land should pay the purchasemoney and take the deed to a stranger, a resulting trust in his favor would not be enforced by the courts. 4 (a) But a

But if such conveyance is not intended as a fraud upon the law, but is taken by an agent or attorney of the alien in his own name without authority, equity will protect the rights of the alien. Austin v. Brown, 6 Paige, 448; McCow v. Galbrath, 7 Rich. Law, 74.
- (a) In Texas, it seems that a resulting trust does not arise for an alien whose money another invests in land, although he may recover a judgment for the money itself by suit, and such judgment may be a lien upon the land. Zundell v. Gess, 73 Tex. 144. Equity neither creates nor enforces a resulting trust contrary to the ascertained intent of the parties. Morris v. Clare, 132 Mo. 232, 236; Ward v. Ward, 59 Conn. 188; Zimmerman v. Barber, 176 Penn. St. 1. A resulting trust may, however, arise in a surplus remaining after the purposes of the trust have failed or are fully accomplished. See Smith v. Cooke, [1891] A. C. 297; Bork v. Martin, 132 N. Y. 280; Buffington v. Maxam, 152 Mass. 477; Ripley v. Seligman, 88 Mich. 177; Meyer v. Holle, 83 Texas, 623; Cagwin v. Buerkle, 55 Ark. 5. Thus, an assignment for creditors, which contains no ultimate declaration of trust for the assignors, gives rise to a resulting trust in the surplus in favor of the assignors, in case there is more than enough to pay the debts. Smith v. Cooke, supra; 45 Ch. D. 38; 62 L. T. 456. If the donee is dead when a slave, who could not acquire property, purchased land in the name of a free person with the assent of his master, and afterwards becoming free, the resulting trust was enforced in his favor; 1 and so if the disability of the alien is removed by naturalization or otherwise, he may enforce a trust created while he was under disability.2

§ 132. Lord Hardwicke doubted whether the application of the rule was not confined to a single purchaser; 3 but it has been expressly decided and long acted upon, that if several make the purchase, pay the consideration, but take the title in the name of a stranger, the trust will result to them jointly.4 The same rule applies if several pay the consideration, and take the title to one of their number. If the parties contribute unequally to the payment of the consideration, the trust results to each of them in proportion to the amount paid by each.⁵ In these cases it is settled that a general contribution towards a purchase is not sufficient; but the person claiming a resulting trust must show that he paid some specific sum, for some distinct interest in, or aliquot part of, the estate, as for a specific share, as one-half or one-quarter, or other particular fraction of the whole; or for a particular interest, as for an estate for life or years, or in remainder in the whole estate. And where the money of another in the hands of the purchaser is his only reliance for procuring the title, he cannot escape from a resulting trust by paying a little of his own money at the time, and the remainder in trust-money afterward. If two agree to purchase, and one furnishes all the money and takes the title to himself, no trust results to the other.2 And so if two agree to purchase, and one pays the whole consideration-money, and the title is taken to the two, no trust results to the one who paid the whole; he can only enforce repayment of one-half the consideration-money.3 There must be an actual payment from a man's own money, or what is equivalent to payment from his own money, to create a resulting trust.4 And the money must be advanced and paid in the character of a purchaser; for if one pay the purchase-money by way of loan for another, and the conveyance is taken to the other, no trust will result to the one who thus pays the purchase-money; 5 on the other hand, if makes no payment, and none is made on his account, either actually or constructively, he cannot claim a resulting trust. As where a father made a deed to a son-in-law, in consideration of love and affection for his daughter, no trust resulted. And so a mere parol declaration by one that he is buying land for another is not sufficient to establish a resulting trust; there must be some proof of an actual or constructive payment by the person claiming such a trust. The rule is otherwise if the promise led the plaintiff to take action he would not otherwise have taken. Then the breach of the promise becomes a fraud, and a trust may exist.

- § 135. Again, parol proof cannot be received to establish a resulting trust in lands purchased by an agent and paid for by his own funds, no money of the principal being used for the payment; for the relation of principal and agent depends upon the agreement existing between them, and the trust in such a case must arise from the agreement, and not from the transaction, and where a trust arises from an agreement, it is within the statute of frauds, and must be in writing.⁵

This rule is so inflexible, that though the agent may be indicted, and convicted of perjury in denying his character as agent in his answer under oath, the court cannot decree and establish the trust.¹ But if an agent invest his principal's money in real estate without his knowledge, or if, investing the money with his knowledge, he take the deed in his own name without his consent, or take a deed in a form contrary to the understanding, there will be a resulting trust.² (a) But if one standing in no fiduciary relation obtains another's property wrongfully, and invests it in land in his own name, or if a clerk appropriates his master's money and buys real estate in his own name, there is no resulting trust.³

and their heirs, paying equal proportions, and one dies, the court will order a specific performance by a conveyance to the survivor alone. But the court lays hold of every circumstance to defeat the joint tenancy and convert it into a tenancy in common. Thus, where two tenants in common of a joint mortgage term purchase the equity of redemption, or several engage in a joint undertaking, or partnership, or trade, or speculation, or several purchase an estate and pay equally, but one improves the estate at his own cost, equity will construe them to be tenants in common and not joint tenants. In this country, title by joint tenancy is very much reduced in extent, and the incident of survivorship is almost entirely destroyed by statutes, except in the case of trustees, executors, and others, in whom such a tenancy is necessary for the execution of their trusts.

embraces only trusts created or declared by the parties, and does not affect trusts arising by operation of law. 1 (a) Indeed, such trusts are specially excepted in the statute of frauds of most States. The exception, however, was omitted in the statute of Rhode Island; but Mr. Justice Story held that the omission was immaterial, as such trusts were excepted in the nature of things.2 It follows that a party setting up a resulting trust may prove by parol the agreements under which the estate was purchased, and he may prove by parol the actual payment of the purchase-money by himself, or in his behalf, although the deed states it to have been paid by the grantee in the conveyance. 3 (b) And although the holder of the legal title has fraudulently or by mistake made a declaration that he holds the property for some other person, or states it to be for the use of the grantor, and although the trust, and all the circumstances out of which it arises, may be denied under oath in the answer, yet the facts may all be proved by parol in opposition to the answer. In such case the trust must be clearly alleged in the bill, not only in terms, but all the facts must be set out from which the trust is claimed to result. The certainty required, however, is only such as is sufficient to satisfy the jury of the existence of the trust; and it is error to charge that the "clearest and most positive proof" must be given. For this purpose all competent evidence is admissible, as the admissions of the nominal purchaser and grantee in the deed, recitals in the deed and other proper documents, and even circumstantial evidence, as that the means of the nominal purchaser were so limited that it was impossible for him to pay the purchase-money. 2 (a) But loose and equivocal facts ought not to control the evidence of deeds; and two witnesses, or one witness with corroborating circumstances, are required to control an answer under oath. And proof of mere admissions of one that he purchased for another, without proof of some previous arrangement or advance of money by such other, is insufficient to create a resulting trust.⁸ (b)

could not be admitted to control the express declaration of the deed; 1 but the cases relied upon are the cases before cited to the point that parol proof is inadmissible, both before and after the death of the supposed nominal purchaser. These cases are overruled; and it would seem upon principle that the death of the nominal purchaser cannot affect the admissibility of parol testimony, whatever effect it may have upon its weight.² Analogous to this matter is the question whether trust-money can be followed into land by parol evidence; and it is clearly established that it may, on the ground that a purchase with trust-money is virtually a purchase paid for by the cestui que trust, and such a purchase is a trust by operation of law, and not within the statute of frauds.3 And if a trustee pay for property out of the trust fund, and take the deed in the name of another, the trust results to the cestui que trust, and not to the trustee.4

§ 139. It follows that as a resulting trust may be shown by parol proof, as a presumption of law arising out of the transaction, so the presumption may be rebutted by parol proof showing that no trust was intended by the parties at the time of the transaction,⁵ and that it was the intention to confer the beneficial interest upon the supposed nominal purchaser. As the resulting trust is mere matter of equitable presumption, it may be rebutted by facts that negative the presumption; and whatever facts appear tending to prove that it was intended that the nominal purchaser should take the beneficial interest as well as the legal title, negatives the presumption. The presumption may be negatived as to part of the estate, and prevail in part. The presumption, however, is in favor of the trust resulting to the party paying the consideration, and the burden of proof is upon the mere nominal purchaser to show that he was intended to have some beneficial interest. The burden of proof on the whole case, however, rests on the one who seeks to establish a resulting trust, to show by clear evidence the necessary facts.

§ 140. And when a clear understanding is had at the time the purchase is made, the money paid, and the deed taken, by which understanding the nominal purchaser was to have both the legal and the beneficial interest, it is incompetent for the person who paid the purchase-money to put a different construction upon the transaction at a subsequent time, and claim a resulting trust in the estate contrary to the under-

The legislature of New York has abolished trusts resulting from the payment of the consideration by one and the taking the title in the name of another, except in cases where the nominal grantee has taken the deed without the knowledge and consent of the party paying the money, or except the purchase is made with another's money in violation of some duty or trust.² (a) But the statute saves the rights of creditors of the party paying the purchase-money and taking the title in the name of another.³ If such a purchase grantee; and if the payer of the money claims a resulting trust he must rebut this presumption by proper evidence. (a) Lord Ch. B. Eyre stated the doctrine thus: "The circumstance of one or more of the nominees being a child or children of the purchaser is held to operate by rebutting the resulting trust; and it has been determined in so many cases that the nominee being a child shall have such operation, as a circumstance of evidence, that it would be disturbing landmarks if we suffered either of these propositions to be called into question; viz., that such circumstance shall rebut the resulting trust, and that it shall do so as a circumstance of evidence. It would have been a more simple doctrine if children had been considered as purchasers for valuable consideration. That way of considering it would have shut out all the circumstances of evidence which have found their way into the cases, and would have prevented some very nice distinctions, not very easily understood. Considering it as a circumstance of evidence, there must, of course, be evidence admitted on the other side. Thus the question is resolved into one of intent, which was getting into a very wide sea without very certain guides." 2 (b) And Lord Nottingham pointed out that the law of resulting trusts, in this respect, was analogous to uses before the statute, "for the feoffment of a stranger, before the statute, without consideration, raised a use in the feoffor; but a feoffment by a father to a son, without other consideration, raised no use by implication in the father, for the consideration of blood settled the use in the son, and made it an advancement." Where the husband purchases land for his wife with his own funds, taking the obligation of the vendor to execute a deed to the wife, the latter, or after her death her children, can enforce a conveyance of the legal title, although the said obligation had been pledged to the vendor by the husband as a security for a loan to himself.²

§ 144. This rule embraces all persons for whom the purchaser is under any obligation, legal or moral, to provide. of the wife and the deed taken in name of the husband, it is a question of fact and intention whether the husband reduced the money to possession before paying it over for the deed. Moulton v. Haley, 57 N. H. 184.

ance in the name of another sister. And where the nominal grantee stands in the relation of mother or nephew to the real purchaser, no presumption of an advancement or settlement will arise, but it will be presumed to be a trust, unless the purchaser stands in loco parentis to the nominal grantee. And if the son stands in the relation of solicitor to his mother, a purchase made by her, in his name, will be presumed to be a trust, as the relation of solicitor and client rebuts the presumption of an advancement, and so, it is said, the rule does not apply to any purchase made by a mother in the name of a child. § 146. But these objections have all been overruled, and from the manner these distinctions are disposed of, a general principle applicable to every case may be stated, "that reasons which partake of too great a degree of refinement should not prevail against a rule of property which is so well established as to become a landmark, and which, whether right or wrong, should be carried throughout," 2 and Lord Eldon added, that this principle of law, that a purchase is presumed prima facie to be an advancement, is not to be frittered away by mere refinements.³ Therefore it is now established that a purchase in the name of an infant child is prima facie an advancement,4 and the purchase of a reversionary interest in the name of a child falls within the same rule; 5 so a purchase by a father, in the joint names of himself and son,6 or in the joint names of a son and a stranger,7 and so if a father take an estate for successive lives, as his own and his sons'.8 If a child in whose name the purchase is made is already provided for, it will be a circumstance to be considered with other evidence; but it will not of itself rebut the presumption of an advancement. stances by a father in the name of a son was not, but might be, a trust for the father." If a father purchase in the name of a son, whether an infant or an adult, and keep the actual possession of the estate, and receive the profits, it will be presumed that the purchase was an advancement; 2 for if the son was an infant, the father would be its natural guardian, or quasi guardian, and protector, and thus receive the rents of the estate.3 And if the son was an adult, the natural reverence and submission due from children to their parents would account for the circumstances.4 But any contemporaneous acts wholly inconsistent with the intention of an advancement to the child will make him a trustee for the father. Thus, if there is any circumstance accompanying the purchase which explains why it was taken in the wife's or child's name, and shows that it was not intended to be an advancement, but was intended to be a trust for the husband or father, the presump. tion of an advancement will be rebutted, and the inference of a trust will be established.5

tions of the real purchaser, either before or at the time of the purchase, may be received to show whether he intended it as an advancement or a trust. Such declarations are received. not as declarations of a trust by parol or otherwise, but as evidence to show what the intention was at the time. They are parts of the transaction, or words accompanying an act.2 The real purchaser, if otherwise competent, may be a witness to state what his objects, purposes, and intentions were in making the purchase and in taking the title in the name of his wife or child.3 Of course, declarations made by the husband or father after the purchase are incompetent to control the effect of the prior transaction.4 But such declarations may be used by the wife or child against the purchaser to show that it was a settlement and not a trust.5 And the after declarations of the nominal grantee may be used against him, but not in his favor.6 But the declarations must be direct and certain, and where possible should be corroborated by other facts and circumstances; for courts will not act upon mere declarations, if they are conflicting, vague, or inconsistent with themselves.¹

- § 148. If a father pays the purchase-money, and the wife or child, by fraud, or any wrongful act, and against the intention of the real purchaser, obtains the conveyance in her or its name, the presumption of an advancement would be rebutted, and the presumption of a trust would arise for the father.² So if a son pay the purchase-money and the deed is made to his father by mistake, a trust results to the son.³
- § 149. If a purchaser and payer of the money take the conveyance in the name of a wife or child, for the purpose of delaying, hindering, or defrauding his creditors, the conveyance is void, or a trust results which creditors can enforce to the extent of their debts.⁴ It makes no difference by the better opinion that the intent was not fraudulent. A man must be just before he is generous; and if the property given to the wife was bought with funds that ought to have gone to pay creditors, the property is liable to them.⁵ A parallel decision was reached where a wife bought land with her own money, had it deeded to her husband, and the latter contracted debts on the faith of being the owner of the land.⁶ If the parent or husband was not indebted at the time, subsequent creditors could not defeat the title nor enforce the trust,¹ unless the settlement or conveyance was made for the purpose of afterwards running in debt and defrauding creditors. In some States, as in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, an execution against the debtor can be levied directly upon the land in the hands of the trustee; in other States the land can only be reached in equity. In Minnesota, a purchase by a husband and a deed to the wife creates no trust as to him, but the wife holds in trust for creditors unless fraudulent intent is disproved.²

§ 150. A very common case of a resulting trust is where the owner of both the legal and equitable estate conveys the legal title only, without conveying the equitable interest.3 The general rule in such case is, that wherever it appears, upon a conveyance, devise, or bequest, that it was intended that the grantee, devisee, or legatee should take the legal estate only, the equitable interest, or so much of it as is left undisposed of, will result, if arising out of the settlor's realty, to himself or his heirs; if out of his personal estate, to himself, his executors, or administrators.4 Whether the conveyance was intended to convey the beneficial as well as the legal estate is sometimes a matter of presumption by the court from all the circumstances of the case, and sometimes it is expressed upon the instrument itself in such manner that no doubts can arise. When it is matter of presumption, parol evidence may be received to rebut or sustain the presumption.⁵ But where the trust results by force of the written instrument, it cannot be controlled, rebutted, or defeated by parol evidence of any kind.¹

§ 151. No general rule can be stated, that will determine when a conveyance will carry with it a beneficial interest, and when it will be construed to create a trust; but the intention is to be gathered in each case from the general purpose and scope of the instrument.² A conveyance to a wife or child will be presumed to carry a beneficial interest,³ but such consideration is only a circumstance of evidence.⁴ It has been said, that if a man transfer property to another, it must be presumed that it proceeded from an intention to benefit the other by making the gift and conferring the beneficial interest;⁵ but if such intention cannot be inferred consistently with all the circumstances attending the transaction, a trust will result.⁶ The heir is not to be excluded from a resulting trust upon bare conjecture; there must be positive evidence of a benefit intended to the devisee, and not merely negative evidence that none was intended for the heir; for the beneficial interest results to the heir, not from the intention of the ancestor, but because he has expressed no intention.2 Thus, a trust may result upon a legacy given to the heir; 3 but the circumstance of being heir, with other circumstances, will be strong evidence that no trust was intended.4 But in no case will the court permit the grantee to retain the beneficial interest, if there was any mistake on the part of the grantor, or any fraud on the part of the grantee.6 If the grantor intended a fraud upon the law, there can be no resulting trust; 7 however, even in this case, if the grantce admits the trust, the court will enforce it.8 If a conveyance has been made upon a valuable consideration, there can be no resulting trust to the grantor, as the payment of a valuable consideration imports an intention to benefit the grantee in case the trusts declared fail, or are imperfectly declared, or do not take effect for any other reason.9

§ 152. Thus, if upon a conveyance, devise, or bequest, a trust is declared of a part of the estate only, or the purposes of the trust do not exhaust the whole beneficial interest, the trust in the remaining part or interest will result to the settlor or his heirs; 1 for the reason that a declaration of trust as to part is considered sufficient evidence that the settlor did not intend the donee to take the beneficial interest in the whole, and that the creation of the trust was the sole object of the transaction. But a distinction must be observed between a devise to a person for a particular purpose, with no intention of conferring upon him any beneficial interest, and a devise with a view of conferring the beneficial interest, but subject to a particular charge, wish, or desire. Thus, if a gift be made to one and his heirs, charged with the payment of debts, it is a gift for a particular purpose, but not for that purpose only; and if it is the intention to confer upon the donee of the legal estate a beneficial interest after the particular purpose is satisfied without exhausting the whole estate, the surplus goes to the donee and does not result.² But if the gift is upon a trust to pay debts, that is a gift for a particular purpose and nothing more. If the whole estate is given for that one purpose, and that purpose does not exhaust the whole estate, the remainder results to the donor or his heirs. Or, as Vice-Chancellor Wood stated the rule: (1) where there is a gift to one to enable him to do something, where he has a choice whether he will do it or not, then the gift is for his own benefit, the motive why it is given to him being stated; (2) where you find the gift is for the general purposes of the will, then the person who takes the estate cannot take the surplus after satisfying a trust for his own benefit; (3) where a charge is created by the will, the devisee takes the surplus for his own benefit, and no trust is implied.²

§ 153. If from the whole instrument there can be gathered an intention to benefit the donee, no trust in the remainder will result, as where a man made his dearly beloved wife his sole heiress and executrix to pay his debts and legacies, and there was a residue after paying debts and legacies, there was no resulting trust, for the expressions in the will indicated an intention to benefit the donee. So any other expressions that indicate an intention that the donee shall be benefited after the particular purposes are satisfied, will prevent a trust from resulting. So expressions of affection

Thus if lands be devised to A. charged with a legacy to B. if he attain the age of twenty-one, the devise will become absolute in A. if B. dies before he becomes twenty-one. And the will is to read as if B. was not named in it. Tregonwell v. Sydenham, 3 Dow, 210; Sprigg v. Sprigg, 2 Vern. 394; Cruse v. Barley, 3 P. Wms. 20; Att Gen. v. Milner, 3 Atk. 112; Croft v. or relationship will be evidence upon the question whether a trust was intended to result after the particular trusts are satisfied. If the donee is an infant incapable of executing a trust, or a married woman, it will be evidence upon the same question. But if from the whole will it is apparent that the donee shall not take a beneficial interest, all such circumstances go for nothing.

§ 154. If the donee, to whom an estate is given upon a trust declared as to part, is also the heir, or other person to whom the trust for the remainder would result, or if he is one of a class, such gift to him will not prevent him from taking by the resulting trust the part that may come to him.⁴ So a legacy or other beneficial gift to him will not exclude him from the resulting interest,⁵ even if the interest given him is to arise out of the declared trust.⁶

§ 155. The doctrine of resulting trusts, where a trust is declared as to part only, was formerly much discussed in cases of gifts to executors for the payment of debts and legacies. In such cases at common law the appointment of the executor entitled him, both at law and equity, to all the remainder of the personal property after the payment of debts and legacies, unless it was specially disposed of by the testator in the will. Courts were always astute to find circumstances to repel the beneficial interest in the executor, and to raise a resulting trust for the next of kin, or heir-at-law; and it was finally enacted, 1 Will. IV., c. 40, that such executors should be trustees of any residue, unless it plainly appeared by the will that they were intended to take the residue beneficially. In the United States the rule never prevailed, but executors always took as trustees for those entitled to the distribution of the personal estate, unless it was expressly disposed of to some other persons, or unless it was expressly given to the executor beneficially.²

§ 156. In this connection an important exception to the general doctrine of resulting trusts should be stated. If property is given to trustees by grant or devise for charitable uses generally, and the particular purpose is not declared at all, or, if declared, does not exhaust the whole estate, there will be no resulting trust for the donor, his heirs, or next of kin, in either case; nor will the donees take any beneficial interest, but the court will direct the trustees to administer the whole estate under some scheme for charitable purposes.³

§ 157. If a gift is made by deed or will upon trust, and no trust is declared, 4 or a bequest is made to one named, as executor, "to enable him to carry into effect the trusts of the will," and none are declared, 5 or a gift is made upon

trusts thereafter to be declared, and no declaration is ever made, the legal title only will pass to the grantee or devisee, while a trust in the equitable interest will result to the settlor, his heirs, or legal representatives, according to the nature of the property, whether real or personal; for it appears upon the instrument itself that the legal title alone was intended for the first taker, and that the equitable interest was intended to go to some other person, and as such other person cannot take the equitable interest for want of a declaration of the trust, it results to the settlor or his heirs.2 So if a testator says that he gives the residue, and stops there,3 or if he cancels a residuary bequest by drawing a line through it.4 But if it should plainly appear from the whole instrument that the donee is to take beneficially in case the trusts are not declared, no trust will result to the owner or heir.5

§ 158. It is to be observed, however, that the intention of the instrument is to be gathered from its general scope; hence, although the words upon trust are very strong evidence of the donor's intention not to confer the beneficial interest upon the donee, be yet it may be negatived by the context, and the general interpretation of the whole paper; so, if the donee is called a trustee, the term may be shown to apply to one of two funds, and the donee may take a beneficial interest in the other, or it may be so used as to be a mere descriptio personae, and although no beneficiary is named, a trust does not necessarily result to the grantor.2 On the other hand it may appear, from the whole instrument, that the donce is not to take the beneficial interest, although the words upon trust, or trustee, are not used; as where there is a direction that the donce shall be allowed his costs and expenses out of the fund given him, which would be without meaning if he took the whole beneficial interest in the fund.3 But if the conveyance is by deed for a valuable consideration, the grantee will take the beneficial interest if the trusts fail to be declared, or fail in any way; for there can be no resulting trusts where the grantee pays a valuable consideration for the estate.4 (a) Where a will contained in substance this clause, "I give to my executor, P., $800 to have and to hold the same to the use of S. as follows: I desire in case S. should at any time need assistance or come to want, that my executor should expend such part of said $800 as will make her comfortable and keep her so during her life. § 159. If a trust for a specific purpose fails by the failure of the purpose, the property reverts to the donor or his heirs.² (a) If the gift is made upon a trust, and the trust is insufficiently or ineffectually declared, as, if it is too indefinite, vague, and uncertain to be carried into effect, it will result to the settlor, his heirs, or representatives.3 Whether a trust is insufficiently declared or not, depends of course upon the particular construction to be given to each individual deed or will; 4 and so, whether a trust is too vague to be executed or not, depends upon the interpretation given to each instrument.⁵ If the declaration of trust is too imperfect to establish that purpose, and yet plainly shows that the intention was that the donee should not take beneficially, and that the sole purpose of the gift or grant was to carry out the purpose of the trust, which fails, the donee will take in trust for the donor or his heirs; but if it appear, from the whole instrument, that some beneficial interest was intended for the donee, or that he was intended to take beneficially in case the particular purpose fails, no trust will result, but he will take the estate discharged of all burdens.6

trust. 1 So if a trust for a particular purpose fail, by the dissolution of a corporation, or other organized body, a trust created for their particular benefit will result to the donor's heirs.2 All that the donor has not given out of himself remains in him, and if he has not provided to whom the property shall belong on failure or determination of the trust, that right is still his, and he may convey the property subject to the trust.3 In all cases, if the trust arises or results by presumption of law, it may be rebutted as to instruments inter vivos by parol evidence that it was the intention of the settlor that the donee should take the surplus beneficially, or the whole estate if the trust failed in toto; 4 but where the trust results, not by presumption of law nor from the facts and circumstances, but from the construction and force of a written instrument, no parol evidence can be introduced to control such construction and force.5

§ 160 a. In England, the heir and the next of kin or legal representatives are not the same persons, or they have not the same rights and interests; consequently questions of some difficulty arise as to whether a trust in property results to the heir, or to the next of kin, or the legal representatives. The general rule is, if the property is real estate, that the trust results to the heir; if personal property, to the next of kin under the statutes of distribution, or to the legal representatives. But suppose a testator has devised real estate in trust and directed it to be sold and the proceeds applied to purposes named, and the real estate is converted into money, and the trust fails in whole or in part; or suppose money is given in trust, and there is a direction to invest it in lands, which is done, and the trust fails, to whom does the trust result, to the heir as real estate, or to the next of kin as personal property? Such questions are not important in the United States, for the reason that in most if not all the States the same persons take both the real and personal estate of an ancestor in the same proportion and with the same rights, and it is comparatively unimportant whether the trust results as real or personal property. There is, however, one question still important in the United States, and that is, does the trust result to the heirs-at-law, or to the residuary devisees or legatees? The donor, settlor, or testator still retains such an interest in property given by him in trust, that the interest which results upon the failure of the trusts created by him may be devised by him, and the question in each case is whether the resulting interest becomes a part of the residue and passes to the residuary legatee, if there is one, or whether it passes to the heirs. The question may be stated in another form, thus: has the testator died intestate as to the interests which result to him upon a failure of the trusts, or do the provisions of the will embrace such interests and convey them to some person or persons, or class of persons named? The distinction between the heirs and the residuary legatees is that the residuary legatees claim under the will, and the heirs claim dehors the will. All the cases that can arise must depend upon the intention of the donor or settlors, and upon the construction of each particular will. If the subject-matter of the bequest that fails is personal estate, the residuary legatee will take all that results; for a general residuary bequest is always held to carry every interest, whether undisposed of in the will, or undisposed of in any event.2 Therefore it is only where the will contains no residuary clause that the next of kin (or heirs in the United States) can assert any claim. There is, however, this obvious remark to be made: that if the residuum is itself given upon a trust that fails, it of course results to the next of kin or heirs.1 But a different rule is applied at common law to gifts of real estate. If real estate was bequeathed upon trusts that were void, or that failed, the real estate did not pass to the residuary devisee, but resulted to the heir-at-law, for the reason that nothing passed by the gift of the residue except what was intended to pass, and a bequest of real estate for a particular purpose indicated a plain intention not to embrace it in the residuary bequest, and although it might be void or fail, yet it was so far operative as to indicate the intention of the donor not to allow it to pass under the residuary clause of the will. The common law was altered by 1 Vict. Ch. 26, and real estate is governed by the same rule as personal estate.2

§ 161. It was formerly said that if a man conveyed his estate to a stranger without consideration, or for a mere nominal one, a trust resulted to the owner, on the ground that the law would not presume a man to part with his property without some inducement thereto.³ This was in v. Woodhull, 3 Edw. Ch. 79; Swinton v. Egleston, 3 Rich. Eq. 201; Hamberlin v. Terry, 1 Sm. & M. Ch. 589; Johnson v. Johnson, 3 Ired.

² In the United States there is considerable variety in the decisions of the courts, if not some uncertainty in the law, where it is not determined by statute. strict analogy to the common law, whereby, if a feoffment was made without consideration, the legal title only passed to the feoffee, and a use resulted to the feoffer. In conformity with this rule, Mr. Cruise lays it down, that if the legal estate in lands is conveyed to a stranger without any consideration, there arises a resulting trust to the original owner; 2 for where there is neither consideration, nor declaration of use, to show the intention of the parties, it cannot be supposed that the estate was intended to be given away.3 And the burden was put upon the grantee to show the consideration, and upon failure of proof, a use was presumed to the grantor, for the reason, as stated by Sir Francis Bacon, that when feoffments were made, it grew doubtful whether estates were in use or purchase; and as purchases were things notorious, and uses were things secret, the Chancellor thought it more convenient to put the purchaser to prove his consideration than the feoffor to prove his trust, and so made intendment toward the use, and put the purchaser to the proof of his purchase.4 To the same effect are Coke on Littleton and many of the older, and some of the more modern, authorities.5

- § 162. But the rule that a trust resulted to the grantor upon a voluntary conveyance was confined to common-law conveyances or assurances, such as feoffments, grants, fines, recoveries, and releases which operated without consideration, and vested the estate in the alience by the act itself, as Tolar, 1 Dev. by livery of seizin; although it was always doubtful whether a use could result from a conveyance by lease and release, even though it was voluntary, and no uses were declared; for the extinguishment of the estate of the lessee was a good consideration, yet such a conveyance was a strict commonlaw conveyance. This rule does not apply to modern conveyances, and no trust is now held to result to a grantor although he conveys his estate without consideration. (a)

(a) In Re Duke of Marlborough, [1894] 2 Ch. 133, where an American wife voluntarily conveyed her house to her husband to enable him to mortgage it in his own name, the decision in Haigh v. Kaye was considered as of higher authority than Leman v. Whitley, which was also questioned in Sugden on Vendors (14th ed.), p. 702; and it was held that, the husband having died without reconveying to her, though apparently not unwilling to do so, the wife was entitled to a reconveyance. In Rochefoucauld v. Boustead, [1897] 1 Ch. 196, it was likewise held that the statute of frauds does not exclude evidence of a fraud, as when a person to whom land is conveyed as a trustee, and who knows it was so conveyed, denies the trust and claims the land as his own. Hence one who claims land conveyed to another may prove by parol evidence that it was so conveyed on trust for the claimant, and may obtain a declaration that the grantee is a trustee for him; that such a trust is an express trust, and the statute of limitations is not a defence to the claim.

In Indiana, even where there is no fraud or misrepresentation up to the time a voluntary conveyance is made, there is held to be a resulting trust for the grantor, when good faith so requires. Myers v. Jackson, 135 Ind. 136; Giffen v. Taylor, 139 Ind. 573. See Nashville Trust Co. v. Lannon (Tenn. Ch.) 36 S. W. 977; Bowler v. Curler, 21 Nev. 158; Larmon v. Knight, 140 Ill. 232. In California, where husband and wife may contract with each other, and undue influence is not presumed when one conveys property to the other, want of consideration does not establish a resulting trust in the case of a voluntary conveyance by one of them to the other. Tillaux v. Tillaux, 115 Cal. 663. In Massachusetts, after a voluntary

At the present day almost all conveyances are in form deeds of bargain and sale, and operate to pass the estate by virtue of the statute of uses, or of statutes in the several States prescribing the formalities necessary to convey lands. Under the statute of uses, the bargain between the bargainor and the bargainee, and the consideration, raised a use in the bargainee; the statute immediately stepped in and vested the legal title in the same person for whom a beneficial use had been raised by the bargain. In conveyances that are in form deeds of bargain and sale, parol evidence cannot be received to control or contradict the statement of the consideration. Such a statement is a solemn and essential part of the deed, and its existence cannot be disproved by parol.1 although it is allowed so far to control the statement as to the payment of it, as to show that it still exists as a debt due from the grantee to the grantor.² (a) And so in States conveyance, untainted by fraud, unaffected by any written declaration of trust, and without consideration, even though there is an oral agreement that the grantee holds the land in trust, the grantor cannot avoid the deed for fraud, accident, or mistake. In New York, a voluntary trust is declared and enforced only when a confidential relation is alleged to have been taken advantage of, in which case the donee is required to show clearly fair dealing and absence of fraud.

(a) The consideration expressed in a deed is open to parol explanation for most purposes, but a want of consideration cannot be shown against the recital of the deed to establish a resulting trust in the grantor. Bobb v. Bobb, 89 Mo. 411; Weiss v. Heitkamp, 127 Mo. 23.

where it is declared by statute, as in Massachusetts, 1 that deeds duly executed, acknowledged, and recorded shall be effectual to pass the estate without other ceremony, it is not competent to control the effect of such deeds by parol, or to engraft uses, trusts, or other limitations upon them not contained in the instruments themselves, or in some other instrument executed before or at the same time with them, in such manner as to become a part of them.2 To allow parol evidence to raise a resulting trust upon such deeds would be to break in upon the express provisions of the statute of frauds. Mr. Hill states the modern rule correctly when he says, "that it is the clear result of the authorities that where a person, a stranger in blood to the donor, and a fortiori if connected with him in blood, is in possession of an estate under a voluntary conveyance duly executed, the mere fact of his being a volunteer will not of itself create any presumption that he is a trustee for the grantor; but he will be considered entitled to the enjoyment of the beneficial interest unless that title is displaced by sufficient evidence of an intention on the part of the donor to create a trust, and he need not bring proofs to keep his estate, but the plaintiff must bring proofs to take it from him." 4 And where the deed contains a clause, as most deeds do, that the estate is had and held to the grantee, his heirs and assigns, to his and their use and behoof, no trust can result, as it is a rule that when a use is declared, no other use can be shown to result. § 163. It may be stated that courts do not favor voluntary conveyances, and will not lend their aid to enforce them if they are imperfectly executed, and their decrees are necessary to give them validity and force. In such cases equity will not interfere, but will leave the parties to their rights at law.4 (b) And, further, equity will always look upon

(b) See Rogers v. Rogers (R. I.), 39 Atl. 755; supra, § 97, note (a). In voluntary gifts, equity does not aid in perfecting a gift, but the cestui que trust acquires, upon a declaration of trust, an absolute, equitable estate or title, and not a mere right to ask for a title; and when there is a valuable consideration, a contract to declare a trust may in equity be deemed equivalent to an actual declaration. Although a parol agreement to exe- person in extremis may take effect as cute a trust cannot be enforced, and a mere refusal to perform a contract is not in itself a fraud, yet when property is conveyed in reliance on its fulfilment, equity will not permit a party to consummate a fraud by retaining it without consideration and in violation of his agreement. such conveyances with suspicion, especially if made to strangers for no particular purpose. If any fraud or misrepresentation is practised upon a grantor, equity will fasten a trust upon the conscience of the fraudulent grantee. If fraud upon the grantor is alleged, the fact that the conveyance was without consideration is always considered as pertinent evidence, and will be considered as one badge of fraud, if there are other facts and circumstances pointing in that direction. A disposition by will, however, is not subject to these rules, as a gift by will imports a consideration, and no averments by parol can be received to fasten a use or trust upon such gift; but the donee will take both the legal and beneficial estate, unless it clearly appears from the whole will that such was not the intention of the donor.

§ 164. It is further to be observed that voluntary conveyances to a wife or child were never within the rule that such gifts raised a resulting trust for the donor. In conveyances of this kind to the donor's family the analogy of the common law was followed, whereby, if a feoffment was made to a stranger without consideration, a use resulted to the feoffor; but if a feoffment was made to a wife or child, no use resulted, for the consideration of blood was held a good consideration, and an advance or settlement was presumed. So marriage was not only a good but a valuable consideration, and no trusts could result from conveyances made in consideration of marriage, either of the grantor or of any member of his family. But if voluntary conveyances to wife or children were made by a man deeply indebted, or with an intention to delay his creditors, while he could not raise a trust in his own favor, yet his creditors could avoid the conveyances or raise a trust upon them in their own favor to the extent of their claims.¹

§ 166. The trusts thus far considered arise from the express agreements and intentions of the parties, or from their intentions implied from their agreements, or result from their express or implied agreements. (a) These trusts arise, tween express and constructive trusts, see Cunningham v. Foot, 3 A. C. 984; Price v. Phillips, 13 Rep. (Eng.) 191; Culbertson v. The H. Witbeck Co., 127 U. S. 326. result, or are implied from the contracts and relations of the parties. The intention of the parties as manifested in contracts made in good faith is the foundation of them. There is another large class of trusts which arise from frauds committed by one party upon another. Thus, if one party procures the legal title to property from another by fraud or misrepresentation or concealment, or if a party makes use of some influential or confidential relation which he holds towards the owner of the legal title, to obtain such legal title from him upon more advantageous terms than he could otherwise have obtained it, equity will convert such party thus obtaining property into a trustee. If a person obtains the legal title to property by such arts or acts or circumstances of circumvention, imposition, or fraud, or if he obtains it by virtue of a confidential relation and influence under such circumstances that he ought not, according to the rules of equity and good conscience as administered in chancery, to hold and enjoy the beneficial interest of the property,

A constructive trust arising from a wrongful purchase in one's own name with another's funds is not merely a right or cause of action personal to the beneficiary, authorizing him to sue for, and thereby acquire an estate in the land, but, like a resulting trust proper, or the equity of redemption of a mortgagor after forfeiture, it is, in and of itself, an equitable estate, vendible and descendible as any other interest in lands, and capable of being executed into a legal estate by the decree of a court of equity, at the suit of the beneficiary, or any one in privity with him, in blood or

When the object of a bill in equity is single, the subject-matter the same, and the appropriate prayers for relief not inconsistent, a bill is not necessarily multifarious, which in one aspect shows an express trust arising from the contract, in another a purely resulting trust, and in another the use of the assets of a cestui que trust by a trustee in payment of property to which he took title in his own name, although the rights of the party whose money was used are not subject in all respects to the same principles of law. Kelly v. Browning, 113 Ala. 420, 444; Graves v. Corbin, 132 U. S. 571, 586; Mills v. Hurd, 32 Fed. Rep. 127; Kelley v. Boettcher, 85 id. 55.

courts of equity, in order to administer complete justice between the parties, will raise a trust by construction out of such circumstances or relations; and this trust they will fasten upon the conscience of the offending party, and will convert him into a trustee of the legal title, and order him to hold it or to execute the trust in such manner as to protect the rights of the defrauded party and promote the safety and interests of society. 1 Such trusts are called constructive trusts. They differ from other trusts in that they are not within the intention or contemplation of the parties at the time the contract is made from which they are construed by the court, but they are thrust upon a party contrary to his intention and against his consent. The reason is that courts of equity have a large jurisdiction over all matters of trust and confidence. They control and direct their administration, and in certain cases they annul and put an end to them by directing the trustee to convey the trust property to the person beneficially interested. They can also remove the trustees and appoint new ones. Therefore, courts of equity by raising a trust by construction in cases of fraud can do equal and complete justice between the parties. By this fiction of a constructive trust courts of equity have great powers. They can order the constructive trustee to hold the legal title for the original owner upon just and proper terms. If he has paid any value for the legal estate, they can order the estate to stand as security for it; they can order accounts to be taken and settled; 2 they can decree a reconveyance of the property, or they can put an end to the trust by declaring the conveyances to the constructive trustee to be null and void, and order that they be surrendered up and cancelled. In all such cases the relief is really founded on fraud and not on constructive trust. When it is said that the person who fraudulently receives or possesses himself of trust property, or who has defrauded another of his estate by misrepresentation, concealment, or other fraudulent practices, is converted by the court into a trustee and ordered to account for or reconvey the property, the expression is used for the purpose of describing the nature and extent of the remedy against him, and it denotes that the parties defrauded or beneficially entitled have the same rights and remedies against him as they would be entitled to against an express trustee who had fraudulently committed a breach of the trust. Generally speaking, the constructive trusts described in this chapter are not trusts at all in the strict and proper signification of the word "trusts;" but as courts are agreed in administering the same remedy in a certain class of frauds as are administered in fraudulent breaches of trusts, and as courts and the profession have concurred in calling such frauds constructive trusts, there can be no misapprehension in continuing the same phraseology, while a change might lead to confusion and misunderstanding. § 167. Courts of common law have an extensive jurisdiction in cases of fraud, but it is readily seen that the remedy in equity is more easily moulded to the varying circumstances of different cases. As between the immediate parties, fraud makes all things void which are done under its direct influence. Thus, non est factum can be pleaded to a suit upon a deed or bond, procured by fraud or duress, on the ground that whatever is done under the influence of fraud is not done at all. The same evidence is admissible in both courts. Prob-

Courts of chancery in England and the courts of the United States, and of many of the several States, have a jurisdiction in equity to set aside deeds and contracts procured by misrepresentation, concealment, collusion, or fraud. In Massachusetts, the Supreme Judicial Court has jurisdiction in equity in cases of fraud, accident, and mistake, according to the usage and practice of courts of equity where there is not a plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law. ably the same evidence that would convince a court of equity that a deed was procured by fraud, and that the grantee ought to hold as a constructive trustee for the grantor, would also persuade a jury to return a verdict against such deed. In some States the parties have a right to trial by jury of all questions of fact, as of fraud or no fraud, arising upon the pleadings in equity. In other States, the court may in its discretion send such issues of fact to trial by a jury. Thus, the remedy in equity in cases of fraud is sought, not so much from the mode of proof and the rules of evidence, as it is

ch. 113, § 2. It was supposed by the profession that this statute conferred upon the court a jurisdiction in equity in accordance with the general usages of the courts of equity in England and the United States. But the court by a strict construction of the words, "where there is not a plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law," denied their jurisdiction in cases of fraud, where an action at law might be maintained by the injured party. Thus, if a deed is procured from a person by fraud, he cannot maintain a suit in equity to set it aside, if it is possible to maintain a real action for the recovery of the land; and as such deeds are void, or at least voidable, such action may be maintained at law, and the court has no jurisdiction in equity. Bassett v. Brown, 10 Mass. 355. This decision goes upon the strict meaning of the words, "where there is not a plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law," words which were formerly found in every bill in equity, in order to give the court jurisdiction. But they did not exclude the jurisdiction in equity, if the court had a jurisdiction, concurrent or otherwise, according to the usage and practice of courts of equity. The court in Massachusetts still has jurisdiction in equity in cases of fraud, where there is a peculiar complication of circumstances or of parties. Pratt v. Pond, 5 Allen, 59; Glass v. Hulbert, 102 Mass. 26; Martin v. Graves, 5 Allen, 601; Whittemore v. Cowell, 7 Allen, 446; Pool v. Lloyd, 5 Met. 528. But the practitioner must determine at his peril whether a particular case comes within such jurisdiction. It would have been more simple and certain for the administration of justice, to have given to the words of exclusion the meaning attached to them in bills of equity, and to have made the jurisdiction of the court to depend upon the known usage and practice of courts of equity. Thus, both the court and the bar would have had some known ground to go upon. Of course these remarks apply only to those cases of fraud where there is a jurisdiction in equity to set aside conveyances procured by fraud, and for other relief according to the known usage and practice of courts of equity, and not to mere cases of cheating and fraud in many of the affairs of life. See Miller v. Scammon, 52 N. H. 609.

from the complete character of the relief given. It is true, that in some cases courts of equity will act upon circumstances and presumptions of fraud which courts of law would not deem satisfactory proofs.1 As if a guardian purchases an estate from a ward, equity will presume fraud from the existence of the relation of guardian and ward, - a rule that courts of law would not always act upon. Lord Eldon said, that courts of equity in many cases would order an instrument to be delivered up, as unduly obtained, which a jury would not be justified in impeaching by the rules of law.2 However, fraud must be proved in both courts, and is not to be imputed from mere circumstances of suspicion. It is not, however, the rule that the court will not presume or construe a trust to arise except in cases of absolute necessity;3 for courts of equity will act upon the just preponderance of all the facts and circumstances of proof in the case.4

§ 168. Constructive trusts may be divided into three classes, to be determined according to the circumstances under which they arise. First, trusts that arise from actual fraud practised by one man upon another. Second, trusts that arise from constructive fraud.⁵ In this second class the conduct may not be actually tainted with moral fraud or evil intention, but it may be contrary to some rule established by public policy for the protection of society. Thus, a purchase made by a guardian of his ward, or by a trustee of his cestui que trust, or by an attorney of his client, may be in good faith, and as beneficial to all parties as any other transaction in life; and yet the inconvenience and danger of allowing contracts to be entered into by parties holding such relations to each other are so great that courts of equity construe such contracts prima facie to be fraudulent, and they construe a trust to arise from them. Third, trusts that arise from some equitable principle independent of the existence of any fraud; as where an estate has been purchased, and the consideration-money paid, but the deed is not taken, equity will raise a trust by construction for the purchaser.

§ 169. No certain and accurate definition or description of actual fraud can be given. Courts have never laid down, in a general proposition, what does and what does not constitute fraud, nor any general rule by which they are controlled in giving relief, lest other means of committing fraud should be resorted to. As Lord Hardwicke said, "fraud is infinite, and were courts of equity once to lay down rules how far they would go and no further, in extending the relief against it, or to define strictly the species or evidence of it, the jurisdiction would be cramped, and perpetually eluded by new schemes which the fertility of man's invention would contrive." 2 Although it is difficult to give a definition of it, yet Mr. Story said,3 that "fraud in the sense of a court of equity properly includes all acts, omissions, and concealments which involve a breach of legal or equitable duty, trust, or confidence, justly reposed, and are injurious to another, or by which an undue and unconscientious advantage is taken of another.4 And courts of equity will not only interfere, in cases of fraud, to set aside acts done, but they will also, if acts have by fraud been prevented from being done by the parties, interfere and treat the case exactly as if the acts had been done" 5 (a).

§ 170. Although courts of equity have not made general definitions stating what is fraud and what is not, they have not hesitated to lay down broad and comprehensive principles of remedial justice, and to apply these principles in favor of innocent parties suffering from the fraud of others. These principles, though firm and inflexible, are yet so plastic, that they can be applied to every case of fraud as it occurs, however new it may be in its circumstances. The leading principle of this remedial justice is by way of equitable construction to convert the fraudulent holder of property into a trustee, and to preserve the property itself as a fund for the purpose of recompense. In investigating allegations of fraud, courts of equity disregard mere technicalities and artificial rules, and look only at the general characteristics of the case, and go at once to its essential morality and Thus at law married women or infants are not liable upon their contracts, nor are they bound by their deeds, receipts, or releases, whether made bona fide or fraudulently; 1 but in equity if a married woman has obtained property by fraud, the court disregards the technical rules

deriving title under it will be converted into a trustee in case that construction is needful for the purpose of administering adequate relief; and the setting up of the statute of frauds by a party guilty of the fraud or misconduct, in order to bar the court from effective interference with his wrongdoing, will not hinder it from forcing on his conscience this character as a means to baffle his injustice or its effects." of common law in regard to married women, and converts her by construction into a trustee, and compels her to do justice by executing the trust.\(^1\) The same principles apply to infants, although they cannot be sued at common law, save in a few exceptionable cases. So if an infant fraudulently misrepresents his age and gives deeds or releases, upon which others act, equity will not allow him to impeach such deeds on account of his minority.\(^2\) This is on the ground that infants and married women shall not take advantage of the rules made for their protection to perpetrate frauds upon innocent persons, but that they shall be bound by their own fraudulent representations, or by equitable estoppels, like other persons.\(^3\)

§ 171. Fraud, arising from facts and circumstances of imposition, presents the plainest case for relief, 4 for it comes within what is called the suggestio falsi. 5 Wherever by misrepresentation, combination, conspiracy, oppression, intimidation, surprise, or any other practice at variance with honest, fair dealing, one is deceived, entrapped, or surprised into a conveyance of the legal title to his property, by deed or by will, courts of equity will not allow the fraudulent grantee to avail himself of the transaction to enjoy the beneficial interest, but will construe him to be a trustee, and will order him to account upon equitable principles, and to make a reconveyance of the property. 6 Thus, where one buys land at an execution sale, or sale under a trust deed, under an agreement with the debtor that the latter may redeem, the purchaser holds in trust; it would be a fraud to allow him to repudiate the contract. Mere declarations and admissions of the party to be charged accompanying the transfer of title have been held sufficient to raise a trust. It must be remembered, in connection with these cases, that although they are placed on the ground of fraud, the doctrine of North Carolina, that trusts in land may be created by parol, probably has had an influence in nearly all the decisions. In Pennsylvania, an agreement to allow redemption is held to be within the statute of frauds, and will not be enforced as creating a constructive trust. the subject-matter." There may also be fraud upon a third person not a party to the immediate conveyance that will raise a trust; for example, a purchaser knowing of a prior deed to A. holds in trust for A.² There is a distinction between cases of fraud in which equity will set aside the sale altogether, and those cases in which it will allow the sale to stand, and hold the purchaser as a trustee. A trust will not be declared, if thereby in effect the beneficiary would receive the benefit of the fraud at the expense of a third person equally innocent.³

§ 172. If a person purchasing an estate falsely pretends and represents that he is purchasing or acting as agent for another, when in fact he is purchasing for himself, and such misrepresentation misleads and throws the vendor off his guard, and the purchaser makes a better bargain than he otherwise could, or the representation is in any way material, equity will not enforce the agreement, or, if it is already executed, will convert the purchaser into a trustee.4 And so if a purchaser at auction or otherwise represents that he is purchasing or bidding for some other person, as for the debtor in a sale under an execution, 5 or for the mortgagor in a sale under a foreclosure, or for the family under an executor's or administrator's sale, and competition is thus prevented and the purchase is made on his own terms, equity will decree that such person shall be a trustee for the person for whom he represented that he was acting. So if a purchaser by fraud prevents other purchasers from attending a sale, or if a purchaser fraudulently agrees that he will purchase an estate in his own behalf and that of another, in order to prevent competition, and gets the property into his own name, at a less price, he will be a trustee for the person defrauded.2 On the other hand, where an agent makes a fraudulent representation, or does a fraudalent act, in a purchase or sale, with or without the privity or knowledge or consent of his principal, and the principal adopts the bargain and attempts to reap an advantage from it so tainted by the fraud of the agent, he will be held bound by the fraud of the agent, and relief will be given.3 Indeed, the doctrine has been thus broadly stated: "That where once a fraud has been committed, not only is the person who committed the fraud precluded from deriving any benefit from it, but every innocent person is so likewise, unless he has innocently acquired a subsequent interest; for a third person, by seeking to derive any benefit under such a transaction, or to retain any benefit resulting therefrom, becomes particeps criminis, however innocent of the fraud in the beginning."4 And the same rule applies with more force to misrepresentations made by one of several partners.⁵ But if the agreement is a fair one between the parties, it will not be affected

because brought about by the fraud of some third person for his collateral benefit.¹ And if the agreement is not a fair one, it will not be invalidated by the fraudulent representations of a third person in no way connected with either party,² unless the circumstances are such that the bargain may be said to have been entered into by mistake.³

§ 173. However repugnant to entire good faith and sound morals any misrepresentation upon any subject, however made, may be, courts of justice cannot undertake to sit as censors upon mere morals. There are in every community two classes of rights, - perfect rights, and imperfect rights. Perfect rights are those that may be enforced, or for the breach of which damages may be recovered; imperfect rights are those which are conceded to every man, but which cannot be enforced by human tribunals, and for the breach of which no damages can be recovered. Thus every man has a right to the utmost good faith, and the most perfect frankness and truthfulness in all the transactions of business; but courts of justice would be utterly powerless to enforce such a standard of morality. They would have neither the time nor the means of investigating the innumerable arts of buyers and sellers. And so courts have been obliged to lay down certain practical rules and limitations upon the subject of misrepresentation. Thus the misrepresentation must generally be of facts, or matters of fact. and not of mere matters of expectation or opinion, 4 as if one should represent that an estate contained a valuable mine. when in fact no mine existed, or that an estate contained only two or three hundred acres, when in fact it contained over twelve hundred acres, or that there was no timber upon it, when there was a large amount of valuable timber,1 or the seller should falsely represent that the custom of a public-house was a certain sum monthly,2 or that an estate was situate in one locality or county, when it was situate in another,3 or that stocks were selling for such a sum in the market, when they were worthless,4 or that a third person has paid a certain sum for the same property,5 or that it rents for so much. 6 In these and similar cases the misrepresentation is of facts that go to the merits of the contract, and avoid it, if false. But if the representation is to the value, which is matter of opinion, it will not in general avoid the contract, as where the affirmation is that the estate is worth so much; or even if the representation is stronger, as that so much was given for it, or that so much has been offered or refused.7 Any person who confides in or is cheated by such representations is considered too careless of his own interests to invoke the interposition of courts.8 A misrepresentation, however, of a mere matter of opinion may avoid a contract, or convert the fraudulent party into a trustee, where the other party is known to place confidence in the opinions and judgment of the person with whom he is dealing, or where the relations between the parties are of a confidential and fiduciary character, or where one party has peculiar or exclusive means of acquiring proper information upon which to form a judgment or opinion, or where the representations are such that one party is induced to rely upon the opinions of the other.

§ 174. Again, the misrepresentation must be of some fact material to the contract, or of something that goes to its essence; 3 as if an estate is represented to contain one thousand acres, and it contains nine hundred and ninetynine acres, 4 or if the age of an article is represented to be ten years, and it is a few months more or less, 5 or a thing is represented to have been purchased in one place and it is in fact purchased at another,6 or if a spring of water is represented to be upon a given tract of land, when in fact it is not:7 in all these matters the facts represented are too trifling or collateral to be material, and no relief would be granted. Yet, if the leading motive of the purchase of an estate was known to be material, relief would be granted. As, if the leading motive of the purchase of an estate was known to be the purpose of acquiring a spring of water, then a fraudulent misrepresentation as to the locality of the spring would become material to the contract; or if the vendor should fraudulently point out the boundary lines, so as to take in the spring, or more land than belonged to him, the contract would be avoided. But if the boundaries are properly pointed out, a misrepresentation as to the number of acres in a farm is not material.9

§ 175. The misrepresentation must also be of something peculiarly within the knowledge of one of the parties, or the facts must be of such a nature that both parties cannot easily obtain the information. Thus, if both parties have the same means of information, as if both parties go upon a tract of land and have equal means of judging of the quantity of timber upon it,1 or if representations are made of town lots and the future prospects of the town, and the facts are equally open to both parties upon inquiry, or if there is a misrepresentation of title, and the facts are equally accessible to both parties,3 or generally, if both parties have the same information, or an equal opportunity to obtain the same information, there cannot be such a fraud, arising from such a misrepresentation as will convert one of the parties into a trustee.4 So if there are fraudulent misrepresentations sufficient to avoid the contract, and the innocent party obtains a knowledge of all the facts before completing the contract, he can have no relief.⁵ And so if the misrepresentations, though fraudulent, are so vague and uncertain that they ought not to mislead a reasonable man, but should rather put him upon inquiry, he can have no relief.6

§ 176. The action of courts in cases of alleged fraud will frequently depend upon the form in which the matter is brought before them, and upon the relief sought in the proceedings. Thus a bill may be brought by a party for the specific performance of a contract which he holds, or a bill may be brought by a party to set aside the contract, or convert the opposite party who holds under the contract into a trustee, or a suit may be brought by a party at common law

to recover damages for the breach of the same contract. It does not follow, because a court of equity would refuse to decree the specific performance of a contract, that it would also, on a proper bill, decree the contract to be set aside, or that it would order the party claiming under it to be a trustee for the other party.1 And so if a party comes into a court of equity to ask that an agreement which he holds may be specifically performed by the opposite party, he must come with clean hands, as it is said. There must not be any fraud, misrepresentation, or concealment on his part in procuring the contract; or, still stronger, there must not be a suspicion of concealment, misrepresentation, fraud, or unfairness adhering to him. And even further, if the bargain imposes great hardship on the defendant, or is made under any misapprehension or mistake, or unadvisedly, courts of equity will decline to interfere actively in decreeing a specific execution of the agreement, but will leave the parties to their rights at law.2 It will be seen from this that it requires much less evidence of fraud to enable a defendant to resist the specific performance of an agreement, than it requires to enable him to succeed as a plaintiff in a bill to set aside the same contract.3 In the case last named he must establish the fraud affirmatively, by proof of the facts and circumstances, to the reasonable satisfaction of the court. And there may be such a case that the court would refuse to set aside a contract on the one side, because the evidence of fraud was insufficient to set the court in motion; and on the other side it would refuse to decree a specific performance, because the circumstances were too suspicious to allow it actively to interfere for the other party. In such case the parties would be left to an action at common law upon the agreements with such rights as they may have in a commonlaw suit.4

§ 177. The rules that apply to affirmative acts or representations which mislead, deceive, and defraud, are of comparatively easy application in most cases. A single affirmative word upon a material matter tending to mislead, and actually misleading, is enough to establish fraud. (a) It is the suggestio falsi which may be defined to be a false affirmation, in whatever form it may be made, whether by words or acts, of a material fact, rightfully acted upon by the other party: such an affirmation avoids the contract or converts the offending party into a trustee for the person defrauded. But how far a contracting party may legally conceal facts known to him, affecting the value of the subject-matter of the agreement, is another and more difficult question. There is no doubt in sound morals upon the matter. The natural instincts of every right-minded man concur with every writer on morals in condemning every concealment that suffers another to contract in ignorance of the facts that give value to his property.2 The common law teaches as high a standard of morals as any other system of law. The decisions of judges and the books of elementary

v. Gould, [1893] 1 Q. B. 491, 498. The above rule does not apply when there is a legal obligation on the part of one person towards another to give him correct information, such as the obligation of a trustee to give, on demand, to his cestui que trust information as to the trust fund; but the trustee is not obliged to answer the inquiries of a stranger, like an intending incumbrancer, who is about to deal with the cestui que trust. ⁽a) The rule now is that one person is not liable, at least in an action of deceit, for a false representation upon the faith of which another person acts, even though made carelessly or negligently, and without investigation, provided he made it in the honest belief that it was true. Derry r. Peck, 14 A. C. 337; Angus v. Clifford, [1891] 2 Ch. 449; Nash v. Minnesota Title Co., 163 Mass. 571; Kountze v. Kennedy, 117 N. Y. 121. See Houston v. Thornton, 122 N. C. 365. writers contain the highest and purest maxims of good faith and sound morality in every transaction and relation of life. Whenever, therefore, a question of concealment arises, either in a suit at common law or in equity, it cannot be a question what the highest morality requires; but it is a question how far courts can go practically in giving relief, without rendering the contracts of men so uncertain that no business could be transacted without danger of prolonged litigation. In communities governed by known, fixed, and practical rules, and not by the mere discretion of men or judges, it sometimes happens that courts must decline to give relief in cases where a man of pure principles and delicate honor would scorn to obtain or hold an advantage. Thus, in all cases of suggestio falsi, where active steps have been taken to deceive and gain an advantage, courts have little trouble in giving relief; but where an advantage has been gained by concealment, or suppressio veri, as it is called, or by mere silence, it is more difficult to lay down fixed rules that may not do more harm than good to business and society. However, concealment, or suppressio veri, is often of that fraudulent character that avoids a contract or converts the offending party into a trustee.

§ 178. There may be such relations between the parties that silence, or the non-disclosure of a material fact, will be a fraudulent concealment. If a person standing in a special relation of trust and confidence to another has information concerning property, and contracts with the other, and does not disclose his exclusive knowledge, the contract may be avoided, or he may be held as a constructive trustee. Thus, if an attorney contracts with his client without disclosing to him material facts in his possession, the contract would be void. The trust and confidence of the client in his attorney is such that an obligation is imposed upon the attorney to communicate every material circumstance of law or fact. Mere silence, under such circumstances, becomes fraudulent concealment. The same rule applies to all contracts of an agent with his principal, principal with his surety, landlord with his tenant, parent with his child, guardian with his ward, ancestor with the heir, husband with his wife, trustee with his cestui que trust, executors or administrators with creditors, legatees, or distributees of the estate, partners with their copartners, appointors with their appointees, and part-owners with part-owners;2 though the part-owners of a ship, holding by several and independent titles, were held not to stand in such confidential relations to each other that one was under obligation to communicate material facts upon a negotiation to purchase. 3 (a) If any of the parties above named propose to contract with the persons with whom they stand in such relations of trust and confidence, they must use the utmost good faith. It is not enough that they do not affirmatively misrepresent: they must not conceal; they must speak, and speak fully to every material fact known to them, or the contract will not be allowed to stand.4 Thus, if a partner who keeps the accounts of the firm should purchase his copartner's interest, without disclosing the state of the accounts, the agreement could not stand. The same rule applies to family relations in general; as, where a younger brother disputed the legitimacy of his elder brother, and a settlement and partition were entered into, the younger brother having in his possession facts that tended to show that his parents intermarried before the birth of the elder, which facts he did not communicate, the settlement was set aside. The duty of disclosing facts arises either from a fiduciary relation, or from a trust properly understood to be reposed in one party by another about a matter concerning which the latter has peculiar means of information.

§ 179. There are, also, cases where a party must not be silent upon a material fact within his knowledge, although he stands in no relation of trust and confidence. Thus, if a party taking a guaranty from a surety does not disclose facts within his knowledge that enhance the risk, and suffers the surety to bind himself in ignorance of the increased risk,⁴ or if a party already defrauded by his clerk should receive security from a third person for such clerk's fidelity, without communicating the fact of the fraud already committed, thus holding the clerk out as trustworthy;⁵ in both these and in similar cases the contracts would be void for concealment. cumstances, would be equivalent to a positive affirmation that no such facts existed.1 And so, if a party knows that another is relying upon his judgment and knowledge in contracting with him, although no confidential relation exists. and he does not state material facts within his knowledge, the contract will be avoided; for knowingly to permit another to act as though the relation was confidential, and yet not to state material facts, is fraudulent. It is said that a party in such circumstances is bound to destroy the confidence reposed in him, or to state all the facts which such confidence demands.2 He cannot himself contract at arm's length, and permit the other to act as though the relation was one of trust and confidence. And so, if one party knows that the other has fallen into a delusion or mistake as to an article of property, and he does not remove such delusion or mistake, but is silent, and enters into a contract, knowing that the other is contracting under the influence of such delusion or mistake, the contract may be set aside; for, not to remove that delusion or mistake is equivalent to an express misrepresentation.3

§ 180. There must be a positive concealment to amount to a suppressio veri. Mere silence, if nothing is done to conceal a fact, is not in general suppressio veri. Aliud est celare, aliud tacere. Mere silence between strangers, contracting at arm's length, and understanding that they are so contracting, will not in general avoid a contract, or convert one of the parties into a trustee for the other. Thus, the value of property may frequently depend upon extrinsic facts: as, whether there is peace or war, whether there is or is not a demand in the market, or in a distant place for property of that description, whether transportation is accessible, or whether the money market is easy or close. If one having information upon such matters enters into a contract with another with whom he has no confidential or fiduciary relations, and he neither says nor does anything to mislead or deceive, but is simply silent upon the facts known to him, equity will not in general disturb the contract; 1 but if he speaks a word, or does an act, that tends to mislead the other party, or throw him off his guard, the contract may be avoided, and he may be converted into a trustee.² The law permits persons to deal at arm's length, if they both understand that they are so dealing, and it permits them to be silent as to matters known only to one of them, if no inquiries are made; but it does not permit any artifice to be added to silence, in order to conceal a fact material to the contract. Thus, concealment, or suppression veri, which amounts to a fraud in the sense of a court of equity, and for which it will grant relief, is defined to be the non-disclosure of those facts and circumstances which one party is under some legal or equitable obligation to communicate to the other, and which the latter has a right, not merely in foro conscientia, sed juris et de jure, to know.3 Thus, if a stranger discover a valuable mine or spring, or any other thing or circumstances, on or in connection with land of another, he may be silent, and purchase the land;4

but if he use any art to prevent a knowledge of the fact from coming to the owner, equity will rescind the contract, and a very slight act will convert innocent silence into fraudulent concealment. But if one of the parties employs an agent to contract, and the agent, knowing a material fact, is silent or conceals it, his principal will not be affected with the knowledge, nor will the contract be vitiated.

§ 181. Courts of equity will not only interfere in cases of fraud, to set aside acts done, but they will also, if acts have by fraud been prevented from being done, interfere, and treat the case exactly as if the acts had been done; and this they will do, by converting the party who has committed the fraud, and profited by it, into a trustee for the party in whose favor the act would otherwise have been done.4 If one by a promise to buy land at an auction sale for one having an equitable interest in it induces the latter and her friends not to bid against him, he will be held a trustee. 5 Where one induces the owner of real estate not to redeem it by a promise to hold the property until paid by the rents and profits, and then to return the estate, equity will hold him to his promise. 6 So, if a delay is agreed to in the sale of land on a promise of the debtor to sell privately and apply the proceeds in a certain manner, the proceeds will be impressed with a trust. If a person by his promises, or by any fraudulent conduct, with a view to his own profit, prevents a deed or will from being made in favor of a third person, and the property intended for such third person afterwards comes to him who fraudulently prevented the execution of the will or deed, he will be held to be a trustee for the person defrauded, to the extent of the interest intended for him.2 So, where the tenant in tail in remainder, fraudulently or by force, prevented the tenant in tail for life in possession from suffering a common recovery, and thereby barring the entail for the purpose of providing for other persons by will out of the estate, it was held that the tenant in tail in remainder, when the estate came to him, was a trustee, and the court took care that the estate should go precisely as if the common recovery had been suffered, although the tenant in tail was a married woman, and the fraud had been committed by her husband, and she was not privy to it.3 And where issue in tail prevented his father, tenant in tail, from suffering a recovery, by promising to provide for younger children, in favor of whom the recovery was to be suffered, equity converted the tenant in tail into a trustee for the younger children.4 And where a person fraudulently intercepts a gift intended for another, by promising to hand it over if it is left to him, equity will compel an execution of the promise, by converting such person into a trustee. 5 (a) So, if devisces or heirs prevent a testator from charging his estate with annuities or legacies, by saying that it is not worth while to put them in the will, and that they will pay them, they will be trustees for such intended annuitants or legatees. 1 So, if an executor prevents a gift or legacy from being given to one, by promising to pay it as if inserted in the will, he will be a trustee.2 So, where a testator held a note against his father, which he intended to give up in his will, the residuary legatee promising that she would surrender the note, equity held her to be a trustee. 3 So, where one fraudulently procured a deed to be made to herself, instead of to another.4 But there must be some actual fraud in procuring a deed or devise to one's self: the mere breach of a promise to convey is not enough. Where the plaintiff wished to buy certain land and engaged the defendant to find some one who would lend the plaintiff the necessary money, and the defendant dissuaded the plaintiff from seeking the money in other directions, in consequence of which the plaintiff did to some extent abstain from trying to get the funds elsewhere, and the defendant bought the land on his own behalf with his own money and took a deed to himself, it was held that the defendant was not a trustee for the plaintiff either on the ground of agency or fraud. Judge Holmes said: "In any view of the law, before we can convert a man into a trustee, on the ground of fraud, we must be able to see with some reasonable certainty that his fraud was the means of depriving the plaintiff of the property he seeks to follow," and in this case he did not deem it probable that such was the consequence of the defendant's fraudulent concealment of his intent to buy, and of his dissuasions.1 We think this decision is open to severe criticism. Such fraudulent conduct should be repressed with a strong hand, the presumption should be against the evil doer so strongly as to cut off the chance of his gaining an advantage by his own wrong or keeping it if gained.(a) If an heir fraudulently, or through ignorance, procure a will to be revoked, so that the estate comes to him, he will be a trustee; as, where A. had sold a part of his estate, and the purchaser desired a fine to be levied, B., his heir, acting as his attorney, advised a fine to be levied of his whole estate, whereby A.'s will was revoked, and the estate descended to B.; the devisee under the will called upon B. to hold the property as his trustee, and he was so held by the court; Lord Eldon saying, "You, who have been wanting in what I conceive to be the duty of an attorney, if it happens that you get an advantage by that neglect, you shall not hold that advantage, but you shall be trustee of the property for the benefit of that person who would have been entitled to it if you had known what, as an attorney, you ought to have known, and, not knowing it, you shall not take advantage of your own ignorance." In such cases it has been held that mere promises are not enough, that there must be some proof of a fraudulent intent or purpose to create a trust; it is also held that such trust does not follow the property, but is only an agreement which equity will enforce.²

§ 182. While a court of equity will thus create a trust where a person has by fraud prevented a will from being made in favor of another, it has no jurisdiction to prevent the probate of, or to set aside, a will fraudulently procured. Ecclesiastical and common-law courts in England, and probate courts with the common-law courts in the United States, alone have jurisdiction over wills. Thus, until within a short period all wills in England were first presented to the ecclesiastical courts, and they were there allowed or disallowed according to the evidence. If they were allowed, the final judgment allowing them was conclusive upon the personalty until such judgment was reversed or annulled. The validity of such will, however, so far as real estate was concerned, was tried in the courts of common law as often as the title to the separate parcels of land was in controversy. Whenever in the prosecution or defence of a real action such will of real estate was given in evidence, not only its execution was tried, but its validity, as whether it was obtained by undue influence or fraud, or whether the testator was of sound mind. Courts of equity in a few early cases assumed jurisdiction to set aside wills procured by fraud,3 but it is now well settled that they will not interfere, but that courts of common law have exclusive jurisdiction; nor will they interfere to set aside the judgment or probate of a will procured by fraud. To set aside such a judgment, proceedings must be had in the nature of proceedings for a new trial in the court in which such judgment or decree was passed.2 The extent to which a court of equity will go in correcting a fraud perpetrated in relation to a will, is to give relief where fraud has prevented a will from being made, or where a fraud has been practised upon the legatee, as where a name is inserted fraudulently in a will in place of the intended devisee or legatee, or where the revocation of a will has been procured or prevented by fraud,3 or where there is a gift to executors under such circumstances that it ought to be a trust for relations, or where a legatee promises the testator that he will hand over the legacy to a third person.4 In all these cases the will itself is established, but certain other collateral things are decreed growing out of the manner in which the will was procured.⁵ In New York, New Jersey, and South Carolina, the old English practice is followed, and wills must be proved whenever they are used to establish or defeat the title to real estate, nor has a court of equity jurisdiction to set them aside. This rule has been modified in New York so far that when the title of real estate depends upon a will, the validity of which is doubted, and the parties are not in possession of the real estate, nor in such a position that a real action can be brought, or if there is any technical reason why a real action cannot be sustained, a court of equity will take jurisdiction to prevent a failure of justice.1 In nearly all the other States the judgments of the courts of probate allowing a will are conclusive upon all the world, both as to real and personal estate. In all actions at law involving title under such wills, it is only necessary to produce the judgment of the probate court allowing them. Courts of equity have no jurisdiction to set aside such wills for fraud, nor can they set aside the judgments of the probate court allowing them.2 If, however, a will is probated by accident or mistake, or the probate is procured by fraud, the judgment may be reversed or modified by proceedings in the same court in the nature of a petition for a review or for a new trial.3 This, however, may depend upon the statutes of the several States giving jurisdiction to their several courts of probate. While courts of equity will not interfere to set aside wills procured by fraud, or to set aside the probate of those procured by fraud, they will not interfere in favor of the fraudulent party to enable him to establish any rights under the will.4 As a general rule neither courts of equity nor of common law will take notice of a will for any purpose unless it has been proved in the courts of probate having jurisdiction over such matters.5

§ 183. Another instance of a constructive trust arising from fraud in relation to deeds or wills, is where a party has suppressed or destroyed a deed or other instrument of title. Every one is entitled to aid from the judicial tribunals in all cases of fraud, and if a defendant has fraudulently suppressed or destroyed the evidence of a man's title, and is in possession of the property himself, he ought to be declared a trustee for the rightful owner under the suppressed paper;1 and if a deed or will is destroyed or suppressed, a court of equity can give relief. There seems to be no difficulty in this matter so far as relates to deeds,2 nor so far as relates to wills of real estate in those jurisdictions where a will must be proved in court in every instance where it is necessary to the title of real estate; but in jurisdictions where a will cannot be noticed by other courts until it is first proved in a court of probate, there is a difficulty in proceeding in equity for fraud in suppressing it, except by a bill of discovery of evidence to use in the courts of probate in proving the will. Accordingly it has been determined in some States that a will cannot be acted upon in courts of equity, although lost, destroyed, or suppressed, until it is first proved in a probate court.³ In other States, courts of equity, in cases of suppressed or spoliated wills, have taken jurisdiction in odium spoliatoris, and have allowed such will to be proved, and have carried its provisions into effect, as a court of probate would have done if the will had been produced and regularly administered.1

§ 184. If a party in ignorance and mistake of his rights and interests execute a conveyance, although no fraud is practised upon him, a court of equity will relieve against the instrument; for it is against good conscience to take advantage of one's ignorance to obtain his property.2 Thus, if an heir, in ignorance of the value of his inheritance,3 or in ignorance that some legacies or devises had lapsed,4 should convey his interest for an inadequate consideration, equity would convert the purchaser into a trustee. And if the purchaser should have full knowledge, or should stand in any confidential relation, or should practise the slightest art to mislead or conceal, the equities would of course be much stronger against the transaction; 6 but these circumstances are not necessary to avoid the conveyance, for relief will be granted where both parties are in a mutual state of ignorance, or are laboring under the same mistake. It is to be observed, however, that the ignorance or mistake which entitles a party to relief must be as to some matter of fact;

and that mistake or ignorance of the law, or of the consequences that will follow from the conveyance, will not entitle a party to relief. (a) This rule is established by reason of the great danger of abuse that would arise if parties were allowed to reclaim their property upon allegations that they were ignorant of the law, or mistook the consequences of their acts.2 Thus, if a party has full knowledge of all the facts, and intends to do the acts or execute the instruments in question in the form in which they are executed, he cannot have relief because he was ignorant of or mistook the law, or because the consequences which legally and naturally follow from the transaction are different from what he expected.3 But if there is a mistake in the instrument itself, and it contains what was not agreed or intended, or does not contain all that was agreed and intended, to be in the writing, equity will give relief.4 And if there are any other ingredients in the case, as if there is joined to a party's ignorance or mistake of the law some practice upon him to lead him into the bargain, or if the other party, knowing his ignorance or mistake, still suffers him to go on without information, equity will give relief. If there are any exceptions to the rule that ignorance or mistake of the law is not a ground for relief, they are few in number, and have something peculiar in their character, which calls in other elements of equity, or they stand upon some urgent pressure of circumstances.

§ 185. When a conveyance is made to compromise claims which the parties deem doubtful,⁴ and especially if the conveyance has for its object the settlement of family controversies,⁵ courts will support it if possible, although founded in ignorance or mistake of facts, as well as of law; provided no fraud has been used to mislead and deceive the party executing the conveyance.⁶

§ 186. If a deed is drawn by accident or mistake to embrace property not intended by the parties, equity will construe the grantee to be a trustee, and will execute the trust by reforming the deed or by ordering a reconveyance. It would be against natural right to allow a person to hold property which he never intended to buy, and which has come to him by such mistake. If by a mistake of a third party land is deeded to the husband instead of the wife, as it should have been by reason of the consideration and the agreement, the husband holds in trust for her.2 But courts require the most full and satisfactory proof before they will vary by parol evidence the contract between the parties, as written and signed by them, 3 and will not give relief unless the mistake is common to both parties,4 except the case is such that the parties may be restored to their original situation.5 But fraud on one party and mistake on the side of the other is a good cause for setting aside a transaction.6

§ 187. Lord Hardwicke, in his analysis of the various kinds of fraud, stated one species to be "fraud apparent from the intrinsic value and subject of the bargain, such as no man in his senses, and not under delusion, would make on the one hand, and as no honest or fair man would accept on the other."1 The meaning of this is, that fraud may be proved by the inadequacy of the consideration paid for property by the purchaser on the one hand,2 or the consideration may be so extravagantly large on the other, 3 as to show that the purchaser was imposed upon. It is to be observed, however, that the consideration alone, whether too large or too small, cannot of itself prove fraud in a transaction, for the reason that a mere voluntary conveyance, without any consideration, is good and valid between the parties. On the same ground mere inadequacy of consideration will not vitiate a deed, 4 and so if a party, knowing that the consideration is inadequate, enters into the agreement with his eyes open, he cannot have relief. It is only where some fraud is practised upon a party that the consideration of a conveyance is material. If it appears that a person intended to convey his property for a consideration reasonably proportionate to its value, but that in fact the consideration received was grossly inadequate, then a court of equity would infer that some fraud or deceit had been practised upon him; 2 or, as Lord Thurlow said, "where the inadequacy of the consideration is so gross and manifest that it is impossible to state it to a man of common sense without producing an exclamation at the inequality of it,3 the court will infer from that fact alone, that there must have been such imposition or oppression in the transaction, or such a want of common understanding in the party, as to amount to a case of fraud, from which no advantage or benefit ought to be derived by the other party."4 Other authorities say that courts will act on the fact alone of inadequacy of consideration when it is so gross and manifest as to shock the conscience. This principle is loose enough, 6 if it is a principle, and of course every case would depend upon its own facts and circumstances. Where there are suspicious circumstances connected with the fact of inadequacy of price, as where the parties stand in a fiduciary relation to each other, or one of them is in distress, or is ignorant, or is weak-minded and imbecile, inadequacy of consideration will become very pertinent, and oftentimes conclusive evidence that fraud and undue influence have been used to bring about a bargain advantageous to the one side and ruinous to the other.

§ 188. Immediately connected with this subject is the sale by an heir or reversioner of his expectancy or reversionary interest. It is said that "it is incumbent upon those who deal with an expectant heir, relative to his reversionary interest, to make good the bargain; that is, to be able to show that a full and adequate consideration was paid. In all such cases the issue is upon the adequacy of the price. No proof of fraud is necessary; and the relief is given upon general principles of mischief to the public, without requiring particular evidence of actual imposition." Such a purchase is a constructive fraud, and the purchaser, if a stranger, will be compelled to account and to give up the bargain, if found to be advantageous. A sale by an heir will not be supported against him unless it is perfectly fair in every respect, and beyond suspicion, and for an adequate price. The burden is upon the purchaser to show the fairness of the transaction and the sufficiency of the consideration, and not upon the heir to impeach either the one or the other; and it is said that it is immaterial that the heir is of mature age. In this country the rule may be stated with still more severity, that the sale, by an heir, of his expectancy during the life of the ancestor, is contrary to public policy and is void, unless such sale is assented to by the ancestor, and supported by an adequate consideration. (a) If, however, the sale is at auction, it will be some proof of fairness and sufficiency of price, and if the sale is made with the knowledge and assent of the ancestor it will be good. If the expectant is not heir, but is simply entitled to a remainder or reversion by virtue of some instrument or settlement, he may sell and assign his future interest, and such sale will not be avoided unless some of the common rules of equity are violated by the purchaser. In such cases there is no fraud upon parents or third persons, consequently there is nothing contrary to public policy in such purchases.¹

§ 189. Another kind of constructive trust arises from the mental incapacities of parties to enter into contracts. Thus a non compos mentis cannot make a binding contract.² The deed of such person is either absolutely void, or at least voidable,³ and equity will give relief by declaring a party v. Davis, 7 Tex. 266; King v. Hamlet, 2 M. & K. 456; 3 Cl. & F. 218.

Needles, 7 Ohio St. 432. The case is not sustained by other authorities, and seems not to rest upon the principles applicable to such transactions.

taking under such a conveyance to be a trustee, and by ordering him to execute a reconveyance.1 Whether a person has capacity enough to make a contract, is always a question of fact in each particular case; for mere weakness of mind, not amounting to idiocy or insanity, is no ground for avoiding a contract. Courts cannot measure the extent of a party's understanding. If, therefore, a person is not an idiot nor an insane person, he may enter into contracts, although he may be of a low order of intelligence and of weak reasoning powers.² At the same time such persons are easily imposed upon and defrauded; and if it appears that one of the parties to a contract is of weak mind and feeble powers, the whole transaction will be carefully investigated, and the conduct of the person procuring such contract will be closely scrutinized; for arts and practices that would be perfectly harmless in a transaction with a man of high intelligence and prudence and great power of observing and reasoning may, and probably would, deceive and mislead a person of weak mind and feeble powers, although not incapable of entering into contracts and transacting business generally.3 Therefore the weakness of a party's mind is a very material fact in determining the character of a transaction, and if, in contracts with such persons, there is found the least art or stratagem, or any undue influence, or any

C. 38; Wise v. as a conveyance, may be set aside in equity for undue influence, or the donor's executors may recover the gift, though the donee did not stand influential relation between the parties, courts will interfere and protect a person of weak mind from his contracts.

§ 190. Mental weakness is not of itself a sufficient ground for avoiding an agreement, but it must appear that some advantage was taken of it to procure a favorable contract; and if the other party stood in some fiduciary relation to the person of weak mind, the burden is upon him to show that the contract was in every respect fair, and that no advantage was obtained from the influential position on the one hand, or from the feebleness of mind on the other. And it is quite immaterial from whence the mental weakness arises. It may arise from a natural and permanent imbecility of mind. or it may arise from some temporary illness or debility, or from the weakness and infirmity of extreme old age. Each case must depend upon its own circumstances. If there is a fixed and permanent state of idiocy or insanity, or if the party is a declared lunatic and his affairs are in the hands of a committee or of a guardian, there can be little or no doubt. Questions generally arise where there is not this entire want of capacity, - where no general rule can be laid down, but the court is left to judge of the capacity of the contracting party, of the circumstances under which the contract was made, and whether from all the facts in the case the contract ought in equity and good conscience to be sustained. Extreme old age, accompanied by great infirmity; or extreme weakness and feebleness of mind, arising from temporary illness or permanent imbecility, stopping short of absolute incapacity, - are all pertinent facts, tending to show, if accompanied by other circumstances, a fraudulent contract; but if upon all the evidence the contract is a fair one, if the enfeebled person is sur-

- § 191. Substantially the same rules apply to deeds and instruments executed by a drunken person. Drunkards, while laboring under the frenzy of drink, are non compotes mentis by their own act,2 and it is said that they may plead non est factum to a deed executed while so drunk that they do not know what they are doing.3 In such case there can of course be no intelligent consent to any contract. But equity will not always interfere to protect a drunken man from the folly of his own acts, and will not, on account of drunkenness alone, set aside a contract or convert the other party into a trustee.4 And this is more especially the rule where the object of the contract is to carry out a family settlement, or the contract is fair and reasonable in its terms.⁵ But if there is any contrivance or management to induce drunkenness and to procure a contract, or if there was any unfair advantage taken of the drunkenness to procure a contract, it would be an actual fraud, and the court will not allow a party to retain any advantage procured in such manner, nor would it lend its aid to carry it into effect.¹

- § 192. So, equity will relieve in all cases of contracts procured by duress, or fear, or apprehension; for if there has been any restraint upon a person's freedom to consent or dissent, or any practice upon his fears, it is a kind of fraud, and no one ought to enjoy an advantage gained in such manner.² Thus, if a contract is made with one in prison, or under any circumstances of oppression, equity will scrutinize it with great care.³ And so, if advantage is taken of the extreme distress or necessity of a party, to obtain a favorable bargain from him, equity will give relief;⁴ but the advantage must have been within the contemplation of the parties at the time.

obtained from a person of weak mind, or under duress, or in great distress, for a grossly inadequate consideration, or upon any unusual, extraordinary, or oppressive terms, the evidence would be much stronger of some fraudulent practice, and would call upon the suspected party for a very complete vindication of the transaction, or he would be converted into a trustee.¹

§ 194. Lord Hardwicke's "third species of fraud may be presumed from the circumstances and condition of the parties contracting; and this goes further than the rule of law, which is, that fraud must be proved, not presumed."2 At law, fraud must be proved; but in equity there are certain rules prohibiting parties bearing certain relations to each other from contracting between themselves; and if parties bearing such relations enter into contracts with each other, courts of equity presume them to be fraudulent, and convert the fraudulent party into a trustee. And herein courts of equity go further than courts of law, and presume fraud in cases where a court of law would require it to be proved; that is, if parties within the prohibited relations or conditions contract between themselves, courts of equity will avoid the contract altogether, without proof, or they will throw upon the party standing in this position of trust, confidence, and influence, the burden of proving the entire fairness of the transaction. Thus, if a parent buys property of his child, a guardian of his ward, a trustee of his cestui que trust, an attorney of his client, or an agent of his principal, equity will either avoid the contract altogether, without proof, or it will throw the burden of proving the fairness of the transaction upon the purchaser; and, if the proof fails, the contract will be avoided, or the purchaser will be construed to be a trustee at the election of the other party. The ground of this rule is, that the danger of allowing persons holding such relations of trust and influence with others to deal with them is so great that the presumption ought to be against the transaction, and the person holding the trust or influence ought to be required to vindicate it from all fraud, or to continue to hold the property in trust for the benefit of the ward, cestui que trust, or other person holding a similar relation.¹

§ 195. These principles are applied in their full vigor to all contracts and sales between trustee and cestui que trust.² The trustee is in such a position of confidence and influence over the cestui que trust, that the contract or bargain will either be void or he will be a constructive trustee, at the election of the cestui que trust, unless the trustee can show that the contract was entirely fair and advantageous to the cestui que trust.³ The presumption is against the transaction.

If a cestui confess judgment or make a deed to the trustee, the burden is on the latter to repel the intendment of law that there was undue influence.1 If a trustee conveys trust property to himself, any one or more of the cestuis may avoid the deed.² In the case just cited the trustees conveyed the trust property to themselves through a third person, without actual intent to defraud, but for a consideration really inadequate. Considerable time had elapsed, there were future interests in the property represented only by the trustee, and persons other than the trustees had acquired rights in the land for value; wherefore on the whole the court allowed the property to be retained on payment of the difference between the actual consideration and its fair value with interest at annual rests. The general rule is, that the trustee shall not take beneficially by gift or purchase from the cestui que trust,3 even although the supposed trustee and purchaser is a mere intermeddler and not a regularly recognized trustee; 4 the question is not whether or not there is fraud in fact, the law stamps the purchase by the trustee as fraudulent per se, 1 to remove all temptation to collusion and prevent the necessity of intricate inquiries in which evil would often escape detection, and the cost of which would be great. The law looks only to the facts of the relation and the purchase. The trustee must not deal with the property for his own benefit.² So where the trustee in selling the property to a third person stipulates that the vendee is to sell it afterwards to the trustee, and the agreement is carried out, the trustee holds still as trustee, and not by an independent title as other purchasers from such vendee might have.³ No trustee can directly or indirectly become a purchaser in his own behalf of the trust property, and hold it against the cestui. 4 (a) A purchase by a trustee inures to the benefit of the cestui. 5 It is not, however, void but only voidable at the election of the cestui que trust. 6 (b) But there are exceptions to the rule, and a trustee may buy from the cestui que trust, provided there is a distinct and clear contract, ascertained after a jealous and scrupulous examination of all the circumstances; that the cestui que trust intended the trustee to buy, and there is fair consideration and no fraud, no concealment, no advantage taken by the trustee of information acquired by him in the character of trustee. The trustee must clear the transaction of every shadow of suspicion, 2 and if he is an attorney he must show that he gave his client, who sold to him, full information and disinterested advice.3 Lord Eldon said he admitted that the exception was a difficult case to make out.4 And it may be said generally that it is difficult to find a case where such a transaction has been sustained.5 Any withholding of information, or ignorance of the facts or of his rights on the part of the cestui, or any inadequacy of price, will make such purchaser a constructive trustee. The cestui que trust must know that he is dealing with the trustee. Therefore, if the trustee purchases through an agent or third person, and the cestui que trust does not know the trustee in the transaction, the contract will be void, or a trust in the agent.1 The rule is that the trustee shall not purchase directly or indirectly; therefore if the trustee conveys to a stranger, and the stranger conveys back to the trustee, the transaction is equally void.² So, if the trustee purchases at auction of the cestui que trust, the presumption is strongly against the transaction,3 and the purchase is generally void.4 And one of several trustees is under the same disabilities:5 they cannot convey to each other. And so, if the purchase is made by an agent or attorney of the trustee.7 Nor can the trustee's wife purchase. 8 Nor can the trustee purchase as agent for another. (a) And he may purchase of the cestui que trust property not embraced in the trust fund, care being taken that the influence of the relation does not affect the transaction.² Sometimes the trustee is allowed, by decrees of sale, to be a bidder for the property at his own auction; in such case the trustee must show the utmost diligence and good faith for the interest of the cestui que trust.3 Where a trustee has an interest to protect by bidding at a sale of trust property, he may ask the court for permission to bid, and when this is granted after hearing all parties interested, he can bid, and obtain a perfect title.4 And a trustee may buy at a sale procured by some one else, not controlled by himself, in good faith to protect the interests of himself and others. 5 (b) A trustee who has bona fide sold the property to a third person may afterwards buy it for himself,6 and the prohibition does not apply where the sale of the property is by a judgment ereditor of the cestui through the sheriff, and not the trustee's sale.7 Acquiescence, lapse of time, or express act of the cestui may make the trustee's title good. 8 Matters of indebtedness growing out of relations of trust and confidence are subject to adjustment and settlement the same as claims arising in other transactions.9

It is thus seen that the rule against purchasing by trustees, of the cestui que trust, amounts almost to prohibition; for if a trustee purchases the property, and sells it at a profit, he must account for it as a trustee; not because there was any fraud in the transaction, but because it is against the policy of the law to allow such transactions.⁹ Nor is it

§ 200. Conveyances from wards to guardians are investigated with more severity by courts than contracts between parent and child, for the reason that there is not that family relationship and affection which sustain and uphold family settlements. The relation between guardian and ward is one of great influence over the ward, and is generally founded upon the pecuniary relation between them. While the relation actually subsists, no contracts can be made.⁵ But if a contract or conveyance is made by the ward to the guardian just after attaining his property, and before a full settlement is made, and while the influence of the guardian is still in full force, courts will examine it in all its aspects; and the guardian claiming under such a conveyance must satisfy the court that the transaction was fair and proper, and that it did not proceed from undue influence, or from any fear, hope, or other unworthy motive induced in the mind of the ward by the conduct of the guardian. 6 If there is the slightest suspicion of any improper motive for a gift, as that a better or more speedy settlement may be obtained, the conveyance will be avoided, and the guardian will continue to hold the property in trust for the ward. full settlement has been made, and the ward has obtained the full control of his property, and if sufficient time has elaped to emancipate the mind of the ward from all undue impressions and influences, it may not only be proper, but highly meritorious and honorable, for a ward to make a fitting gift to a guardian who has faithfully performed his trust; and a court fully satisfied upon these points would uphold it.¹

§ 201. In the same manner courts of equity carefully scrutinize contracts between parents and children by which the property of children is conveyed to parents. The position and influence of a parent over a child are so controlling, that the transaction should be carefully examined, and sales by a child to a parent must appear to be fair and reasonable.² Such contracts are not, however, prima facie void, but there must be some affirmative proof of undue influence or other improper conduct to render the transaction void; for while the parent holds a powerful influence over the child, the law recognizes it as a rightful and proper influence, and does not presume, in the first instance, that a parent would make use of his authority and parental power to coerce, deceive, or defraud the child.3 Therefore it is always necessary to prove some improper and undue influence, in order to set aside contracts between parents and children. 4 (a) As purchases by a parent in the name of a child do not create a resulting trust, but are presumed, in the first instance, to be the advances made by the parent to the child, so conveyances to the parent by the child may be a proper family arrangement, and for the best interest of the child. If no such considerations can be found in the case, and the conveyance, after all allowances are made, is found to have been wrongfully obtained from the child, a court of equity will set it aside or convert the parent into a trustee. But the proceedings must be had at once. The child cannot wait until the parent's death or until the rights of other parties have intervened. The same rules apply when contracts are made between children and those who have put themselves in loco parentis; and so when family relatives make use of their position and influence to obtain undue and improper advantages, as where two brothers obtained a deed from a sister, it was set aside.

chases from the client. It has been said in some cases that the attorney is absolutely prohibited from entering into contracts with his clients.2 If the rule is not quite so peremptory as this, it at least goes to the extent of prohibiting him from contracting with his client for an interest in the subject-matter of the litigation.3 The client is so completely in the hands of the attorney in relation to the subject-matter of litigation, that it would be almost impossible for him to enter into a free and fair contract in regard to it. Besides, it is against the policy of the law that attorneys should obtain interests in litigated claims, and exercise their offices under such influences of gain. In all cases the burden is upon the attorney making a purchase of a client, to vindicate the transaction from all suspicion. 4 (a) And if the attorney cannot produce evidence that puts the transaction clearly beyond all doubt or question, it will be set aside or he will be converted into a trustee. This disability of an attorney continues as long as the relation of attorney and client continues, and as much longer as the influence of the relation can be supposed to extend. If the relation has ceased, but the influence of the relation continues to affect the minds of the parties, all contracts made under the influence will be avoided.² But if the relation has entirely ceased, and there can be supposed to be no influence remaining, the rule will not apply.3 And so, if an attorney makes a purchase of a client of property entirely disconnected with the subject of the litigation, and the transaction is in all respects as if it had taken place between strangers, the rule will not apply.4 So the rule does not apply to a gift to an attorney in the will of a client, if the will is a good and valid instrument in the courts where it is presented for probate; 5 and a voidable conveyance to an attorney may be confirmed in the will of the client. But the rule will not apply to an attorney incidentally consulted concerning some point of the litigation, but who is not employed or confided in, for the management of the case,2 nor will it apply to the attorney upon the other side.3 Nor will it apply after the relation has ceased and the attorney has assumed a hostile position in endeavoring to collect his fees.4 But it has been held that an attorney having a lien or an execution in favor of his client could not buy in land of his client at a sale thereof on execution.⁵ If an attorney takes an absolute deed from a client in payment of his fees, the court may order it to stand as a mortgage security, 6 and where there was a fair agreement that an attorney's fees should be charged upon the estate, if recovered, the court allowed it to stand in the absence of undue influence, and so the court will not interfere after a great lapse of time where the sale was for full value.8 Where an attorney buys land at an execution sale in favor of his client, the latter may elect to hold the lawver his trustee, but must make his choice within a reasonable time.9

§ 203. All the dealings between attorney and client will be earefully examined by courts, and no purchase of a client's property will be allowed to stand. Thus a bond obtained from a poor and distressed client, the consideration not appearing with sufficient clearness, was set aside, and so a bond was not allowed to stand except for the amount of fees actually due,2 and a judgment was inquired into after a considerable lapse of time.3 And even where a barrister married a lady client, and undertook to draw the marriage settlement, according to the stipulations between them, it was held to be open to investigation by the court. 4 (a) The same rules are applied to all persons standing in the relation of attorneys or confidential advisers, although they are not attorneys in fact; thus clerks in an attorney's office, who do business for the client and obtain a knowledge of his affairs and his confidence, cannot avail themselves of their position to make favorable bargains or purchases,5 and so one who acts as a confidential adviser in a matter before a magistrate, where attorneys are not employed, is under the same obligations and disabilities.6 Of course, if there is actual fraud committed by an attorney in a purchase of a client, the transaction will be summarily dealt with.7

§ 204. The same principles apply to transactions between all persons standing in confidential and influential relations to each other. procuring a third person to purchase in the first instance, and by receiving a conveyance from such third person.1 This rule is so strict, that they cannot purchase any of the assets of the estate under their charge, although the assets are ordered by the court to be sold at public auction; 2 and even where a creditor seized a portion of the estate and exposed it to public sale, it was held that the executor or administrator could not purchase.3 So if an executor join with others in the purchase of the estate the sale may be avoided.4 If, however, the estate is sold in good faith to a stranger, with no collusion between him and the executor, there is nothing to prevent the executor from purchasing it afterwards like any other property. 5 So an executor may purchase the interest of a third person in the estate.6 If fraud is superadded to a purchase by an executor, or any use of his situation is made to make a more favorable purchase, it will of course be avoided, or he will be ordered to account for the property and all the profits received. But generally a purchase of the assets of an estate by an executor is not void, but only voidable, and such sale may be confirmed by all the parties interested in the estate; 8 and so a long acquiescence in a purchase made by an executor, by all the heirs, would be held to be a confirmation. If an administrator purchases the estate at his own sale, and afterwards conveys the estate to a third person, his vendee will be charged with notice of the defect of title, as it would be apparent upon the face of the deed.² But if the administrator should collusively convey to a third person and take back a deed from him, and then himself sell, the purchaser would not probably be charged with notice unless he had actual notice.3

between parties sustaining these relations to each other, and to have thus taken away all temptation to abuse the trust, v. Hazlehurst L. Co. (Miss.), 16 So. 496; Walter v. Jones, 107 Ala. 331. Thus, an agent, purchasing as such at an auction sale, may be compelled to convey the purchased estate, if he takes the title in his own name. See Fletcher v. Bartlett, 157 Mass. 113: Roby v. Gilman Linseed Oil Co. v. Norton, 89 Iowa, 434; Stevenson v. Kyle, 42 W. Va. 229.

The statute of frauds distinguishes between an agency and a trust or confidence, and an agent, who buys for himself with his own money, when directed by his principal to buy for him, will not be required to convey to the principal. James r. Smith, [1891] 1 Ch. 384, 388, sustaining Bartlett v. Pickergill, 1 Eden, 515; 4 East, 577, n., which was doubted in Heard v. Pilley, L. R. 4 Ch. 548. Browne, St. of Frauds, § 96; Halsell v. The relation of a factor to his principal may be at the same time that of debtor and creditor and one of trust. See Patapsco Guano Co. v. Bryan, 118 N. C. 576. See Leaphart v. Commercial Bank, 45 S. C. 563; Davis v. Scovern, 130 Mo. 303; Gisborn v. Charter Oak Life Ins. Co., 142 U. S. 326. When the legal title to the proceeds of consigned goods, deposited in a bank, is in a factor, and the principal is thereby prevented from suing the bank at law, the latter may maintain a bill in equity against the bank, if it receive the payment with knowledge that the money belongs equitably to the factor's consignor. Union Stock Yards Bank v. Gillespie, 137 U. S. 411, 419.

When money is placed in the hands of one person to be delivered to another, a trust arises in the latter's favor, which he may enforce by bill in equity, if not by action at law; the acceptance of the money with notice of its ultimate destination being sufficient to create a duty on the bailee's part to devote it to the purposes intended by the bailor. In enforcing such trust, a court of equity may make such incidental orders as may be necessary for the proper protection and distribution of the fund. Keller v. Ashford, 133 U. rather than to investigate each case as it arises. 1 But perhaps the entire freedom of trade and business, and the convenience of society, demand that there should be at least the possibility of dealing between persons bearing these relations, and thus there is no absolute prohibition. The principal may buy and sell of the agent, and he may make an agent the object of his bounty, but there must be the utmost good faith and frankness in the dealing.2 The principal is entitled to the best skill and judgment of his agent in the conduct of his affairs. If at the same time the agent is at liberty to purchase the property of his principal, there would be such a conflict between his duty and his interest, that there could be no safety in business. An agent, therefore, if he purchases property of his principal, must communicate fully and truly every fact in relation to such property within his knowledge; and he must also be known as the purchaser. for if he acts secretly the contract will certainly be held to be fraudulent; and so if he is employed to purchase for another and he purchases for himself, he will be held to be a trustee.³ No person whose duty to another is inconsistent with his taking an absolute title to himself will be permitted to purchase for himself. For no one can hold a benefit acquired by fraud or a breach of his duty. All the knowledge of the agent belongs to the principal for whom he acts, and if the agent use it for his own benefit, he will become a trustee for his principal.² Whenever one person is placed in a relation to another, by the act or consent of that other, or the act of a third person, or of the law, so that he becomes interested for him or with him in any subject of property or business, he will in equity be prohibited from acquiring rights in that subject antagonistic to the person with whose interest he has been associated.3 Therefore, whatever an agent may be employed to do, he cannot use his position nor the knowledge obtained by his employment to obtain a bargain from his principal. Nor can he take advantage of his own negligence; as where an agent allowed his principal's property to be sold for taxes and bought it himself, he was held as a trustee, although the relation of principal and agent had ceased.⁴ In some cases he may innocently purchase of his principal; but if he conceals himself and acts through another, either in purchasing from or selling to his principal, he may be held as a trustee, or the contract may be entirely avoided; 5 or if he accepts any benefits in conducting the business of his principal, he will hold them in trust for him, or if he makes use of his position in any way to obtain a title to himself.2 If in matters within the purposes of his agency he takes a conveyance in his own name, he is a trustee ex maleficio,3 as if he buys a tax certificate for his principal and then takes the deed in his own name.4 And where one partner C, gets a lease of the premises in his father's name when the other partner D. had a right to expect he would secure a joint lease for the partnership, C.'s father holds in trust not only for C. but for D. also.5 So if he buys for himself and his partner the land which he was engaged to buy for the plaintiff, and has the deed made to his partner and pays the money from his own funds, still a trust will result, and the payment will be considered only as a loan, on security of the title.6 But where one breaks a mere parol agreement to buy land for another and buys it himself, there is no trust, but only a breach of parol contract.7 The test is whether the act is inconsistent with duties resulting from a relation of confidence between the parties.8

the contracts of trustees are of two classes. One class consists of contracts made by trustees with themselves, or with a board of trustees or directors of which they are members. These contracts are void from the fact that no man can contract with himself. If, therefore, a board of directors should convey all the property of a corporation to themselves, the conveyance would be void, without any inquiry into its fairness, or whether it was beneficial to the corporation or not. And the same rule applies if a board of directors convey the property of a corporation, or any part of it, to one of their number, he being one of the trustees negotiating a contract with himself.1 And the same rule was applied where the trustees of one corporation, being the trustees of another corporation, conveyed the property of the one corporation to another, although there was a decree of court.2 The other class of contracts is where a trustee contracts with the cestui que trust, or a third person. contracts are not void; as where a director makes a purchase of property from the corporation itself, acting independently of its directors, the contract is not void; but the same rules apply, that apply to other trustees purchasing of the cestui que trust: the burden is upon the trustee to vindicate the transaction from all suspicion.3 And so all advan-

no injury to the cestui que trust need be proved. Gilman C. & S. R. R. Co. v. Kelly, 77 Ill. 426. But where stockholders sanction a contract under which directors loan money to the corporation, and its bonds secured by mortgage are given, if the money is properly applied, the corporation is estopped from setting up that the bonds and mortgage are void by reason of the trust relations which directors sustain to it. § 208. Again, if the parents, relations, agents, or friends of young persons hold out inducements of marriage by representing the amount of property that will come to one or the other of the parties; or if they hold out pecuniary considerations to induce the marriage, and if the marriage and a marriage settlement take place upon the faith of such representations and inducements, the persons making them will be bound to make them good: if the persons making the representations and holding out the inducements have the property referred to in their hands or under their control, a court of equity will construe them into trustees of such property for the parties to whom the inducements were held out; and the court will compel them to execute the trust by making good the representations or inducements, if they are of such a character that a party entering into a marriage might reasonably have relied upon them.2 If, however, a person states his intention to confer property upon one of the parties to a marriage, as that he has made his will giving a certain estate to one of the parties, and that he does not know any reason, or have any intention of altering it, but at the same time refuses to make any contract or agreement, or to be bound in any way not to alter his will, equity will not compel the execution of such a representation or intention;

§ 209. These rules apply to every kind of fiduciary relation. The principle is the same in all of them. Assignces of bankrupt or insolvent estates are subject to the same rules, whether they are appointed by courts and by operation of law, or by voluntary assignments, or by deeds of trust for creditors.² So the solicitors of a bankrupt cannot purchase his property. Committees or guardians of a lunatic cannot obtain the ownership of the property, 3 nor can the directors, trustees, or governors of a charity so deal with the funds of the charity, or take leases of the charity lands, as to make a profit to themselves.4 And so of partners and joint contractors, or purchasers and receivers. In all these cases the fiduciary must account for all the trust property that comes to his hands, whether by purchase or otherwise, and for all profits which may come to him by dealing with such property, and even for all bonuses or gratuities given to him by strangers for contracts made with them in relation to the trust property. 5 For example, a bank officer cannot make a profit for himself by loaning the bank's money, but will have to bear all losses arising from the attempt. Whenever two persons stand in such relation that confidence is necessarily reposed by one, and the influence growing out of that fact is possessed by the other, and this confidence is abused or the influence is exerted to obtain an advantage at the expense of the confiding party, the party so availing himself of his position will not be permitted to retain the advantage. Trustees cannot use their relations to the trust property for their personal advantage.

§ 210. But equity goes even further than this. It not only watches over these defined relations of parties, but it scrutinizes the undefined relations of friendly habits of intercourse, personal reliance, and confidential advice.4 It is well known that habits of kindness, confidence, and trust grow between neighbors and friends; and if advantage is taken of such relations to obtain an unfair bargain, equity will set it aside or convert the offending party into a trustee.⁵ Of course no rules can be laid down by which to judge all such cases; for every case must of necessity depend upon its own facts.6 Nor will a gift or sale be set aside merely because it is to a confidential friend or adviser, even though it is made by an old and infirm person, or by one of weak mind; but if there is any proof of any superadded concealment, misrepresentation, or contrivance, or any art by which the party was thrown off his guard, or unduly influenced by his trust and confidence in, or partiality for a supposed friend, equity will interpose and correct the wrong.7 Dealings of shipowners with their masters, of parishioners with their clergymen, of medical advisers with their patients, of friends and neighbors who by their situation and habits of intercourse have obtained the confidence of each other, and of a man and woman living together as husband and wife, come within this rule. And so the relation of landlord and tenant, partner and partner, principal and surety, and tenants in common may create such influences of trust and confidence that courts of equity will construe a trust to arise out of their contracts, or will decree such contracts to be set aside.

- § 211. So property obtained by one through the fraudulent practices of a third person will be held under a constructive trust for the person defrauded, though the person receiving the benefit is innocent of collusion. If such person accepts the property, he adopts the means by which it was procured; or, as Lord Ch. Justice Wilmot said, "Let the hand receiving the gift be ever so chaste, yet if it comes through a polluted channel, the obligation of restitution will follow it." This principle of course cannot prevail against a pur-14 Ves. 273; Gibson v. Russell, 2 N. C. C. 104; Griffiths v. Robins, 3 Madd. 191; Popham v. Brooke, 5 Russ. 8; Maul v. Reder, 51 Penn. chaser in good faith for a valuable consideration, and without notice of any fraudulent influence.

§ 212. So a contract intended to defraud third persons, who are not parties to it, will be set aside, or a trust will be declared for such third persons.1 Thus, if property is conveyed by a debtor for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, the conveyance is void at law, and in some cases equity will construe it to create a trust for the creditors. And so if in an arrangement and composition of creditors with the debtor, one of them secretly obtains an extra advantage for executing the composition deed, he will be converted into a trustee by reason of the fraud, and the agreement will be null and void.³ Again, a transfer in fraud of a wife, it being intended to prevent her from obtaining alimony, might raise a constructive trust in favor of the wife.4 In this connection it must be noted that on the same facts there is a decided difference as to the manner in which equity will treat persons standing in differing relations to those facts. In favor of the person defrauded a trust will be raised by law, but in favor of the fraudulent grantor none; although if there is an express trust in favor of the grantor, the trustee will not be excused from performance by showing that the transaction was a fraud on some third person.⁵ (a) valuable consideration; 1 or with the knowledge or concurrence of the other party, although an infant; 2 and the party alleging fraud must prove it to the satisfaction of the court.3 For the same reasons a conveyance by a husband during the pendency of a divorce suit on the part of his wife, in order to avoid the payment of alimony, will be held to be fraudulent and void.4 If an intended husband has no knowledge of the particular property conveyed, and the negotiations for the marriage have no reference to that particular property, its conveyance is not fraudulent, unless it was actually intended as a fraud upon him,5 and so there must be an intent to defraud the individual who is afterwards married; for if a deed is made to defraud another individual who is not married, but a marriage afterwards takes place with a person, not in contemplation at the time, there is no fraud.6 If no notice of the conveyance is shown to have been given, it will be presumed that no notice was had; 7 and it is always a question of fact upon the whole transaction whether the conveyance is fraudulent.8 If, however, the property is of that character that the husband could obtain no right over it by the marriage, the conveyance of it by the wife before marriage cannot be set aside. In all ante-nuptial contracts there must be the utmost good faith between the parties, and a grossly disproportionate settlement may be evidence of a fraudulent concealment.²

§ 214. There are certain purposes for which neither express law nor public policy will allow parties to contract; thus, the law will not permit contracts for the procuring of marriages, or of public offices, or of legislation, or of illicit cohabitation. If, therefore, such contracts are entered into, equity will enjoin their performance. And the party creating the interest, although in pari delicto, may apply for an injunction. In such cases, the person applying must return any benefit that he may have received. Such contracts are equally void at law, and if the parties are in pari delicto, the law will leave them where it finds them. If one party has advanced money upon an immoral or illegal contract, the law will give him no aid to recover it back. But equity will sometimes fasten a trust upon the conscience of the party who has received money or property under such contracts, and compel him to repay or reconvey it, especially if the illegal purpose fails.²

§ 215. If at a sale of an estate of a debtor upon execution, any one announces, for the purpose of preventing competition, that he is bidding or purchasing for the debtor; or if, upon the sale of the property of a deceased person, a bidder announces that he is purchasing for the benefit of children or heirs, or if at a mortgagee's sale a person announces that he is purchasing for the mortgagor, and thus prevents competition, the purchaser will be held to be a trustee for the benefit of the parties interested in the property. So if any one professing to act for another purchases for himself, he will be held as a trustee. But in such cases there must be some proof of fraud and deceit practised by the purchaser;

the mere breach of a parol agreement will not create a constructive trust in such cases; ¹ and if the conduct of the purchaser is not fraudulent and produces no injury, a trust is not raised.² If the parties for whom the purchaser pretends to buy have no interest in the property, they cannot establish a trust.³

- § 216. Again, if a testator make a devise, or a grantor a conveyance, upon a secret trust in fraud of the law, or for a purpose forbidden by law, or contrary to public policy, those interested may bring a bill alleging the secret trust, and the fraud upon the law, and the persons to whom the devise or conveyance was made must answer, notwithstanding the statute of frauds. (a) If such fraudulent trust appear by the answer, or by any clear and explicit proof in opposition to the answer, a trust will be declared and enforced in favor of those interested in the estate, or in the event of the failure of the illegal trust. In all cases of actual fraud parol evidence is admissible, otherwise a fraud put in writing would always escape.

ing an equitable interest.1 The rule applies not only to express trusts, or those expressly declared by written instruments, but it applies to constructive trusts, or those trusts that arise from fraud. Thus, if a party procures a conveyance of property from another by fraud, he shall be held to be a constructive trustee; and if he sells such property to a third person who has full knowledge or notice of the fraud, such third person will be equally held as a trustee. 2 After a purchase is once made from a trustee with notice of the trust, the person taking the title cannot bar the interest of the cestui que trust by buying in other interests, or by levy. ing a fine or suffering a recovery, obtaining a judgment, or by procuring the assignment to himself of outstanding mortgages or terms.3 Having once taken with notice of the trust, he is a trustee in law, and a trustee cannot defeat the interests of his cestui que trust; on the contrary, all the interest that the trustee, or constructive trustee, shall thus buy in, will inure to the benefit of the title for the cestui que trust.4

§ 218. Of course, the opposite proposition is also true, that a purchaser for a valuable consideration without actual or constructive notice of the trust, holds the property discharged of the interest of the cestui que trust. It is thus stated on great authority: "A purchaser, bona fide without notice of any defect in his title at the time he made the purchase, may buy in a statute or mortgage, or any other incumbrance, and if he can defend himself at law by any such incumbrance bought in, his adversary shall never be aided in a court of equity for setting aside such incumbrance, for equity will not disarm a purchaser, but assist him; and precedents of this nature are very ancient and numerous; viz., where the court hath refused to give any assistance against a purchaser, either to an heir, or to a widow, or to the fatherless, or to creditors, or even to one purchaser against another." And it may be added that nothing is clearer than that a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice of a prior equitable right, obtaining the legal estate at the time of his purchase, is entitled to priority in equity as well as at law, according to the well-known maxim that where equities are equal the law shall prevail.\(^1\) But while a purchaser for value without notice may lay hold upon any plank to save himself, he cannot, after notice of the trust, take any conveyances from the trustee of outstanding legal interests; for that is a breach of the trust, and he cannot commit a breach of the trust to protect himself.¹ But a purchase of an equitable interest only, although for a valuable consideration and without notice, cannot prevail against a legal title. In law the legal title must always prevail, and in equity the legal title will prevail if the equities are equal.²

§ 219. This protection of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice is clear and certain, but it is hedged about with great care. It is said to be a shield to protect, and not a sword to attack. It is surrounded with restrictions, so that it may not become a cloak for fraud. The defendant in a suit in equity must clearly and unequivocally swear in his answer that he is a purchaser for value without notice, and he must set forth all the particulars of the purchase, and the title or pretended title of the person from whom he purchased. He must show an actual conveyance and not merely an agreement for a conveyance; and it must be shown that the consideration-money named in the deed was paid in good faith. It is not enough that the consideration was secured to be paid; nor is a recital of payment in the deed sufficient: there must be an actual payment.¹ Then he must also make an explicit denial of notice of the title which is attempted to be set up. A denial of knowledge of the particular person who might assert such title is not sufficient; ² notice must be positively and affirmatively denied, and not evasively or inferentially.³ If particular instances or circumstances of notice or of fraud are alleged, there must be clear, special, and particular denials of each and every circumstance.⁴ These stringent rules are necessary for the protection of the equitable interests of one person, where the legal title is in the hands of another.⁵

- § 220. These leading propositions are simple and plain enough, but difficulties frequently arise as to what is a valuable consideration, and whether a purchaser had notice of the equitable estate, and when and how he obtained it. It is well established that a conveyance, to be good against the equitable interest of a cestui que trust, must be for a valuable consideration, and that a conveyance for a good consideration, as for love and affection, is not sufficient. But if the consideration is valuable, it need not be adequate: mere inadequacy of consideration will not defeat a purchase for a valuable consideration without notice; but gross inadequacy of a valuable consideration would be evidence affecting the good faith of the transaction. Marriage is a valuable consideration for a conveyance; but if a conveyance after marriage is made in pursuance of an agreement before marriage, it must be made clearly to appear. The general definition of a valuable consideration embraces not only some valuable thing or property given or transferred to another, but also some loss of property or right, or the forbearing of some legal right or remedy.

- § 221. In order that one may claim protection as a bona fide purchaser, the money must have been actually paid and the conveyance taken before notice is received of the trust. If the money is secured, but not paid, notice of the trust will convert the purchaser into a trustee, and so if the money is paid, but the conveyance is not executed, the weight of authority is that notice of the trust will destroy the protection of the purchaser. It is held that the money must be wholly paid before notice.2 This rule proceeds upon the ground, that, as the purchaser is taking the transfer of a title that defeats the equitable right of a third person, he shall be held to take such title subject to all the equities that attach to it at the time it passes. If, therefore, he pays no money at the time the title passes, he has no equity to set up against the equity of a third person, and if he has notice before he pays the money, he pays in his own wrong. And so, if he has paid his money, but has not yet taken the title when he receives notice, he takes the title subject to all the equities that attach to it when the conveyance is actually made to him, as he then has a right to refuse the conveyance and to demand back his money.3 In Pennsylvania, however, it is established that part-payment of the purchase-money before notice will give the purchaser an equity pro tanto.4 So, if a purchaser without notice make improvements on the land, not having paid the purchase-money in full, he will have an equitable lien on the land for the amount of his expenditures, although he has no defence to a bill to enforce the rights of the cestui que trust.⁵ This is in analogy to the statutes that give a defendant in a real action a claim for improvements upon an estate, which he has made in ignorance of the title against him.

general rule is that notice to an agent is notice to his principal. The notice, if to an agent, must be to an agent for the purpose of the purchase, and the notice must be to him while engaged in the transaction, 2 for the reason that notice to agents generally, without reference to the particular business in hand, is not binding upon the principal.3 Notice to a husband is not notice to a wife, unless he is her agent, and is engaged upon the business when he receives the notice.4 Upon the same principle, knowledge by an executor before the death of his testator is not notice to him after his appointment as executor. It has been held in some cases. that the notice to the principal, to convert him into a trustee. must be given to him during the progress of the transaction, as he might have known the facts long before and forgotten them.6 If the first purchaser from the trustee take the property, bona fide for value and without notice, all purchasers from him will take the property discharged of the equitable claims, although they have notice of them at the time they purchase of the first purchaser, and such notice to them cannot convert them into trustees.1 But if the property comes back into the hands of the original trustee, or into the hands of any one affected with the guilt of the original sale, he will be a trustee for the defrauded party, although the property may have passed through several innocent hands. 2 (a)

Actual notice is a knowledge of the facts of the trust brought home to the purchaser, or a knowledge of such facts as should lead him to a knowledge of the actual facts of the case.3 Constructive notice is a legal presumption of notice unless controlled, and in most cases it is not susceptible of rebuttal, even by evidence that in fact there was no actual knowledge. 4 (b) Thus, by statutes of the

A purchaser at a sale under a power must ascertain at his peril the extent of the power several States the recording of a deed is made notice to all subsequent purchasers, though it frequently happens that purchasers have no actual knowledge from the record; but that does not rebut the fact of notice, for the reason that it is their duty to examine the records; they are therefore conclusively affected with notice of all of the record which is legally made, and which it was their duty to examine. Lis pendens is constructive notice; that is, a suit pending in the public courts, concerning the title of the property purchased, is constructive notice to the purchaser. is some claim, title, or possession of the property adverse to his vendor; and this fact should put him upon his inquiry, for if he had inquired he would have discovered the exact title and the equitable claims upon it; he therefore has constructive notice. There are many other facts and circumstances from which courts will presume that a purchaser had notice of the equities attached to an estate. If in any way a person purchases, with what the law construes to be full notice that another has a legal or equitable title to the property, or that he has been deprived of his interest by accident, mistake, or fraud, he will be held as a trustee. 2

§ 224. The same general principles affect the sales of property by executors or administrators. Executors can deal with real estate only as they are empowered to do so by the will of testators. Purchasers must therefore look to the will for the power of the executor. If they purchase in good faith from an executor with power to sell, they will take a good title; but if they make a fraudulent or collusive purchase from an executor with full power to sell, they still hold the estate upon the same trusts to which it was subject in the hands of the executor. If there are no powers to sell real estate given to executors in the will, they have no authority to deal with it, unless it is wanted to pay debts or legacies, in which case both executors and administrators must obtain an order or license from the court of probate to sell. In such case the purchaser must see that the order of the court was regularly obtained, and that it is properly complied with. Any fraud or collusion on the part of the executor or administrator, in procuring the decree of the court or in the conduct of the sale, would convert the purchaser into a trustee for heirs-at-law or other persons interested. So, if an executor or administrator purchases indirectly of himself through a third person, and takes a deed to himself through such third person, the sale will be void, or the estate will be held in trust by such administrator or executor for the heirs-at-law or other persons interested.

§ 225. An executor or administrator generally has full power over the personal estate under his charge. Therefore he may sell the same and give a good title to a purchaser.2 This is the rule at common law, and it prevails in all States where it is not changed by statute. In some States there are statutes that direct executors or administrators to sell the personal estate of the deceased at public auction, or in such manner as the court having jurisdiction over the administration shall order. In such States, purchasers must see to it that executors and administrators, in making sales, pursue the course marked out for them by the statutes or by the orders of the court, or they will take no title.3 In all sales by executors and administrators good faith is indispensable. If therefore a purchaser knows, or has notice, that a sale by an administrator is fraudulent or collusive, or is a devastavit, or is for the purpose of a misapplication of the assets, his title will not be allowed to prevail against the beneficial interests of creditors, specific or residuary legatees, or next of kin or heirs.4 Equity will examine the transaction; and if circumstances appear sufficient to put the purchaser on his guard or upon his inquiry, the sale will be avoided or the purchaser will be held as a trustee. If the transfer is by way of pledge or sale for the security or payment of the private debt of the administrator, it will be equivalent to full notice of the illegality of the transaction, and fraudulent.2 But if an administrator make a pledge of the assets for a contemporaneous advance of money for the use of the estate, it will be held to be a valid transaction; or if the sale or pledge or mortgage is afterwards made for a previous advance made in good faith for the alleged benefit of the estate, it will be valid.3 Of course knowledge on the part of the purchaser, that the executor or administrator is dealing with the assets in a fiduciary capacity, is not enough to raise any suspicion, for the reason that it is the duty of the administrator to dispose of the assets and settle the estate; and so a trustee may sell and transfer absolutely the personal property of his trust, if he have power to vary the securities; and if he sells and transfers notes, stocks, or other securities standing in his name as trustee, the purchaser, from that fact alone, cannot be holden as a constructive trustee, although the trustee in fact transfers such securities or order to obtain money for his own personal use. The mere fact that the word "trustee" is on the face of the securities cannot put a purchaser to any inquiry beyond ascertaining whether the trustee has power to vary the securities. (a) If he has such power, a purchaser in good faith will be protected, although the trustee use the money for his private purposes. Dut if a purchaser takes securities from a trustee, with the word "trustee" upon their face, in payment of a private debt due from the trustee, the sale may be avoided by the cestui que trust, or the purchaser may be held as a trustee.2 And so, if an executor, guardian, or trustee hold certificates of shares in a corporation, he may sell the same, and the corporation would be protected in issuing new certificates to the purchaser, but if the corpora-

§ 226. The statute of frauds is no obstacle in the way of proof of an actual or constructive fraud in the sale of property.² Parol evidence is admissible to establish a trust, even against a deed absolute on its face, if it would be a fraud to set up the form of the deed as conclusive.3 Lord Hardwicke stated "that the court adhered to this principle, that the statute of frauds should never be understood to protect fraud, and therefore wherever a case is infected with fraud, the court will not suffer the statute to protect it." 4 Lord Thurlow added, that "the moment you impeach a deed for fraud you must either deny the effect of fraud upon the deed, or you must admit parol evidence to prove it." 5 If this was not so, the law would be reduced to this absurdity, - if a fraud could once succeed in procuring the transaction to be reduced to writing and signed by the parties, it would be protected by the law itself, and there would be no possible means of reaching and correcting the wrong. But in such case the bill must contain a clear and distinct charge of fraud. Therefore, whenever the bill sets out a clear case tarily without solicitation or undue influence, a mere promise to hold in trust is within the statute. If a bill is brought

The latest case, Campbell v. Dearborn, 109 Mass. 130, contains a review of the authorities and a succinct statement of the doctrine; and as it is upon a subject closely connected with constructive trusts, the case is given at large.

"From those facts, and from the bill and answer, we think these points must be taken to be established; to wit, 1st, that the plaintiff had purchased the parcel of land in controversy, and held a contract from Tirrill for its conveyance to himself upon payment of the sum of $5500; 2d, that the money was advanced by the defendant to the plaintiff as a loan, and the deed from the plaintiff to the defendant was given by way of security therefor. The report finds, 'from all the circumstances surrounding the transaction, and from the acts and declarations of the parties at the time, that the plaintiff believed and had reason to believe' this to be the case.

"From the whole case we are satisfied that it was a transaction between borrower and lender, and not a real purchase of the land by the defendant. We are brought, then, to the question, Can equity relieve in such a case?

"The decisions in the courts of the United States, and the opinions declared by its judges, are uniform in favor of the existence of the power, and the propriety of its exercise by a court of chancery. Hughes v. Edwards, 9 Wheat. 489; Sprigg v. Bank of Mount Pleasant, 14 Pet. 201, 208; Morris v. Nixon, 1 How. 118; Russell v. Southard, 12 How. 139; Taylor v. Luther, 2 Sumner, 228; Flagg v. Mann, id. 486; Jenkins v. Eldredge, 3 Story, 181; Bentley v. Phelps, 2 Wood. & M. 426; Wyman v. Babcock, 2 Curtis C. C. 386, 398; s. c. 19 How. 289. Although not bound by the authority of the courts of the United States in a matter of this sort, still we deem it to be important that uniformity of interpretation and administration of both law and equity should prevail in the State and federal courts. We are disposed, therefore, to yield much deference to the decisions above referred to, and to follow them unless we can see that they are not supported by sound principles of jurisprudence, or that they conflict with rules of law already settled by the decisions of our own courts.

"We cannot concur in the doctrine advanced in some of the cases, that the subsequent attempt to retain the property, and refusal to permit it to be redeemed, constitute a fraud or breach of trust, which affords ground of jurisdiction and judicial interference. There can be no fraud or legal wrong in the breach of a trust from which the statute withholds the right of judicial recognition. Such conduct may sometimes appear to relate back, and give character to the original transaction, by showing, in that, an express intent to deceive and defraud. But ordinarily it will not be connected with the original transaction otherwise than constructively, or as involved in it as its legitimate consequence and natural fruit. In this aspect only can we regard it in the present case.

"The decisions in the federal courts go to the full extent of affording relief, even in the absence of proof of express deceit or fraudulent purpose at the time of taking the deed, and although the instrument of defeasance 'be omitted by design upon mutual confidence between the parties.' In Russell r. Southard, 12 How. 139, 148, it is declared to be the doctrine of the court, 'that, when it is alleged and proved that a loan on security was really intended, and the defendant sets up the loan as payment of purchase-money, and the conveyance as a sale, both fraud and a vice in the consideration are sufficiently averred and proved to require a court of equity to hold the transaction to be a mortgage.' The conclusion of the court was, 'that the transaction was in substance a loan of money upon security of the farm, and, being so, a court of equity is bound to look through the forms in which the contrivance of the lender has enveloped it, and declare the conveyance of the land to be a mortgage.'

"This doctrine is analogous, if not identical, with that which has so frequently been acted upon as to have become a general if not universal rule, in regard to conveyances of land where provision for reconveyance is made in the same or some contemporaneous instrument. In such cases, however carefully and explicitly the writings are made to set forth a sale with an agreement for repurchase, and to cut off and renounce all right of redemption or reconveyance otherwise, most courts have allowed parol evidence of the real nature of the transaction to be given, and, upon proof that the transaction was really and essentially upon the footing of a loan of money, or an advance for the accommodation of the grantor, have construed the instruments as constituting a mortgage; holding that any clause or stipulation therein, which purports to deprive the borrower of his equitable rights of redemption, is oppression, against the policy of the law, and to be set aside by the courts as void. 4 Kent, Com. 159: Cruise, Dig. (Greenl. ed.) tit. xv. c. 1, § 21; 2 Washb. Real Prop. (3d ed.) 42; Williams on Real Prop. 353; Story, Eq. § 1019; Adams, Eq. 112; 3 Lead. Cas. in Eq. (3d Am. ed.); White & Tudor's notes to Thornbrough v. Baker, pp. 605 [*874] et seq.; Hare & Wallace's notes to s. c. pp. 624 [*894] et seq.

"The rule has been frequently recognized in Massachusetts, where, until 1855, the courts have held their jurisdiction of foreclosure and redemption of mortgages to be limited to cases of a defeasance contained in the deed dent, surprise, or fraud, in such case, Lord Hardwicke said "that a mistake could never be proved but by parol evi-or some other instrument under seal. Erskine v. Townsend, 2 Mass. 493; Killeran v. Brown, 4 Mass. 443; Taylor v. Weld, 5 Mass. 109; Carey v. Rawson, 8 Mass. 159; Parks v. Hall, 2 Pick. 206, 211; Rice v. Rice, 4 Pick. 349; Flagg v. Mann, 14 Pick. 467, 478; Eaton v. Green, 22 Pick. 526. The case of Flagg v. Mann is explicit, not only upon the authority of the court thus to deal with the written instruments of the parties, but also upon the point of the competency of parol testimony to establish the facts by which to control their operation; although, upon consideration of the parol testimony in that case, the court came to the conclusion that there was a sale in fact and not a mere security for a loan.

"By the statute of 1855, c. 194, § 1, jurisdiction was given to this court in equity 'in all cases of fraud, and of conveyances or transfers of real estate in the nature of mortgages.' Gen. Sts. c. 113, § 2. The authority of the courts under this clause is ample. It is limited only by those considerations which guide courts of full chancery powers in the exercise of all those powers.

"If, then, the advantage taken of the borrower by the lender, in requiring of him an agreement that he will forego all right of redemption in case of non-payment at the stipulated time, or an absolute deed with a bond or certificate back, which falsely recites the character of the transaction, representing it to be a sale of the land with a privilege of repurchase, be a sufficient ground for interference in equity by restricting the operation of the deed, and converting the writings into a mortgage, contrary to the expressed agreement, it is difficult to see why the court may not and ought not to interpose to defeat the same wrong, when it attempts to reach its object by the simpler process of an absolute deed alone. In each case the relief is contrary to the terms of the written agreement. In one case it is against the express words of the instrument or clause relied on as a defeasance, on the ground that it was oppressive and wrongful to withhold or omit the formal defeasance. In strictness, there is no defeasance in either case. The wrong on the part of the lender or grantor, which gives the court its power over his deed, is the same in both. 'For they who take a conveyance as a mortgage without any defeasance are guilty of a fraud.' Cotterell v. Purchase, Cas. temp. Talbot, 61. See also Barnhart v. Greenshields, 9 Moore, P. C. 18; Baker v. Wind, 1 Ves. Sen. 160; Mahlor v. Lees, 2 Atk. 494; Williams v. Owen, 5 Myl. & Cr. 303; Lincoln v. Wright, 4 De Gex & Jones, 16.

"As a question of evidence, the principle is the same. In either case the parol evidence is admitted, not to vary, add to, or contradict the writings, but to establish the fact of an inherent fault in the transaction or its consideration, which affords ground for avoiding the effect of the writings by restricting their operation, or defeating them altogether.

dence, consequently it must be received." But where through mistake of law, or carelessness or inattention, an

This is a general principle of evidence, well established and recognized, both at law and in equity. Stackpole v. Arnold, 11 Mass. 27; Fletcher v. Willard, 14 Pick. 461; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 281; Perry on Trusts, § 226.

"The reasons for extending the doctrine, in equity, to absolute deeds, where there is no provision for reconveyance, are ably presented by Hare & Wallace in their notes to Woollam v. Hearne, 2 Lead. Cas. in Eq. (3d Am. ed.) 676, and to Thornbrough v. Baker, 3 id. 624. See also Adams Eq. 111; 1 Sugd. Vend. (8th Am. ed.), Perkins's notes, pp. 267, 268, 302, 303. The doctrine thus extended is declared, in numerous decisions, to prevail in New York; also in Vermont and several other States. Mr. Washburn, in his chapter on mortgages, § 1, has exhibited the law as held in the different States, in this particular; and the numerous references there made, as well as by the annotators in the other treatises which we have cited, render it superfluous to repeat them here. 2 Washb. Real Prop. (3d ed.) 35 et seq.

"Upon the whole, we are convinced that the doctrine may be adopted without violation of the statute of frauds, or of any principle of law or evidence; and, if properly guarded in administration, may prove a sound and salutary principle of equity jurisprudence. It is a power to be exercised with the utmost caution, and only when the grounds of interference are fully made out, so as to be clear from doubt.

"It is not enough that the relation of borrower and lender, or debtor and creditor, existed at the time the transaction was entered upon. Negotiations, begun with a view to a loan or security for a debt, may fairly terminate in a sale of the property originally proposed for security. And if, without fraud, oppression, or unfair advantage taken, a sale is the real result, and not a form adopted as a cover or pretext, it should be sustained by the court. It is to the determination of this question that the parol evidence is mainly directed.

"The chief inquiry is, in most cases, whether a debt was created by the transaction, or an existing debt, which formed or entered into the consideration, continued and kept alive afterwards. 'If the purchaser, instead important provision is omitted from a deed, and no fraud is charged or proved, parol evidence cannot be received against

of taking the risk of the subject of the contract on himself, takes a security for repayment of the principal, that will not vitiate the transaction, and render it a mortgage security.' 1 Sugd. Vend. (8th Am. ed.) 302, in support of which the citations by Mr. Perkins are numerous. But any recognition of the debt as still subsisting, if clearly established, is equally efficacious; as the receipt or demand of interest or part payment. Eaton v. Green, 22 Pick. 526, 530.

"Although proof of the existence and continuance of the debt, for which the conveyance was made, if not decisive of the character of the transaction as a mortgage, is most influential to that effect, yet the absence of such proof is far from being conclusive to the contrary. Rice v. Rice, 4 Pick. 349; Flagg v. Mann, 14 Pick. 467, 478; Russell v. Southard, 12 How. 139; Browne v. Dewey, 1 Sandf. Ch. 56. When it is considered that the inquiry itself is supposed to be made necessary by the adoption of forms and outward appearance differing from the reality, it is hardly reasonable that the absence of an actual debt, manifested by a written acknowledgment or an express promise to pay, should be regarded as of more significance than the absence of a formal defeasance. It of course compels the party attempting to impeach the deed, to make out his proofs by other and less decisive means. But as an affirmative proposition it cannot have much force.

"A mortgage may exist without any debt or other personal liability of the mortgagor. If there is a large margin between the debt or sum advanced and the value of the land conveyed, that of itself is an assurance of payment stronger than any promise or bond of a necessitous borrower or debtor. Hence inadequacy of price, in such case, becomes an important element in establishing the character of the transaction. Inadequacy of price, though not of itself alone sufficient ground to set in motion chancery powers of the court, may nevertheless properly be effective to quicken their exercise, where other sufficient ground exists: Story, Eq. §§ 239, 245, 246; and in connection with other evidence may afford strong ground of inference that the transaction purporting to be a sale was not fairly and in reality so. Kerr on Fraud and Mistake, 186 and note; Wharf v. Howell, 5 Binn. 499.

"Another circumstance that may and ought to have much weight is the continuance of the grantor in the use and occupation of the land as owner, after the apparent sale and conveyance. Cotterell v. Purchase, Cas. temp. Talbot, 61; Lincoln v. Wright, 4 De Gex & Jones, 16.

"These several considerations have more or less weight, according to the circumstances of each case. Conway v. Alexander, 7 Cranch, 218; Bentley v. Phelps, 2 Wood. & M. 426. It is not necessary that all should concur to the same result in any case. Each case must be determined the denial of the defendant in his answer to reform, vary, or defeat the instrument. Parol evidence, however, is not favorably received by courts in any case, and they will not act upon it against written instruments, unless it is exceedingly clear and certain, and uncontradicted by other evidence. In Pennsylvania, however, a different rule prevails, and parol evidence of the verbal agreements and stipulations upon the faith of which the contract was made, is received in evidence to control its operation or to explain its meaning. 3

§ 227. The right of a party who has been defrauded of the title to his land is not a mere right of action to set the deed aside, but it is an equitable estate in the land itself, which may be sold, assigned, conveyed, and devised.⁴ In the

upon its own special facts; but those should be of clear and decisive import." So, if it is necessary for an absolute grantee to come into a court of equity for relief, as for a loss of the deeds, the court can compel him to do equity, as to make a settlement upon parties entitled to a settlement by parol understanding. view of a court of equity, he is still the owner of the estate, subject to repay whatever money or other property he may have received from the fraudulent grantee. And so the equitable interest of a purchaser under a contract of sale is of that character that it may be assigned or devised.¹

§ 228. Time does not bar a direct trust where the relation of trustee and cestui que trust is admitted to exist, but diligence must be used to establish a constructive trust on the ground of fraud. A court of equity will refuse its aid to stale demands, where a party has slept upon his rights, or has acquiesced for a great length of time.² And so a constructive trust will be barred by long acquiescence, although the fraud was evident and the relief was originally clear.³

It is difficult to state as a general proposition what length of time will bar relief from the consequences of a fraud. It is necessarily subject to the equitable discretion of the court, and must depend upon the nature of each case and the circumstances of the parties.

§ 229. Therefore no certain time can be stated as a limit beyond which relief will not be given. In several cases twenty years has been held to be a bar; and so where one had acquiesced for twenty-five years, and twenty-one years, and in another case the lapse of eighteen years was held to be a bar. So a delay of thirty years, of thirty-eight years, of forty-six years, of fifty years, of twenty-seven years, and of seventeen years, has been held to be such laches, if unexplained, as would be a bar to a bill for relief. Under the circumstances of other cases, a delay of twelve years, of eleven years,² of eighteen years, was held to be no bar.³ In Michoud v. Girod the law was elaborately examined and stated by Mr. Justice Wayne as follows, "that within what time a constructive trust will be barred must depend upon the circumstances of the case. 4 There is no rule in equity which excludes the consideration of circumstances, and in a case of actual fraud, we believe no case can be found in the books in which a court of equity has refused to give relief within the lifetime of either of the parties upon whom the fraud is proved, or within thirty years after it has been discovered or becomes known to the party whose rights are affected by it."5 If there is no fraud chargeable on any party, but a simple mistake or accident is made by which a title is changed, more diligence is required, and acquiescence for a less time will bar the suffering party of his relief. Lapse of time is no bar to a trust clearly established; and in cases where fraud is imputed and proved, length of time ought not, upon principles of eternal justice, to be admitted to repel relief. On the contrary, it would seem that the length of time during which the fraud has been successful is rather an aggravation, and calls more loudly for decisive and ample relief. Per Story, J., in Prevost v. Gratz, 6 Wheat. 481. In this case forty years and the death of all the parties was held sufficient to warrant the presumption of the discharge and extinguishment of a trust, proved to have existed by strong circumstances.

Where there are two remedies, pursuing one first and waiting till it has run its course before making trial of the other is not laches.²

§ 230. The statute of limitations is not necessarily controlling, as to the time within which relief is to be sought, in the case of a constructive trust by reason of fraud. A demand may be stale, and not entitled to relief under the circumstances of the case, although much less than the time allowed by the statute of limitations has elapsed; and so a party may be entitled to relief although much more than the statute limit has gone by.3 In some States, however, the statute is applied to constructive trusts, unless they are concealed or undiscovered. In such States, relief must be sought within six years if it is sought by bill in equity to set aside a deed, or to establish a trust.4 In Pennsylvania, the limit is five years. 5 In other States, it has been decided in analogy to the statute which bars a real action after twenty years, that relief must be sought within the twenty years named in the statute. 6 In South Carolina, it is held that an action to set aside a deed as fraudulent is equivalent to an action for deceit, and must be brought within the limit of the statute for personal actions. But if the fraud is unknown to the injured party, or is concealed, or he is under disability, or out of the country, or the delay is caused by the defendant, the lapse of time will not be laches which bar relief. If a party has knowledge of the fraud, a want of evidence will not excuse his delay, 2 nor will poverty and an inability to prosecute the action. If there has been great delay, courts will require very clear evidence to impeach a transaction as fraudulent, and to convert the fraudulent party into a trustee. So, if a great length of time has elapsed, courts will sometimes grant the relief prayed for by setting aside the conveyance, but will decree an account for only six years, or from the time of filing the bill, and without costs.

- § 247. A person holding deeds or papers or property belonging to another may be a constructive trustee.

- § 231. It frequently happens that courts of equity construe a trust to arise from the contracts and dealings of parties, although a trust is not within their contemplation, and there is no fraud, actual or constructive. In this respect, courts of equity proceed in a manner and upon principles entirely unknown to courts of law. Thus, if the intention of the testator cannot be carried out without appointing a trustee, that will be done. So, if parties enter into a valid contract for the sale and conveyance of lands, and the vendor neglects or declines to convey, courts of law can only give the vendee an action for damages for a breach of the contract, but the legal title to the property will not be affected; it will still remain in the vendor. A court of equity, however, looks upon that as already done, which was agreed to be done.1 From the date of the contract it looks upon the beneficial interest as in the vendee, and the legal title only as in the vendor. By construction the vendor holds the legal title in trust for the vendee. 2 Equity proceeds, in personam, against the vendor and makes him a trustee, and then orders him to execute the trust by conveying the legal title to the person to whom he has agreed to convey it. The purchaser is in like manner a trustee of the purchase-money, and the court will order him to pay it over, and receive a conveyance of the legal title to the land. And, a fortiori, if the purchaser has paid the purchase-money the vendor becomes a mere trustee of the legal title for the purchaser; 4 so, if the purchaser has paid part of the purchase-money, the vendor becomes a trustee to the extent of the money paid.⁵ If the vendor does not own the land, or some part of that which he agrees to convey, and afterwards obtains the title, he will immediately become a trustee for the purchaser. 6 This equity will not be affected by the death or bankruptcy of either party. If the vendor dies before he has conveyed the land, the legal title will descend to his heirs subject to the trust; and they or his legal representatives will be ordered to execute the trust.¹ But the lien or trust will not exist where the purchaser by his own fault abandons the contract,² or where the contract is for any cause illegal.³ If the purchaser abandons the contract because the vendor cannot fulfil it as agreed upon, as if it is to give a good title, the trust or lien will not continue.⁴ Wherever one wrongfully obtains the legal title to land which in equity and good conscience belongs to another, equity will raise a constructive trust.⁵

- § 232. Similar to this is the constructive lien or trust in favor of a vendor for his unpaid purchase-money; for the vendor of land has a lien on the land for the amount of the purchase-money, not only against the vendee himself and his heirs and other privies in estate, but also against all subsequent purchasers having notice that the purchase-money remains unpaid. To the extent of the lien, the vendee becomes a trustee for the vendor; and the vendee's heirs, and all other persons claiming under him or them with notice, are construed by courts of equity to be trustees. This doctrine is well established in the jurisprudence of England, and it has been recognized, and acted upon, in many of the United States. The principle upon which the lien depends without paying for it. It will at once be seen, that, as between the parties, this lien is founded in natural justice. The civil law gave a lien on both real and personal property to the vendor for the purchase-money, and the principle was early introduced into English equity, as to real estate. Courts administer the equity by converting the purchaser into a trustee. They, in effect, say, that if one conveys his land and takes no security for the purchase-money, the purchaser shall be a trustee of the land for the vendor until it is paid.

§ 233. It has been objected that the creation of this lien or trust by courts of equity is a repeal of the statute of frauds. It is answered, that the raising of such a trust is no more in contravention of the statute than the creation of any other resulting or constructive trust by operation of law upon the acts and contracts of parties, where they do not contemplate or intend a trust.⁶ It is further objected, in the United States, that the raising of such trusts is contrary to the policy of the registry laws which require all deeds and liens to be matter of record. But, as between the parties, the raising of a trust to secure the purchase-money is no more against the policy of the registry laws than is the raising of a resulting trust to secure the actual purchaser, where the deed is taken in the name of another, or the raising of a constructive trust where one man has defrauded another of his title. In either case there is a secret trust that does not appear upon the records of the registry. So, as against third persons who take the land with notice that the purchase-money is unpaid, the policy of the registry laws applies in the same manner that it applies to other unrecorded deeds or liens. Thus, if a second purchaser or mortgagee has notice of a prior sale or mortgage for a valuable consideration, he cannot, by putting his deed or mortgage first on record, deprive the prior purchaser or mortgage of his title or security. It is, however, true that many courts have looked upon this trust with disfavor, although they have recognized its existence, and some States have formally abolished it by statute. (a) While other courts deem it highly equitable, and eminently consistent with the most perfect ideas of moral justice.

§ 234. In most cases the cestui que trust has an equitable estate in the land to which his trust attaches, an estate which he may sell, assign, or devise; but a vendor having only a lien for his purchase-money, has no estate in the land. It is neither jus in re nor jus ad rem. It is the mere possibility of a right, until it is established by a final decree of a court in each case. (b) It is not a direct trust in the land itself, but a collateral trust for the security of the debt. is in fact a remedy for a debt, and not a right of property. It follows, that the remedy can be enforced only so long as the debt can be enforced; that where an action for the purchase-money is gone, the right to enforce the lien, or the lien itself, is gone also. This lien or trust continues so long as the purchase-money remains unpaid, or so long as an action can be maintained for its collection. If the action is barred by the statute of limitations, the remedy to enforce the lien is gone also. In this respect the vendor's lien differs from a mortgage, which may be enforced against the land after all right to enforce the debt against the mortgagor is barred by the statute of limitations, or by his discharge in bankruptcy. If a cestui que trust conveys his equitable estate in land, he will have the same lien upon it for the purchase-money as in the case of a legal estate.2

of the deed, if in fact it is not paid. And if the consideration is not to be paid until after the death of the grantor, and then only upon a contingency, as if no claim for dower is made in the mean time, the lien will arise; but if the consideration of the sale is something other than money, as if the vendor makes the sale for the consideration of his future support, no lien will arise; nor if in consideration that his debts are paid; nor if the amount of the consideration is uncertain and unliquidated. Nor if it appears that the consideration is that the vendee shall enter into covenants to do certain things. If a note or bond is taken for the consideration, and includes anything other than the price of the land sold, the lien will not attach.

§ 236. Where a vendor takes security for the purchasemoney, it is often a difficult question to determine whether he has thereby abandoned or waived his lien. Much of the litigation upon vendor's liens has arisen over this question,—whether the lien was abandoned or not by the parties. Of course, it is a pure question of fact or intention. By the civil law, the taking of any kind of security was an abandonment of the lien upon the property; this rule has not prevailed in England. The rule in England is, that prima facie the vendor has a lien for the purchase-money: the presumption in favor of this lien continues until it is displaced by satisfactory evidence that the lien has been abandoned or extinguished. The burden is on the vendee to repel the presumption. The taking of security by the vendor is evidence upon that question, more or less satisfactory according to the nature of the security taken and the circumstances under which it is taken. 1 It has been held that the taking of a mortgage on another estate was not conclusive evidence that the lien was abandoned; 2 and so, bills or notes indorsed by third persons, or bonds with a surety, are not necessarily conclusive evidence that the vendor in taking them waives his lien.3 It may be, in such cases, that the vendor accepted them as evidences of the amount of the purchase-money and debt, or as security in addition to his lien. But if the security taken is totally distinct and independent, it will be very strong evidence that it was intended to be substituted in place of the lien; 4 and if it is in any way inconsistent with the continued existence of the lien, it will, of course, be conclusive evidence that the lien was abandoned or extinguished.⁵ Lord Eldon, after a careful review of the authorities, came to the conclusion that every case depended upon its own peculiar facts and circumstances; that different judges would have determined the same case differently; and that there was no general rule that was satisfactory; and he adds, "If I had found it laid down in distinct and inflexible

§ 237. In the United States, the rule that Lord Eldon said would be satisfactory substantially prevails. Thus, if the vendor does any act which manifests an intention to rely upon any security independent of the lien, he will be held to have waived it; as if he accept a mortgage on other property, or a bond or note with a third person as surety or indorser, or if he takes a pledge of stock as collateral, (a) he will be held to have waived his lien. lien for the remainder. But in these cases the presumption that the vendor intended to waive his lien by taking such

§ 238. It has been said before, that the lien for the purchase-money is not an estate in the land, nor is it a charge on the land; but it is an equity between the parties, their representatives or privies in law or estate, to be resorted to in case of failure of payment by the vendee. It is a possibility that may be perfected by proceedings in equity into an actual estate or interest in the land.2 (a) Having such a character, it is generally considered to be a personal privilege in the vendor, which descends to his heirs or representatives with the debt for the purchase-money, but which cannot be assigned to a third person, with or without the bond, note, bill, or check which the vendee gave for the consideration. 3 (b) If one of several purchasers pays the

In these cases the vendees are looked upon as volunteers, and, as such, they have the rights only of the debtor himself. Notice to the agent of the purchaser is notice to the purchaser, and if the vendor remain in possession it will be sufficient to put a purchaser upon his inquiry and is constructive notice, and any fact that would put a reasonable man upon his inquiry will affect the purchaser with notice. So, if a purchaser knows that a part of the purchaser-money is unpaid, he is put upon his inquiry; and such purchaser is bound to take notice of all the recitals in the deed to the vendee.

if no trustee is appointed, or the trustee named is incapable of taking, 2 or refuses to act, 3 or dies, 4 or the office becomes vacant in any other way; 5 in all such cases every person to whom the trust property comes, by reason of there being no trustee, will be treated as a trustee, and he may be ordered to account, and to convey the property to such other persons as trustees as the court may appoint.6 As where a man makes a devise in trust by his will, but names no trustee, the land descends to his heirs, but in trust for the purposes named in the will; and his heirs would be required to account for the property, and to convey the same to such trustees as the court might appoint.7 Courts of equity have inherent jurisdiction over all matters of trust and trustees, and they never allow a trust to fail for want of a trustee.8 So, if a party forbidden by law to convey his property to some person standing in a certain relation to him, as if a husband who cannot convey to his wife should make an absolute conveyance directly to her, the conveyance would not pass the legal title, but equity would construe it into a declaration of trust, and the husband into a trustee for the wife.9 Therefore if, upon the death of the trustee without heirs, the legal title should escheat to the Crown or the State, equity would follow the property and execute the trust by the appointment of new trustees or otherwise. 1

§ 241. Another instance of a constructive trust without fraud is where a person receives the trust property from the trustee without notice of the trust, by way of voluntary gift or without paying a valuable consideration. If such person had notice of the trust, it would be a fraud to receive the trust fund even if he paid a valuable consideration, and he would be held as a constructive trustee; 2 but if he paid a valuable consideration without notice, he would hold the property unaffected by the trust.3 And if he receives the property without paying a valuable consideration, and without notice, equity holds the absence of a consideration as equivalent to notice, and construes the taker into a trustee, and liable as such to the same extent as the trustee from whom he took it.4 But if a person comes into possession of the trust property, not by, under, or through the trustee, but against him, as by disseizing or ousting him, he will not be bound by the trust, although he have notice of it; for the disseizor creates a title for himself paramount to the title of the trustee, 5 and all outstanding terms attending the inheritance will attend the title of the disseizor until he is dispossessed by some other paramount title.6 In States where registry laws are in force, the registry of a deed from a grantor who had no right to the land is not constructive notice to the true owner that such deed has been made, and it is constructive notice only to subsequent purchasers under the same grantor.7

§ 242. Analogous to the gift or sale of the trust property by trustees is the right of dealing with its property by a corporation. A corporation holds its property in trust, first, to pay its creditors, and, second, to distribute to its stockholders pro rata. (a) If therefore a corporation should dissolve, and divide its property among its shareholders without first paying its debts, equity would enforce the claims of its creditors by converting all persons, except bona fide purchasers for value, to whom its property had come, into trustees, and

(a) A corporation is so far a trustee for its stockholders that a minority thereof may have relief in equity when the acts of the corporation, through the majority of its stockholders, is fraudulent or oppressive towards them. A corporation is sometimes said to hold its property as a trust fund for its creditors; but this applies no more strongly than in the case of an ordinary debtor, and only when the corporation is insolvent. would compel them to account for the property and contribute to the payment of the debts of the corporation to the extent of its property in their hands. In England, the doctrine of constructive trusts is not enforced against the Bank of England in regard to its stock standing upon its books; the bank is bound to recognize only the person who has the legal title.2 But Chief Justice Taney said that the decisions as to the Bank of England were exceptions depending upon the policy of the acts of parliament in reference to the bank, and that certainly none of the English cases convey the idea that, upon general principles of law, a bank is not bound to notice a trust of its own stocks, and must look only at the legal estate.3 In the United States it is well established, that if a corporation that requires a transfer of its stock to be made by its own officers upon its own books permits a transfer to be made, by an executor, trustee, or guardian, of stock held by such persons in a fiduciary capacity, such corporation, knowing the trust, and that the transfer is made for purposes other than such trust, will be held in equity as a constructive trustee of the stock thus wrongfully conveved, and will be liable to make it good to the cestui que trust.4 (a) And if a corporation negligently enter the names of the parties upon its books, in such manner that the stock is improperly transferred, it will be liable as a constructive trustee. 1 Accordingly a corporation has a right to require from all fiduciary holders of stock evidence of their authority to make the transfer.2 It has been held that the mere addition of the word "trustee," without any reference to the terms of the trust or the persons of the cestuis que trust, is not sufficient notice to a bank to render it liable in case the stock is wrongfully transferred by the holder; 3 and it is said that, as a guardian has a right to sell the personal property of his ward, a corporation is not liable if he wrongfully transfers the stock on its books.4 If purchasers of stock in a corporation have notice that their vendors are trustees, they will be held as constructive trustees; and if the certificates are passed over to the purchaser with the word "trustee" added to the name of the seller, the purchaser is bound to inquire into the particulars of the trust, and he has such notice as will bind him as a trustee if the sale was wrongfully made. 5 But if the purchaser does not see the certificates of the stock in the seller's hands, as if the seller himself transfers the stock upon the books of the company, and brings to the purchaser new certificates that he is entitled to so many shares, the purchaser would not be affected with notice, and would not be held as a trustee.6

§ 243. Again, if one receives a conveyance of lands or other property absolute in form, but really as security for a debt, he will hold the legal title in trust for the grantor after the payment of the debt, and before a reconveyance. So, if one receives personal property, agreeing to hold it for another, or to sell it and pay the proceeds to the holder of a note, draft, or other debt, he becomes a trustee, and a bill in equity may be maintained against him and his pledges to enforce the trust.2 But if such conveyance is fraudulent and void, the bona fide holder of the note or draft cannot enforce the trust.3 In England, upon the death of the mortgagee the mortgage debt goes to his personal representatives, but the fee in the mortgaged real estate descends to his heirs, if not otherwise disposed of; but his heirs hold it upon a constructive trust, as security for the debt, which has gone to his executors or administrators. 4 (a) In nearly all the United States, both the debt and the mortgage security are chattel interests, and go to the executors or administrators, and not to the heirs, 5 and payment of the mortgage debt discharges the mortgage; but while the mortgagee is in possession, he is a constructive trustee up to the time that the mortgagor's equity of redemption expires, and he is bound to account for the rents and profits in due course of administration.\(^1\) It has even been thought that he is liable for the rents and profits after he has transferred his mortgage;\(^2\) but, as he has a right to assign his mortgage without notice to the mortgagor, it would seem that he would not be liable for anything after he had assigned his mortgage and the possession.\(^3\) If a mortgagee assigns the mortgage debt but not the mortgage, he holds the title to the mortgaged premises in trust for the owner of the debt.\(^4\) So one who takes a mortgagee's title holds it in trust for the owner of the debt which the mortgage was intended to secure.\(^5\)

§ 244. At common law, if a testator appointed his debtor to be the executor of his will, the debt was extinguished, on the ground that, as the executor could not maintain an action against himself, the remedy was gone, and where the remedy is gone, the debt is gone. Equity, however, construes the debtor, although he is executor, to be a trustee, and the creditors, legatees, and next of kin of the testator can enforce the trust by compelling the executor to account for the amount of the debt due from him to the testator. In most of the United States this matter is regulated by statute, and the executor may be required by the probate court to put the amount of his debt to the testator into his inventory, or the court of probate may require the executor to charge himself with the amount of his debt in his account.\footnote{1} And so legatees and distributees may become constructive trustees for creditors of the estate, if the executor or administrator, by accident or mistake, pays over or distributes the estate before all debts are paid. The executor may be sued at law in such case by the creditor, and he may recover over against the persons to whom he has paid the estate. In equity, however, creditors can follow the fund liable for their debts into the hands of the persons to whom it has come, and treat them as constructive trustees, as they are not entitled to anything out of the estate till the debts are first satisfied.\footnote{2}

Tennant, 43 W. Va. 547. Thus, a wife who procures to herself the absolute legal title to her husband's property, which he intended to devise to his own heirs, but transferred to her on her promise to use it during her life and devise the part remaining to his heirs, will be charged with a trust in invitum in the property on a bill in equity by his heirs. Gilpatrick v. Glidden, 81 Maine, 137; Thompson v. Thompson, 107 Ala. 163. This form of trust properly depends only upon actual deceit. Davis v. Stambaugh, 163 Ill. 557. Such a trust does not arise from a mere refusal to perform

Thus an administrator has no right to interfere with the real estate of an intestate unless it is wanted to pay debts: and if he assume to act in relation to the real estate as a trustee, those interested may treat him as such, and he cannot demur to a bill charging him with neglect of duty, and praying for his removal. If one enters upon an infant's lands, and takes the rents and profits, he may be charged as a guardian or trustee, 2 (a) and so if one takes personal property.³ If a deceased person holds money or other property in trust for another, and his heir, executor, administrator, or other person assume possession of such property, a constructive trust will be imposed upon them.4 During the possession and management by such constructive trustees they are subject to the same rules and remedies as other trustees; 5 and they cannot avoid their liability by showing that they were not in fact trustees, 6 nor can they set up the statute of limitations.7 Of course, such unauthorized persons will always be liable to be deprived of the possession at the suit of those beneficially interested, and they will be liable for all the costs, expenses, and damages which their unauthorized intermeddling may have occasioned. Still there may be cases where an unauthorized person may interfere from necessity to preserve and protect the property.

such cases courts of equity have power to do exact justice by decrees as to costs, compensation, and other similar matters. In all cases a person beneficially interested coming into equity must do equity, and join all who have interfered with the possession; and he cannot proceed against one alone as at law for a trespass, and compel one to bear the whole burden of the wrongful intrusion.1

§ 246 a. If a vendor undertakes to sell a good title to land for a valuable consideration, and his title is defective, but he afterwards obtains a perfect title, equity will compel him to hold it in trust for his vendee. If, however, such vendor had conveyed the land with full covenants of warranty, the title which he afterwards obtains will enure for the benefit of his grantee, and the vendor will be estopped by his covenants from setting up his after-acquired title against his vendee. 2 And if a purchaser of land with notice of a prior mortgage afterwards sells the same to an innocent purchaser for its full value, equity will compel him to hold the proceeds in trust for the mortgagee.³ So, if one procures and puts on record a deed of land with notice of a prior deed and in fraud of a prior purchaser, equity will compel him to hold the legal title in trust for the first grantee. 4 So, if a person sells stock, and it is conveyed in such a manner that the conveyance is void and the legal title is still in the vendor, he will hold it in trust for the actual vendee, and he may be compelled to take the title and assume the burdens.⁵

CHAPTER VIII.

TRUSTS THAT ARISE BY CONSTRUCTION FROM POWERS.

§ 248. The nature of powers that imply a trust.

§ 249. Court will execute such powers as trusts.

§§ 250, 251. Instances of powers which the court will execute as trusts.

§ 252. Instances of powers that are not trusts.

§ 253. Where the power is too uncertain.

§ 254. The power must be executed as given, or it will remain a trust to be executed by the court.

§§ 255, 256. In what manner the court will execute a trust arising out of a power.

§ 257. Whether courts will distribute per stirpes or per capita.

§ 258. And whether to those living at the death of donor or of the donee.

§ 248. Property is sometimes given to a person with a power to dispose of it for a particular purpose, or to a particular class of persons, or to certain persons to be selected or designated by the donee from a particular class. If the donee executes the power and disposes of the property, or designates or selects the persons who are to take under the gift, it goes as directed, and there is no great room for doubt or question; but if the donce refuses or neglects to execute the power, it becomes a grave inquiry whether the persons in whose favor the power might have been executed have any interest in the property, or any remedy for the non-exercise of the power by the first taker or donee. In dealing with the cases that have arisen upon these inquiries, courts have distributed powers into mere powers, and powers coupled with a trust, or powers which imply a trust. 1 Mere powers are purely discretionary with the donee: he may or may not exercise or execute them at his sole will and pleasure, and no court can compel or control his discretion, or exercise it in his stead and place, if for any reason he leaves the powers unexecuted.¹ (a) If the donee executes the powers, but executes them in a defective manner, courts may aid the execution and supply the defects, but they cannot exercise or execute mere naked powers conferred upon a donee.² (b) It is different with powers coupled with a trust, or powers which imply a trust. In this class of cases the power is so given that it is considered a trust for the benefit of other

And even if a party intended to execute a power, but is prevented by sudden death, the court will not execute the power. Pigott v. Penrice, Com. 250; Gilb. Eq. 138; Sugd. on Powers, 392.
- (a) A trust which is a personal confidence does not, on the trustee's death, pass to his administrator, but must be executed by a trustee specially appointed for the purpose. Hayes v. Pratt, 147 U. S. 557; Kean v. Kean (Ky.), 19 S. W. 184; Thompson v. Ballard, 70 Md. 10. Discretionary powers given in discharge of a trust are personal and terminate upon the donee's death. Security Co. v. Snow, 70 Conn. 288; Gambell v. Trippe, 75 Md. 252; Sites v. Eldredge, 45 N. J. Eq. 632. But a power to sell and convey a fee to any one is a general power, and not a personal trust, and such power may be executed by a successor or by an administrator. Hinson v. Williamson, 74 Ala. 180; Watson v. Martin, 75 Ala. 506; Syracuse S. Bank v. Porter, 36 Hun, 168; Clay v. Selah V. Ir. Co., 14 Wash. 543.

Equity may limit even discretionary powers to a reasonable, honest, and just exercise thereof, such having been probably intended. Read v. Patterson, 44 N. J. Eq. 211; Re Stanger, 64 L. T. 693; May v. May, 167 U. S. 310; Jones v. Jones, 30 N. Y. S. 177; Clark v. Clark, 50 id. 1041. When an absolute discretion is not clearly given, to be exercised at the will of the person empowered to make a sale or appropriation of principal, an exercise of a power, to be valid, must be founded upon a reasonable judgment as to existing facts and reasonable anticipations of the future, having due regard to the purposes for which the power was given, and to the rights of those whose interests are injuriously affected by its exercise. Lovett v. Farnham, 169 Mass. 1. One who is to execute a power of sale by which the interests of others will be affected, must exercise not only good faith, but reasonable care and diligence, and, if others are injured by the negligent exercise of the power, they may appeal to equity for redress. parties; and when the form of the gift is such that it can be construed to be a trust, the power becomes imperative, and must be executed. Courts will not allow a clear trust to fail for want of a trustee; nor will they allow a trust to fail by reason of any act or omission of the trustee; therefore, courts will not allow a trust to fail, or to be defeated by the refusal or neglect of the trustee to execute a power, if such power is so given that it is reasonably certain that the donor intended that it should be exercised. There are mere powers and mere trusts. There are also powers which the party to whom they are given is intrusted with and required to execute. Courts consider this last kind of power to partake so much of the character of a trust to be executed, that they will not allow it to fail by the failure of the donee to execute it, but will execute it in the place of the donee. 1(a) Lord

In this case Lord Eldon said, if the power be one which it is the duty of the party to execute, made his duty by the requisition of the will, put upon him as such by the testator, who has given him an interest extensive enough to enable him to discharge it, he is a trustee for the exercise of the power, and not as having a discretion whether he will exercise it or not; and the court adopts this principle as to trusts, and will not permit his negligence, accident, or other circumstances to disappoint the interest of those for whose benefit he is called upon to execute it. In Att. Gen. v. Downing, Wilm. 23, Ld. Ch. J. Wilmot said, as to the objection that those powers are personal to the trustees, and by their death become unexecutable, they are not powers but trusts, and there is a very essential difference between them. Powers are never imperative: they leave the acts to be done at the will of the party to whom they are given. Trusts are always imperative, and are obligatory upon the conscience of the party intrusted. The court supplies the defective execution of powers, but never the non-execution of them; for they are not meant to be optional. But a person who creates a trust means it shall be executed at all events. The individuals named as trustees are only the nominal instruments to execute that intention, and if they fail, either by death, or by being under disability, or by refusing to act, the constitution has provided a trustee. Where no trustees are appointed at all, the court There is some personality in every choice of trustees, assumes the office. but this personality is res unius cetatis, and if the trust cannot be executed through the medium which was in the primary view of the testator, it must be executed through the medium which the constitution has substituted in his place. - § 249. In all cases where parties have an imperative power or discretion given to them, and they die in the testator's lifetime, 2 or decline the trust or office, 3 or disagree as to the execution of it,4 or do not execute it before their death,5 or if from any other circumstance 6 the exercise of the power by the party intrusted with it becomes impossible, the court will imply a trust, and will put itself in the place of the trustee, and will exercise the power by the most equitable rule. And the court will act retrospectively in executing these powers as quasi trusts;7 and although there may be great difficulties and impracticabilities in the way, yet the court will exercise the power and enforce the trust:8 for, if the trust or power can by any possibility be exercised by the court, the non-execution by the party intrusted shall not prejudice the party beneficially interested, or the cestui que trust.9 Thus a power to sell given to tenant for life as cestui que trust may be executed after his death by trustees under a decree of a court of equity. 10

§ 250. In some cases the donor makes a direct gift to one party, but subjects the gift to the discretion or power of some previous taker or other party; as if a donor limit a fund "upon trust for the children of A. as B. shall appoint." In such case the children of A. take a vested interest in the subject of the gift, liable to be divested by the exercise of the power by B. Therefore, on the failure of the power, the children of A. become as absolutely entitled as if the discretion or power had never been given to B.1 But while the exercise of the power is possible, the donce of it may exercise his discretion in favor of any that he may select; he may select those who are living at the donor's death, or those living at his own death.² In other cases an estate is vested in a donee "upon trust to dispose of it among the children of A." Here the children of A. take nothing directly by way of the gift, but their interest must come to them through the medium of the power.3 If the trust is to dispose of it equally among the children of A., the bequest, though in form a power, is equivalent to a simple gift.4 If the donce may distribute or dispose of it unequally among the children of A., and no distribution or disposition is made by him, the court will execute the power and distribute the fund equally among the objects of it. 5 In other cases the property is vested in a donee with a discretion as to the objects to which, and also as to the proportions in which, it is to be given over. Of course the first question to be determined in all such cases is, Did the donor intend to give a mere power, or did he create a trust, or will the court imply a trust? Lord Cottenham stated the general rule deduced from the cases as follows: "When there appears a general intention in favor of a class, and a particular intention in favor of individuals of a class to be selected by another person, and the particular intention fails from that selection not being made, the court will carry into effect the general intention in favor of the class. When such an intention appears, the case arises, as stated by Lord Eldon in Brown v. Higgs, of the power being so given as to make it the duty of the donee to execute it; and, in such case, the court will not permit the objects of the power to suffer by the negligence or conduct of the donee, but fastens upon the property a trust for their benefit."²(a)

§ 251. Thus, where a testator gave an estate "to A. upon trust (subject to certain charges), to employ the remainder of the rent for such children of B. as A. should think most deserving, and that will make the best use of it, or for the children of his nephew, C., if any there are, or shall be," and A. died in the testator's lifetime, it was held to be a trust in favor of all the children of B. and C.³ So where a testator directed certain property to remain until certain contingencies, and then gave life-estates in the property to two of his children, with remainder to their issue, and declared that in case his two children had no issue, the same should be disposed of by the survivor by will among his nephews and nieces or their children, or either of them, or to as many of them as his surviving child should think proper, it was held to be a trust in favor of the nephews and nieces and their children, subject to the power of selection and distribution by the surviving child. So where a testator gave to B. in tail, and if she had no issue, she was to settle the estate upon such person as she thought fit by will, "confiding" in her not to transfer the estate from his nearest family, it was held to be a trust for the heir who was the nearest family or relation within the meaning of the will.2 And where a testator gave his property to his son in trust to apply the income to the use of himself and family, and to give by deed or will all beyond what he should so apply, unto all or any child or children of his own in such proportions and in such manner as he should see fit, and his son died having devised the property to his wife with directions to his executors to act under the will of his father, it was held to be a trust coupled with a power to appoint at his discretion among his children, that the power could not be delegated, that the son's will was not an execution of the power, and that his children took equally under their grandfather's will.³ Where a man gave his property "wholly" to his wife to be disposed of by her and divided among his children at her discretion, the children took under the will and not as her heirs, in default of any distribution by her. 4 And where a testator gave his estate to his wife during her life, and gave all the remainder to his two brothers A. and B. who were also his executors, "with full confidence that they will dispose of such residue among our brothers and sisters and their children, as they shall judge shall be most in need of the same, this to be done according to the best of their discretion;" it was held to be a trust for the brothers and sisters and their children, to the exclusion of A. and B. and their children; and the court executed the trust, and exercised the powers. Where a testator gave his wife certain property, and desired her "to give the same unto and among such of the testator's relations as she should think most deserving and approve of," after the death of the wife without appointing, the court decreed a trust, and divided the property equally among the relations.2 Where a tenant for life "is desired to give it among his children as he should think fit," 3 or the "residue is to be disposed of among her children as she shall think proper,"4 or where after the death of testator's wife the gift "is to such of his grandchildren as she should appoint," 5 it was held to be a trust for selection or distribution, and in default of the exercise of the power the court enforced it as a trust and distributed it equally among all the objects named. 6 In such cases the word "children" will embrace grandchildren if such appears to be the general intent of the donor. This distinction, however, is not now acted upon. Crossling r. Crossling, 2 Cox, 396, is to the same effect as Marlborough r. Godolphin. These cases have not been expressly overruled, but they have not been followed in the later cases, and if they were to come before the courts at the present day, it is probable that they would be held to be implied trusts, and not mere powers, as courts will, if possible, construe such be-

The cited case of Marlborough v. Godolphin appears to be now overruled. Of it Lord St. Leonards (on Powers, p. 592) says: "As the right to exclude some does not prevent the class from taking in default of appointment, it should seem that if a case in the very terms of Duke of Marlborough v. Godolphin were now to occur, it would be decided that the children took as tenants in common in default of appointments, either by implication, which seems the true construction, or because the power was coupled with a trust." This is approved in Salusbury v. Denton, supra, in note, and in Wilson v. Duguid, 24 Ch. D. 244, the latter case fully reviewing the older authorities. § 253. If the power to be executed is so uncertain as to its objects, that a court of equity cannot say what particular person or persons or class of persons are to take an interest under it as a trust, it will be considered a mere power which cannot be carried into effect; ¹(a) or if the subject-matter to be affected by the power is too uncertain to be dealt with by the court, a trust will not be implied. ² And where there is an express limitation of the property over in case the power is not executed, of course no trust can be implied. ³

The general words of appointment ought not to be held to be an exercise of the power of revocation. § 254. The general rule is, that the power given must be strictly executed as given, or it will remain as a trust for the person or class in whose favor it is given; thus, if the donce is to dispose of the property to such persons of a particular class as she shall select in a last will and testament, and the disposition is made by a deed, the power is not executed, and it will be construed into a trust for the whole class, or will go over, if there is a gift over in default of an appointment or execution of the power. 1 (a) So if the power is attempted to be executed in favor of a person or a class, outside of the persons or classes in whose favor it is given, the execution will be bad, and it will remain as a trust for all those in whose favor it was given.2 As if the power is to distribute among children, it cannot be executed by a distribution among grandchildren.3 Where the power is to distribute among a certain class, something must be given to each one or the execution of the power is bad. 4(b) But the person could, it "can look with the eyes of the trustee," and can substitute its own judgment for that of the individual. Lord Hardwicke said in a case before him, "Here a rule is laid down; the trustees are to judge of the occasions and necessities of the family; the court can judge of such necessity; that is a judgment to be made from existing facts, so that the court can make the judgment as well as the trustee, and, when informed by evidence of the necessity, can judge what is equitable and just on this necessity;" and his Lordship referred the case to a master to report the facts, and decreed a distribution according to the necessities found.1 This doctrine has been acted upon in similar cases.² In others, the courts have said that it was "impossible to distinguish between degrees of poverty," and that they would not attempt to apply the discretion given to the donee of the power, but would divide the fund equally.3 This conflict of authority leaves the question open for further discussion. It would seem that there is no impossibility in the nature of things "in distinguishing between degrees of poverty," or in deciding what class of persons or relations come within the description, and should take under the gift of the donor. Lord Hardwicke's observations are just, and can be acted upon by courts. It is not so much a question whether courts of equity can exercise the discretion given to the trustee, as whether it is consistent with the dignity of courts to inquire into the relative necessities of a testator's relations, or whether they have the time to enter into such inquiries. So far as the dignity of courts is concerned, they may well remember that they are created to administer justice and equity to the people, and that no inquiries or decrees that can be successfully made are inconsistent with their position or duties. 4

⁴ Upon the general subject of bequests to poor or necessitous relations,

§ 256. If the donce of the power or trustee is to select from the donor's relations those to whom he is to give the property, in the execution of the power he may select from the whole circle of relations, whether near or distant; 1 and he may exclude some; 2 but if the power is to distribute to the donor's relations, then the donee must confine himself to the relations that are so near that they would take under the statute of distributions.3 Courts have adopted the rule of the statute of distributions as a convenient rule in such cases, to prevent such gifts from being void for uncertainty. If the power devolves upon the court as a trust, whether it is one of selection or distribution, the court will act upon the rule of the statute of distributions,4 unless the donor has himself established some rule of selection or distribution which the court can act upon.⁵ And the same rule applies if the donor uses the word "family." 6 A gift to nearest relations or next of kin must be administered in the same way. 7 But it is said that a power of selection will be implied in the donee in the case of relations, where it would not have been implied in the case of children. (a) A power to an unmarried woman to appoint to her family or next of kin may extend to any relative, and such power may be executed after coverture.

§ 257. Intimately connected with this subject is the inquiry whether courts will execute the power of distribution among the persons intended, by distributing per capita or per stirpes. Upon this matter it is to be observed that courts have adopted the statute of distributions as a convenient rule to point out the relations intended by a donor, when he uses that word in a gift. The only reason for adopting the rule was to prevent the gift from failing for uncertainty. The rule is used to point out the persons intended to take, but the terms of the gift are used to point out the proportions. If, therefore, there is no rule in the gift which can apply to determine the proportions, the court will make the distribution per capita, and everybody within the rule will take equally as tenants in common.4 But if the gift is to the next of kin of the donor, it will be confined to the nearest relations; and those who would take by representation under the statute of distributions will be excluded if there are relations a degree nearer. 5(b) If the gift is to "my surviving nephews and nieces" after paying certain legacies and the termination of certain life estates, the representatives of a nephew who survived the testator, but died before the time for distribution, have no share. If the fund is left for the "maintenance and education" of two children named, each will share equally without regard to their differing needs. If the subject-matter of the gift is incapable of division, and is to be bestowed upon some one of a class to be selected by the donee, and no selection is made, the court will notwithstanding execute the power as a trust, if by any possibility it can be done.

§ 258. Another difficult question which courts must decide when they are called upon to execute these powers or trusts, is, whether the fund shall be distributed to the parties in interest living at the donor's death, or to those living at the donee's death. Upon this matter it has been determined that when it appears that the donee is to have his whole life to make the selection or distribution, or if the donee is to have the use of the fund for his life, then the court will distribute it to the parties entitled living at the death of the donee.⁴ But if the donee is to make the distribution immediately, or as soon as may be, the court, on his death, without executing the power, will distribute the fund among those entitled at the death of the donor; 5 and the same rule will be followed if the donee die before the donor. 6 These rules, however, are applicable only when the final beneficiaries take through the medium of the power; for if they take directly by the form of the gift subject to be defeated by the execution of the power, they have a vested interest at the leath of the donor, and of course those living at that time will take, if the power is not executed to defeat them. Where the donce may execute the power by deed or will at any time during his life, and he dies leaving the power unexecuted, there is a conflict of the authorities upon the question to whom should the court give the funds: Mr. Lewin says that there is an equal conflict of principle.²

² Doyley v. Att. Gen., 2 Eq. Cas. Ab. 195; Harding v. Glyn, 1 Atk. 469; Pope v. Whitcombe, 3 Mer. 689, are authorities that those living at the death of the donee should take. On the other hand, the cases of Hands v. Hands, 1 T. R. 437, note; Grieveson v. Kirsopp, 2 Keen, 653, are authorities that those living at the death of the donor should take. Mr. Lewin says, p. 600 (5th ed. Lond.): "Upon principle, too, as well as upon authority, this question is attended with difficulty. On the one hand, the power may be properly exercised by the donee at any time before his death, and there is no obligation to exercise it earlier, and if any members of the class die before the power is exercised, they, according to the ordinary rule, cease to be objects of it. The donee of the power has an undoubted right to postpone the execution of it until the last moment of his life, and the only default which the court has to supply, is the nonexercise just before his death; and that default must, therefore, be supplied in favor of those who were objects at the date of the death of the donce. On the other hand, the donee of the power may exercise it in favor of the class existing at the time of exercise, to the exclusion of those who have died before, and also, where the power is one of selection, to the exclusion of those who may come into esse subsequently, but the court cannot act arbitrarily, and cannot show any favor, but must observe equality towards all. Who, then, are the objects of the power? As it was not the duty of the donee of the power to exercise it at one time more than another, the only objects of the power must be all those who might by possibility have taken a benefit under it; that is, those living at the death of the testator, and those who come into being during the continuance of the life-estate; otherwise, should all the class predecease the tenant for life (an event not improbable where children or some limited class of relations are the objects), there would be a power imperative which is construed a trust, and no cestui que trust, - a result which, it is conceived, the court would be somewhat unwilling to adopt.

§ 259. When a trust is created by implication, result, or construction of law from acts of parties, they will be held by the law to the performance of the trust whether they are willing or unwilling to accept the situation; that is, when a trust is raised by law and thrust upon the conscience of a party, as the result or construction to be put upon his acts, in order to do complete justice, the acceptance or refusal of the party to be charged with the trust cannot alter his legal or equitable liability to act as a trustee, and to do all that is required of him to execute the trust. Subject to this qualification, no one is compellable to undertake a trust. 1 If a conveyance is made by a private individual or corporation to public officers and their successors in office, the successors are not bound, unless they accept the trust.2 In voluntary or express trusts, no title vests in the proposed trustee, by whatever instrument it is attempted to be transferred, unless he expressly or by implication accepts the office, or in some way assumes its duties and liabilities. And though a person may have promised or agreed beforehand to accept a trust, and his name is introduced into the will, conveyance, or settlement, yet he may decline to act, and it is proper for him to do so if he finds that his duties are different from what he conceived them to be when he entered into the agreement; or if for any reason he cannot attend to the proper discharge of the office. 1 Such refusal does not invalidate the deed or will: it only relieves the trustees, and enables the court to appoint others.2 The refusal to act should be affirmatively shown, either by an express disclaimer, or by such a tacit refusal to act as amounts to an express rejection; 3 for every gift by will or deed is supposed, prima facie, to be beneficial to the donee, and therefore the law will presume that every gift, whether in trust or not, is accepted until the contrary is proved.4 Especially will this presumption prevail after a long lapse of time, as twenty years, 5 or thirty-four years, 6 if the trustee has notice, and has not disclaimed, though he may have done nothing in the execution of the trust. And even where a deed was only four years old, and the trustees knew of their appointment, and did not object, Lord St. Leonards held that they could not be allowed to say that they did not assent to the conveyance.7

sary for that purpose; the word "declare" will suffice. If there is a breach of the trust, but no execution of the deed other than by an acceptance of it, a simple contract debt only is created against the trustee or his estate, but a breach of covenants under the hand and seal of the trustee creates a specialty debt, which in some jurisdictions takes precedence of simple contract debts.3 This distinction is of no effect in the United States, as, in every State, probably the real estate of a deceased person is equally liable for his debts, however contracted or evidenced. If the trustee executes the deed, he should see to it that the recitals are all correct, otherwise he may be held liable to make them good. 4 Acceptance of the trust estops the trustee from denying the title of the person for whom he holds. 5(a)

§ 261. Parol evidence of the conversations, acts, and admissions of a party are admissible to prove his acceptance of a trust. The general rule is, that every voluntary interference with the trust property will stamp a person as an acting trustee, 10 unless such interference can be plainly referred to some other ground of action than to an acceptance of the trust, as by showing that such a person acted, in interfering, as the mere agent of an acting trustee.1 The mere fact that a person named as trustee in a deed takes the custody of the deed until another trustee can be appointed is not an acceptance, because his acts are plainly referable to another ground of action.2 While parol evidence is competent to show whether a supposed trustee has or has not accepted the trust, it is not competent, in behalf of the trustee, to prove by such evidence the conversations or declarations of the settlor, in order to show what property was subject to the trust.3 A trustee should take care that his acts in relation to the trust fund are plainly referable to some certain ground of action; for if his acts are ambiguous, or it is doubtful whether he intended to accept, or to act in some other capacity, the doubt will be against him, and he will be construed to have accepted the trust and all its responsibilities.4

of a bond, and in relation to express trustees in general, similar provisions may exist.

§ 262. At common law an executor was said to derive his authority from the will, and not from the appointment of the probate court.3 Therefore most of the acts of persons nominated to execute wills were valid before the probate of the will.4 Thus persons appointed by a testator in his will to administer his estate, and execute the trusts created by such will, might assume the trusts and proceed in the execution of them, without presenting the will for probate; 5 and the same evidence might be used to show that a trustee under a will had accepted such trust, and had assumed its responsibilities, as was admissible to show that a trustee under a deed had accepted the office. But in nearly all the United States there are statutes upon the subject which require that wills shall be presented for probate, and that executors and trustees under them shall give bonds for the faithful discharge of their duties. Where such statutes are in force, executors or trustees have no power or authority to act without appointment by the probate court, and a refusal or neglect to qualify by giving bonds will be considered a refusal and disclaimer of the trust.7 In the absence of such statutes, if a person named as executor procures probate of the will, he will thereby constitute himself executor with all the liabilities attached to the office, and if the same person is appointed executor and trustee, probate of the will by him will be an acceptance of the trusts. and But the same person may be appointed both executor and trustee under a will in such a manner that he may accept one of the offices and decline the other. As if a man is appointed executor, and as executor is to act as a trustee, in such case the probate of the will, and qualification as executor, will be an acceptance of the trust. But if from the will it appears that the testator intended to give his trustees a distinct and independent character, probate of the will by the executors will not make them trustees, unless they also accept the trust and qualify themselves according to law. If the executor is not expressly appointed trustee, the court may determine from the whole will whether he is to act as trustee.2 If the trust is given to one named, and the same person is afterwards appointed executor, the trust is not annexed to the office of executor.3 The conditions of bonds of administrators are to administer the estate according to law. Bonds of executors are conditioned to administer an estate according to the will, though a condition to administer according to law is the same thing, because by law they are to administer according to the will. If, therefore, by the terms of the will the executor, as executor, is to keep the estate, or any portion of it, in his hands, and is to deal with it as a trustee, his bond will be held as security for the faithful performance of his duties, though such duties are much larger and different from those of an ordinary executor. 4 Where the income of property is given to one for life, and at his death the property is given over to another, and no trustee is named in the will, the executor is the trustee to hold the property during the life of the legatee for life. 5 If, however, the will contemplates that the executor, as such, is to perform only the ordinary duties of an executor, and that when the estate is settled by him, another duty is to arise to be performed, either by him or by another, then the bond of the executor is not security for those further duties; but the person who is to perform them must accept the office, and give a bond for their performance. It may be further observed, that an executor will be considered as holding a legacy in his capacity as executor, unless the will clearly shows that the testator intended that he should hold it in the character of a trustee. But after the lapse of twenty years the law will presume that an estate was fully administered, and that thereafter the executor held the funds as trustee. So, if it appears that the executor made an actual final settlement of the estate as executor, he will be presumed to hold subsequently as a trustee. As a general rule, executors and trustees' bonds can be sued only by leave of court, upon good cause shown.

§ 263. If the same person is both executor and trustee, it is sometimes difficult to determine whether, in a particular case, he is acting as executor or trustee. In England, the rule seems to be that if the executor assents to the legacy, if it is specific, or if part of the assets are clearly set apart and appropriated by him to answer a particular legacy, he will be considered to hold the fund as trustee for that trust, and not as executor. In jurisdictions where executors and trustees are required to qualify and give bonds, it has been held that an executor, who is also a trustee under the will, cannot be considered as holding any part of the assets as trustee, until he has settled his account at the probate office as executor, and has been credited with the amount as executor with which he is afterwards to be charged as trustee. In other cases it has been held that the change of property from the executor to the trustee, where they are the same persons, may be shown by some authoritative and notorious act; but that the mere determination of the executor, in his own mind, to hold certain particular property thereafter in trust for a particular legatee under the will, is not such a setting apart as to discharge him from his liability as executor, and to charge him as trustee. Jacobs v. Ryland, L. R. 15 Eq. 341. See Ruffin v. Harrison, 81 N. C. 208, in which the court, from an examination of the cases cited, deduced the following principles: 1. Where the simple relation of debtor and creditor exists, and the same person, representing both, is to pay and receive, the possession of assets which ought to be applied to the debts is in law an application. 2. Where one is clothed with a double fiduciary capacity, and the balance remaining upon a full execution of one trust belongs to the other, if the amount has been ascertained definitely and authoritatively, and the fund is then in the trustee's hands, the law makes the transfer. 3. If the first trust is not closed, although the trustee may have rendered an account, which has not been passed upon by a competent tribunal, the fund remains unchanged. and is held as before. 4. The trustee may, by an unequivocal act indicating the intent, elect to hold the fund in possession in another capacity, and it will be thereby transferred.

- ³ Miller v. Congdon, 14 Gray, 114. The question, in this case, was whether the estate or the legatee should suffer a certain loss; but it was not a question whether the executor should bear the loss in person.

will be liable for the faithful discharge of his duties as such, until he has transferred his account to himself as trustee, and given a bond as trustee. 1 But, at the same time, it is held that if the executor, acting as trustee under such a will, acts with fidelity and due diligence, he and his sureties will not be responsible should any loss happen either to the principal or interest of the trust fund; that is, that his liability in such a case is rather that of a trustee than that of an executor; 2 and if he has acted in good faith in the investment of the legacy, any loss that may occur without his fault will fall upon the legatee or cestui que trust, and not upon him or the estate.3 Where a decree in chancery created a separate estate for a married woman, and the court appointed a trustee to receive it, and ordered him to give bond for the faithful administration of the trust, the property vested in him upon his giving bond, and continued during his life; and, at his death, it did not vest in the cestui que trust, but remained subject to the orders of the court.4

§ 264. The executor of an executor, by accepting the office from his immediate testator, becomes the executor and trustee of his testator's testator. This is the rule in England, where an executor comes into possession of all the assets in the hands of his testator, in whatever capacity such testator held them; and, by accepting the duty of administering the estate of his immediate testator, he accepts the duty of administering all the trusts with which the assets in his testator's hands were charged.⁵ An executor must administer

an account for all the assets that come to his hands. If his testator held goods of a previous testator unadministered, or if his testator held assets as a trustee, probate courts may appoint an administrator with the will annexed of the first testator, or a new trustee; and it will be the duty of the executor of the last testator to settle an account with the administrator with the will annexed, or with the new trustee, and to pay over to them the assets that came to his hands, Until such proceedings are had, he will hold such assets upon the same terms and trusts that his testator held them: and it will be his duty to administer them accordingly. The proposition may be briefly stated thus: An executor, in proving the will and in accepting the office from his immediate testator, accepts not only all the trusts imposed by the immediate will under which he acts, but also all the trusts in respect to the assets which come to his hands with which his immediate testator was charged; and he must execute those trusts until he is relieved by a new appointment in the probate court, and a settlement and payment over of the assets. He will not be allowed to accept the trusts created by his immediate testator, and to repudiate those with which his testator was himself charged.1 And so, a trustee cannot limit his acceptance and liability to any particular portion of the trust. For if he acts at all, though he disclaim a part he will be held to have accepted the entire trust; 2 as if one is appointed trustee of real and personal estate, and he deals with the personal, he will be deemed to

§ 266. When trustees have accepted the office, they ought to bear in mind that the law knows no such person as a passive trustee, and that they cannot sleep upon their trust. If such trustee remains quiet for any reason, and suffers some other to do all the business, and yet executes formal papers, as a power of attorney for the sale of stock, or a release or discharge of mortgages on payment, he is answerable for the money as if he had conducted the business. And further, the trustee should make himself acquainted with the nature and circumstances of the property; for though he is not responsible for anything that happens before his acceptance of the trust, yet if a loss occurs from any want of attention, care, or diligence in him after his acceptance, he may be held responsible for not taking such action as was called for.²

§ 267. It has been seen that a person named as trustee, either in a deed or will, may decline the office and disclaim the estate.³ If he does so, he ought to execute an effectual disclaimer without delay, for after a long interval of time it will be presumed that he accepted the office.⁴ If a person knows of his appointment, and lies by for a long time, it is for the court to say whether, under all the circumstances, such acquiescence was an assent to the trust.⁵ But if a trustee does no act in the office, there is no rule that requires him to disclaim within any particular time. Thus, he may disclaim after sixteen years if the delay can be so explained as to rebut the presumption of an acceptance.⁶ A disclaimer will take effect as of the time of the gift, and will prevent the estate from vesting in the trustee disclaiming; therefore, a disclaimer, whenever made, will relate back to the time of the gift, if the party disclaiming has done no act which may be construed into an acceptance. It is therefore immaterial when the mere formal instrument of disclaimer is executed, provided that nothing has intervened to vest the estate in the trustee.¹

§ 268. If a person has once accepted the office, either expressly or by implication, it is conclusive; and he cannot afterwards, by disclaimer or renunciation, avoid its duties and responsibilities.² And the reason is, that, if the estate has once vested in the trustee, it cannot be divested by a mere disclaimer, or renunciation, nor can he convey the estate against the consent of the cestui que trust without committing a breach of trust, unless the instrument creating the trust gives him that power, or unless there is the decree of a court to that effect. In such case the trustee may resign the trust, and convey the estate in the manner pointed out in the instrument creating the trust, if it speaks upon that subject; or the trustee may decline the office, and convey the estate to a new trustee, by the agreement of all the parties in interest, if they are competent to act, and consent to the arrangement. But if the parties do not consent, or if there are minor children, married women, insane persons, or others incompetent to act, a trustee, after he has once accepted the office, can only be discharged by decree of a court having jurisdiction, and upon proper proceedings had.3

§ 269. If a person accepts a trust and dies, his heir cannot renounce or disclaim it. The acceptance vested the estate in the trustee, and the law at his death cast it upon the heir: and the heir cannot divest or repudiate the estate by a mere disclaimer. But if the heir is so named in the original instrument of trust that he takes the estate by purchase, and not by inheritance or descent, or if he comes in under some arrangement, as a special occupant, he may use his own judgment in accepting or refusing the estate charged with the trust.² In most of the United States there are special provisions by statute regulating the resignation of trustees, and the proceedings to be had upon their death, for the preservation of the trust estates and the appointment of new trustees. If a person is appointed trustee and has neither accepted nor disclaimed during his life, it is an open question whether his heir or personal representative can disclaim after his death. The question was raised in Goodson v. Ellison, but was left undecided. Mr. Hill thinks that a disclaimer by the heir may be supported on principle.4 A later case seems strongly to imply that the heir cannot disclaim. 5 If an acting trustee dies, a person named cotrustee with him may disclaim after his death, if the one disclaiming has done no act amounting to an acceptance.6

a gift is not perfect in law until it is accepted by the assent of the donce, a disclaimer operates as evidence that the donee never assented, and consequently that the estate never vested in him. Accordingly, it is now established that a parol disclaimer is sufficient in all cases of a gift by deed or will of both real and personal estate. 1 And so a trust may be repudiated without an express disclaimer, as by evidence of the conduct of the party amounting to a refusal of the office, 2 or by any conduct inconsistent with an acceptance; and a disclaimer may be presumed after a long neglect to qualify or refusal to act.3 But the parol expressions of a refusal of the trust, or parol evidence of conduct inconsistent with an acceptance, must be unequivocal, and extend to a renunciation of all interest in the property; for if such refusal or conduct is coupled with a claim to the estate of another character, it will not amount to a disclaimer.4 But a person would act very imprudently who allowed so important a question, as whether he was a trustee or not, to be a matter of inference and construction from conversations or conduct.5

- § 271. A disclaimer should be by deed or other writing that admits of no ambiguity, and is certain evidence. And the instrument should be a disclaimer and not a conveyance; for if the trustee attempts to convey the estate, he may be held to have accepted the trust by the same act which was intended to be a refusal of the office. Although Lord Eldon expressed the opinion, which seems to be the common-sense view, that if the intention of the instrument is to disclaim, it ought to receive that construction, although it is in form a conveyance, yet this distinction has not been acted on. A trust may also be disclaimed at the bar of the court and by counsel, or by answer in chancery.
- § 272. If a person is nominated as trustee in a will, and a benefit is also given to him independent of the office, he can claim the testator's bounty, and yet disclaim the burden of the trust,⁵ as an executor who is also a legatee may renounce the executorship and yet claim the legacy; but if the benefit is annexed to the office of trustee or executor, and is not a gift to the individual, the person named as executor or trustee cannot claim the benefit if he decline the office.⁶

The settlor must be presumed to have known the effect of a disclaimer by the trustees named by him. 1 It will be seen from this, that a disclaimer operates retrospectively, and vests the estate, ab initio, in those trustees only who accept the trust, and, in the absence of an acceptance by any of the trustees, in the heir.2 It follows, that all the powers and authority vested in the trustees, as such, which are incidental or requisite to the execution of the trusts, are vested in those trustees only who accept the office. They may, therefore, grant leases of the trust estate, and sell and convey the same, 4 and give valid receipts for the purchase-money, 5 and the disclaiming trustee need not join in the deeds, nor can his concurrence be required or enforced. But it must be known whether one of several trustees disclaims or accepts before it can be known whether the acts of the others are valid or not. 6 And it is immaterial that a disclaiming trustee is expressly named as one of the persons by whom a power connected with the trust is to be exercised: 7 a power given to the trustees, or the survivor of them, may be exercised by an acting trustee, although the disclaiming trustee is still alive.8 But if the power is given to the person and not to the office, a disclaimer by one will not vest the power in the other trustees, so as to enable them to exercise it. Powers that imply a personal confidence in the donce must be exercised by the persons in whom the confidence is placed,

- § 274. If a trustee once accepts the office, he cannot by his sole action be discharged from its duties. Having once entered upon the management of the trust, he must continue to perform its duties until he is discharged in one of three ways: first, he may be removed and discharged, and a new trustee substituted in his place, by proceedings before a court having jurisdiction over the trust; second, he may be discharged, and a new trustee appointed, by the agreement and concurrence of all the parties interested in the trust; (a) and, third, he may be discharged, and a new trustee appointed, in the manner pointed out in the instrument creating the trust, if it makes any provisions upon that subject. 3 (b) Mere abandonment of the trust will not vest the trust property in the hands of his cotrustee, nor relieve a trustee from liability.4 If a trustee conveys away the trust estate to another, even his cotrustee, and appoints another to execute the trust, the conveyance may pass the naked legal title, but it will have no effect in relieving the original trustee from responsibility, if the transaction is not sanctioned by the decree of the court, or by the consent of all parties interested; and it will trans-

§ 275. The cestui que trust, and all other persons, although contingently interested in the remainder or reversion of trust property, are entitled to have the custody and the administration of it confided to proper persons, and to a proper number of persons. Thus if a trustee originally appointed by will die in the testator's lifetime, a new trustee may be appointed by the court to take the trust property; or if the original number of trustees is reduced by death, the cestui que trust may call upon the court to appoint new trustees in place of those deceased. "The power of a court of equity to remove a trustee, and to substitute another in his place, is incidental to its paramount duty to see that trusts are properly executed; and may properly be executed whenever such a state of mutual ill-feeling, growing out of his behavior, exists between the trustees, or between the trustee and the beneficiaries, that his continuance in office would be detrimental to the execution of the trust, even if for no other reason than that human infirmity would prevent the cotrustee or the beneficiaries from working in harmony with him, and although charges of misconduct against him are either not made out, or are grossly exaggerated." If circumstances give rise to conflict of interests between the parts of trust property held on distinct trusts, the English courts, under the Trustee Act of 1850, § 32, would not necessarily deem it expedient to remove the trustees, but might appoint separate trustees. court. 1 And in a suit for the purpose, it will not be impertinent nor scandalous to charge the trustee with misconduct, or to impute to him a corrupt or improper motive, or to allege that his behavior is vindictive towards the cestui que trust; but it will be impertinent, and may be scandalous, to charge general malice or general personal hostility.2 If the court have jurisdiction of the subject-matter, mere irregularity in the proceedings or in the appointment will not make it void in a collateral proceeding, nor can the regularity of the proceedings or of the appointment be inquired into in a collateral suit; such appointment must stand until it is reversed by a proceeding for the purpose in the same case.³ In case of a trust for creditors, the court will not at the instance of some of them remove the assignee, unless he is in default, or is shown to be unfit for his office.4 Equity will not exercise its power to take charge of and administer a trust when it is being properly administered by the trustee.5

§ 276. It may be stated generally, that if the conduct or circumstances of the trustees are such as to render it very inconvenient, improper, or inexpedient for them to continue in the trust, the court will exercise its discretion and relieve them, and appoint others in their place; as where the trustees were desirous of being discharged, or were incapable through age and infirmity of acting, or so disagreed among themselves that they could not act, or where cotrustees refuse to act with one of their number, or where the trustees appointed were municipal officers for the time being and are changed yearly, 2 or where a corporation appointed trustee had become subject to a foreign power,3 — in these and the like cases the courts interposed and appointed other trustees. But if there is a controversy, the court will exercise a sound discretion. Mere disagreements between the trustee and cestui que trust will not justify a removal; 4 nor the fact that the trustee forbids social intercourse between his family and the beneficiaries, 5 and if a trustee fails in the discharge of his duties from an honest mistake, or mere misunderstanding of them, or from a misjudgment, it is no ground for removal;6 and if a trustee in good faith refuses to exercise a purely discretionary power in favor of the estate, as to vary the securities, he will not be removed; 7 nor will he be removed for a mere constructive fraud, as for buying the trust property at his own sale; 8 and where a trust was to take effect in the future upon the happening of a certain event, and in the meantime it was to remain passive, the court refused to interfere, and remove the trustee for an alleged misfeasance.9 In no case ought the trustee to be removed where there is no danger of a breach of trust, and some of the beneficiaries are satisfied with the management. 10 Nor will a trustee be removed for every violation of duty, or even breach of the trust, if the fund is in no danger of being lost. 1(a) The power of removal of trustees appointed by deed or will ought to be exercised sparingly by the courts. There must be a clear necessity for interference to save the trust property. Mere error, or even breach of trust, may not be sufficient: there must be such misconduct as to show want of capacity or of fidelity, putting the trust in jeopardy.2

§ 276 a. A trust will not be allowed to fail for want of a trustee; and if the nominee dies before qualifying or afterward, the court will appoint a trustee.3 So if no trustee is appointed by the grantor, or his appointment is void for uncertainty.4 But if the trustee of a power that is purely personal and discretionary refuses to qualify, the trust cannot be executed.5

in the proceedings of appointment not affecting the jurisdiction of the court will not avail in collateral suits. (a) But an appointment where there is no vacancy, the former trustee not having relinquished the trust nor been deprived of it for abuse or mismanagement, is a nullity.2 Where the trustees are required to give security, it will order such notice and to such persons as it sees fit.3 It always has regard to the wishes of the author of the trust, to be gathered from the instrument of trust; if he has expressed a disapprobation of an individual, the court would refrain from appointing him; and so the court will not appoint a new trustee with a view to the interest of some of the cestuis que trust, for the trustee ought to hold an even hand between all parties, and not favor a particular one. Further, the court has regard to the nature of the trust, and to those instrumentalities by which it can best be carried into execution. 4 Accordingly, courts

will not substitute trustees upon the mere caprice of the cestui que trust, and without a reasonable cause, and although the instrument of trust or a statute gives the cestui que trust full power to remove and appoint other trustees, yet good cause must be shown or the court cannot be put in motion, nor will they appoint a trustee out of the jurisdiction without security. There is no absolute rule of law that prevents a cestui que trust from being a trustee for himself and others, and the court is sometimes obliged to appoint him; but the arrangement is irregular and sometimes disastrous, and the court will not sanction it if it can be avoided. but difficulties frequently grow out of the relation, and the courts have sometimes said that they would not make such appointments. In no case will the court remove old trustees and substitute new ones, unless satisfied of the necessity of the removal, and of the fitness of the new trustee proposed. Nor will the court authorize the new trustees to nominate their successors. There was some doubt and difference of practice at first; but it is now settled, except in charities, that the court will not delegate this part of its jurisdiction to new appointees.

§ 278. If the instrument of trust requires the trustees of a charity to have a particular residence, it is irregular to appoint others not answering that description, provided there are those proper to be trustees.⁵ But if it is the custom to appoint such non-residents, the court will not remove them, but will see that vacancies when they occur are properly filled.⁶ And, generally, if an irregular appointment has been acquiesced in for a long time, the court will not remove.⁷ In making the selection, the inquiry is whether the proposed appointment is proper, not whether it is the most proper.⁸

§ 279. It is laid down in several cases, that if a trustee becomes bankrupt he may be removed, or if he becomes insolvent and compounds with his creditors; and this is on the ground that the cestui que trust has a right to have the trust administered by responsible trustees. (a) The English Bankrupt Act² provides, that, if a trustee becomes bankrupt, the chancellor, on petition and due notice, may order the trust estate to be conveyed by the bankrupt, the assignees, and all other persons interested, to such other persons as the chancellor shall think fit, upon the same trusts. Under this statute it has been determined that the court will exercise its discretion whether to remove the bankrupt or not,3 but that prima facie the bankrupt is to be removed, 4 although he may have obtained his discharge. 5 But the court will not interfere long after the bankruptcy to remove the trustee, if he has obtained his discharge. 6 Generally the insolvency or bankruptcy of a trustee does not disqualify him for the trust, 7 nor does his bankruptcy affect the trust estate in his hands; and his certificate does not discharge him from fiduciary obligations.8 In the United States, trustees are, or

§ 280. In Bogle v. Bogle, the court determined that one who, without compensation and for no definite time, undertook a trust for the benefit of another was entitled to a decree discharging him, when the further care of the property became inconvenient to him. Generally, trustees who have acted are not entitled, as against the trust estate, to refuse at pleasure to continue: they must have some good cause to entitle them to be relieved.2(b) If they have received a legacy or other benefit given to them as trustees, they cannot be allowed to retire except for good cause, 3 at least without restoring the legacy. It is a good cause for relief if the cestui que trust incumber and complicate the estate, and embarrass the trustee in the performance of his duties.4 But where there is no cause for a discharge, except the wish of the trustee, or his convenience, he ought to pay the costs of the proceeding, and not impose the burden and expense upon the estate; 5 and so if the old trustee is removed for

Proceedings are generally commenced directly for the removal and appointment of trustees; but when a bill or petition is already pending for the administration of the trust, the appointment or removal may be made upon motion in those proceedings.4 And, further, if the trusts created in an instrument are of such a nature that they can be severed without injury to the estate, courts may allow the trustee to resign a part, and will commit that part to other trustees under proper arrangements for security.5 But courts will

The appointment of a new trustee is not complete until the property is vested in him; therefore the court usually embraces, in the decree appointing a new trustee, a direction for a proper conveyance to be executed to him alone, or to him jointly with the continuing or remaining trustees, by all the requisite parties, whether remaining trustees, or heirs or representatives of the last survivor, or trustees who have been removed from office.3 If the old trustee refuses to deliver the property to the new incumbent, the former and his bondsmen are liable.4 In some States it is provided by statute, that, upon qualification by the newly appointed trustee, the trust estate shall vest in him in like manner as it had or would have vested in the trustee in whose place he is substituted.⁵ It has been determined that no conveyance is necessary where such statutes are in force, but that the trust estate vests immediately upon the appointment, by virtue of the statute, with all the powers and duties essential to the purposes of the trust.⁶ And so if the instrument of trust provides for the vesting of the estate in the remaining, surviving, or new trustees, upon the removal, resignation, death, and appointment of others, the trust estate will vest according to the provisions of the instrument, as the creator of the trust may mould it at his pleasure.7 It has already been seen that, if one of the trustees disclaims with-

§ 285. A trustee may be relieved from his office by the consent of all parties interested, without the decree of a court, even if the instrument of trust is silent upon that subject. But the transaction operates rather as an estoppel of the cestui que trust than as an affirmative transfer of power. Thus, no cestui que trust who concurs in a breach of trust can afterwards call the trustee to an account for the disastrous consequences; 1 therefore, if a trustee conveys the trust estate to another person, and appoints such other person trustee, and all the cestuis que trust execute the conveyances, or otherwise consent to the transaction, they would be forever precluded from holding the retiring trustee responsible for any delegation of his office, or for any loss that occurred afterwards. 2 But the trustee must see to it that all the cestuis que trust are parties to the transaction and concur; for, even in the case of a large number of creditors, each individual must act for himself, or he is not estopped, and the consent of a majority cannot affect the rights of one who did not concur.3 The trustee must also see to it that all the cestuis que trust are sui juris, and not married women, infants, or other persons incapable of acting, or of no legal capacity to consent. For if there are such cestuis que trust, there can be no discharge and substitution of trustees without the sanction of the court, in the absence of a power in the instrument of trust; 4 or if there may be parties in interest not yet in existence, as if the trust is for children not yet born, there can be no change of trustees by consent. But a married woman is considered sui juris in respect to her sole and separate estate, where there is no restraint against anticipation or alienation.5

all retire at the same time, they ought not to appoint a single trustee only in the place of two or more.1 In such case the settlor has fixed the number which he thinks necessary for the proper administration and safety of the trust fund; and if a single trustee is appointed and wishes to retire, he ought not to appoint a plurality of trustees, for in such a case he ought not to increase the machinery and expense of the trust contrary to the settlor's intention.² But the power may be so drawn that several may be put in place of one, or one in the place of several. Thus where a testator appointed two trustees, and the surviving or continuing trustee or trustees were authorized to appoint one or more persons to be trustee or trustees, in the room of the trustee or trustees so dying, &c., the surviving trustee appointed two new trustees, and the appointment was held by the court to be authorized. So, three trustees have been appointed in place of two,4 and three have been authorized in place of four, 5 and two in place of one, 6 and four in place of five. 7 In another case, one trustee was appointed by the court in place of two.8 And if a successor cannot be found to a retiring trustee, the court may appoint the continuing trustees to be sole trustee or trustees. Where real estate is given in trust to several persons and to the survivors or survivor if some decline to act, the others have the whole legal estate and all the powers of the trust.2

§ 287. The duties and powers of trustees cannot be delegated to others, unless there is express authority for that purpose given in the instrument creating the trust.3(a) It follows, that a power to appoint new trustees can seldom or never exist, except in express trusts created by deed or will. The person who creates the trust may mould it into whatever form he pleases: he may therefore determine in what manner, in what event, and upon what condition the original trustees may retire and new trustees may be substituted. All this is fully within his power; and he can make any legal provisions which he may think proper for the continuation and succession of trustees during the continuance of the trust.4 And vacancies cannot be filled in any other way than that named by the grantor, unless in consequence of a statu-

The power to appoint new trustees in place of the original ones can only be given by the author and creator of the trust. For, in cases where courts are called upon to appoint trustees, authority to appoint successors will not be given, but recourse must be had to the courts totics quoties. (a) There is, however, an exception to this rule in case of charitable trusts; for, in such cases, to save costs, and for convenience, courts of equity will not only appoint new trustees to fill vacancies, but they will sanction a scheme for the administration of the charity, which provides for the appointment and succession of trustees without a continual recourse to legal proceedings.

§ 288. Every well-drawn instrument, creating trusts intended to continue for any considerable time, should contain authority and power for any of the trustees to relinquish the trust, as well as provisions for filling vacancies occasioned by resignation, death, or incapacity. Such provisions save the cost and trouble of constant applications to courts. In framing these powers, great care should be taken to provide for every possible contingency in which a resignation or new appointment may become convenient or necessary. The power should clearly express the cases in which new trustees may be appointed, and embrace every event which can render

"Provided always, and it is hereby further declared, that if the trustees hereby appointed, or any of them, or any future trustees or trustee hereof, shall die (either before or after their or his acceptance of the trusts thereof), go to reside abroad, desire to be discharged from, renounce, decline, or become incapable or unfit to act in the trusts of these presents, while the same trusts or any of them shall be subsisting, then, and in every or any such cases, and so often as the same shall happen, it shall be lawful for the said (the cestuis que trust [if any] for life), or the survivors of them, by any writing or writings, under their, his, or her hands or hand, attested by two or more witnesses, and after the decease of such survivor, then for the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee hereof, or the executors or administrators of the then last acting trustee (whether such surviving trustees or trustee, or executors or administrators, respectively, shall be willing to act in other respects or not), by any writing or writings, under their or his hands or hand, attested by two or more witnesses, to nominate and substitute any person or persons to be trustee or trustees hereof in the place of the trustee or trustees so dying, going to reside abroad, desiring to be discharged, renouncing, declining, or becoming incapable or unfit to act as aforesaid. And that, so often as any new trustee or trustees hereof shall be appointed as aforesaid, all the hereditaments, &c., which shall, for the time being, be holden upon the trusts hereof, shall be thereupon conveyed, assigned, and transferred respectively, in such manner that the same may become legally and effectually vested in the acting trustees hereof for the time being, to and for the same uses, and upon the same trusts, and with and subject to the same powers and provisions as are herein declared, and contained of and concerning the same hereditaments and premises respectively, or such of the same uses, trusts, is necessary to act under the powers thus given in the instrument of trust, it is of the utmost consequence that there should be an exact compliance with the power and authority as given. (a) For if the circumstances do not justify or demand a new appointment, as contemplated in the instrument of trust, or if there is any irregularity as to the persons by whom the new appointment is made, or as to the manner in which it is made, the retiring trustee will still be liable for any breaches of trust which may be committed, and the new trustee will be incapable of exercising any legal authority over the trust property, and will be a trustee only de son tort, if he interfere; and any purchaser of the trust property

"And that every new trustee, to be from time to time appointed as aforesaid, shall henceforth be competent in all things to act in the execution of the trusts hereof, as fully and effectually, and with all the same powers and authorities to all purposes whatsoever, as if he had hereby been originally appointed a trustee in the place of the trustee to whom he shall, whether immediately or otherwise, succeed."

(a) In general, what is done under a power of appointment is to be referred to the instrument by which the power is created, and operates as a disposition of the estate of the donor. Heath r. Withington, 6 Cush. 497; Osgood v. Bliss, 141 Mass. 474; Collins v. Wickwire, 162 Mass. 143; Dennis v. Holsapple, 148 Ind. 297. In Massachusetts, when one has a general power of appointment and executes it by will, the property so appointed is regarded as assets of his estate, and his creditors are entitled to it in preference to his voluntary appointees; for the purposes of administration, the property should be administered by the executor of the will of the party exercising the power. Olney v.

Balch, 154 Mass. 318; Emmons v. Shaw, 171 Mass. 410. An appointee by will has no rights until the will is proved; generally appointments by will are intended to speak from the death of the testator, and not to leave any intervening time during which the fund is simply to accumulate. Loring v. Mass. Horticultural Society, 171 Mass. 401.

When a debtor, having a general power to appoint property which he never owned, exercises that power in favor of volunteers, the property in their hands is burdened with his debts, if needed to satisfy them. may find his title utterly worthless. The retiring trustee should be careful not to part with the control of the fund before the new trustee has been actually appointed and qualified; for if he transfer it into the name of the intended trustee, and by some accident the appointment is not completed, the old trustee still remains answerable for the fund. 2

§ 289. These powers of appointing successors are frequently matters of personal confidence reposed in the trustees appointed by the settlor, and they are always matters of general trust and confidence to be strictly executed. (a) The court will not prevent the exercise of discretion given for appointment, but will see that it is used to subserve the purposes of its creation.³ Being powers given to third persons over the property of others, they are construed with great strictness, and a great variety of decisions have been made upon the various forms in which the power has been expressed. Questions have arisen: (1) As to the time, occasion, or event when a new appointment may be made; (2) As to the person or persons by whom the appointment may be made; (3) As to the persons who may be appointed; (4) As to the number of persons who may be appointed; (5) As to the manner of making the new appointment.

Both the trustees declining to act, they executed a conveyance to two other persons, as an appointment of them as new trustees under the power; and it was held that the power was not well executed, that the word "survivor" referred to the trustee "continuing to act," that it was the intention of the testator that in case of the death, refusal, or incapacity of one of his trustees, the remaining one who had been named by him, and who was the object of his confidence, should have the power of associating with himself some other person, and that the event of both declining at the same time was not provided for. 1(a) Where a settlement upon a chapel contained a power for the appointment of new trustees upon the desertion or removal of any existing trustee, Lord Eldon held that the case of a trustee, who left the trust on account of its being converted by the other trustees to purposes different and distinct from the intention of the settlor, was an event not provided for.2 And

§ 291. In some earlier cases, it was held that where a power was given to the surviving trustee or trustees to appoint new trustees in case of the death of either of their cotrustees, it did not authorize an appointment to fill a vacancy caused by the death of trustees during the lifetime of the testator, upon the ground that persons dying in the lifetime of the testator had never filled the character of trustees so as to come within the terms of the power; 3 but these are overruled by the later cases, and it may be considered as settled that the surviving trustee or trustees may fill vacancies caused by the death of persons nominated by the testator, whether they die in his lifetime or afterwards. 4 (b) So if the continuing trustee or trustees are to appoint upon the refusing or declining of any of the original trustees, they may appoint upon the disclaimer of any one or more; and so a payment of the trust fund into court, under an order or permission to that effect, is a refusing or declining by the trustee that authorizes the exercise of the power.

§ 292. If the settlement provides that a new appointment may be made on either of the trustees becoming unfit, the power may be exercised if one of them becomes bankrupt; but if the word is "incapable" without the word "unfit," a new appointment cannot be made, for the word "incapable" means personal incapacity and not pecuniary embarrassment, and a bankrupt who had some time before obtained a first-class certificate of discharge was not regarded as coming within the term "unfit." But where a trustee of property in London had been domiciled in New York for twenty years, he was declared incapable without the meaning of the word. Where a power declared that, "if the trustees were not deemed suitable and sufficient to act as trustees by the cestui que trust, he might remove them, it was held to be a matter of discretion in the beneficiary to remove the trustees or not."

§ 293. Where a suit is already pending in court for the administration of the trust, the donees of the power to appoint cannot exercise it without first obtaining the court's approval of the person proposed.1 When it is desired to change the trustees during the pendency of a suit, a motion must be made, and such motion is referred to a master to report upon the person proposed. The master is to regard the power of appointment; but he is not bound to approve the proposed person.² If an appointment is made, however, by the old trustees, it is not contempt, nor is it altogether void; but it puts the burden upon those making the appointment of proving, by the strictest evidence, that it was just and proper. If they fail in such proof, the act will be declared null and void.3 So if the trustee or other person having power to appoint a new trustee is a lunatic, the court must appoint.4

§ 294. It will at once be seen that the power of appointing other trustees can be exercised only by those to whom it is expressly given. Therefore, if the power is not given to any one, new trustees can be appointed only by the court, ⁵ except where, as in England, statutory provisions may change this rule. ⁶ So if the power be given to particular persons by name, without saying more, or adding words of survivorship, it must be exercised jointly, and upon the death of one of them the power will be gone. ⁷ But if a power be given to a class consisting of several persons, as to "my trustees," "my sons," or "my brothers," and not to individuals by their proper names, the authority will exist in the class, so long as the plural number remains, although it may have been reduced in number by the death or resignation of some; 1 and where a power is given to "my executors" as a class, it may be exercised by a single surviving executor.² A power to be exercised by the survivor of two persons cannot be executed by the one dying first,3 nor even by the two acting together during the lives of both.4 So a power given to the surviving or continuing trustee to appoint a cotrustee, if either of the two decline to act, does not authorize an appointment if both decline.5 So the power of appointment cannot be executed by heirs, personal representatives, or assigns of any trustee, unless the authority is expressly given in the instrument of trust.6 In these, as in all other cases, the authority will be strictly confined to those persons who answer the precise description. Thus a power given to a trustee, his heirs, executors, or administrators, cannot be executed by a devisee or assignee of the trustee.7 It is, however, well established, that a power given to a surviving trustee may be executed by a continuing or acting trustee, although a cotrustee who disclaimed is still living.8

The number of parties undertaking to execute a power must come within the exact description given of the number of those who are to execute it; thus, if a power is given to be exercised by a certain specified number, or when they are reduced to a certain number, it cannot be exercised by a less number, and is gone if not exercised before the number is reduced below the number which is named for its execution. 1(a) But the power may be executed before the trustees are reduced to the lowest number specified, as where a conveyance to twenty-five trustees for a chapel directed that when, by death or otherwise, the number should be reduced to fifteen, a majority of those remaining should make up the number to twenty-five. no authority by law to act in the appointment of trustees. A grantor cannot confer new powers on a court though it may on the judge as an individual. But if the court is one that by law may act in the appointment of trustees, the selection of the grantor will be effective. 2

§ 297. The appointment may be by parol unless the power otherwise provides. Where the appointment of new trustees is given to the discretion of the acting trustees, courts of equity will not interfere to control the exercise of the discretion if the old trustees act in good faith, and if the administration of the trust is not already in the hands of or before the court by a pending suit. Thus the old trustees in a case for the exercise of their discretion may appoint any suitable person. The inquiry in such cases is not whether the person proposed is the most suitable, but whether he is suitable. It is generally the duty, however, of trus-

⁴ Bowditch v. Bannelos, 1 Gray, 220; Hodgson's Settlement, 9 Hare, 118. In Bowditch v. Bannelos, above cited, Ch. J. Shaw said: "But when we say that she (the cestui que trust) had power at her pleasure to appoint, we do not mean to say that this was an arbitrary power to appoint a person unfit or unsuitable to execute such a trust, as a minor, an idiot, a pauper, or person incapable of performing the duties. It must be a person of full age, sufficient mental and legal capacity, and in all respects capable of performing the required duties. In case of trust property of real and personal estate, we are not prepared to say whether an alien, not naturalized, and not capable by law to hold real estate, would or would not be a suitable or legal appointment We think the power was not exhausted by the appointment of the first substitute, but that the same power existed, on every resignation, to appoint a new trustee, pursuant to the original trusts; but that this power, by necessary implication, was limited to the appointment of a person legally capable of executing it." Whether the nomination of her husband, on account of the conjugal relation, would have been incompatible with the scope of the whole instrument, and would be a valid objection, or whether the fact that another appointee was a foreigner having no domicil in the United States, an alien not naturalized, would be a valid objection, the court did not decide, because the nominations were withdrawn.

tees to appoint new trustees, who are agreeable to the cestuis que trust, and who would administer the fund for their interest; to this end it is generally the duty of the trustees to consult the cestuis que trust as to the appointment. And a new appointee ought to consult the cestuis que trust before accepting the office.2 An appointment for the mere purpose of having a particular solicitor employed in the management of the trust ought not to be allowed.3 Generally, the new trustees appointed under a power should be amenable to the jurisdiction of the court; but where the cestui que trust resides abroad, it may be proper to appoint trustees in the same jurisdiction with the beneficiary.4 Though if the court is called upon to exercise the power, it will not appoint trustees out of its jurisdiction. 5 Nor is the appointment of one of the cestuis que trust proper, as each of the cestuis que trust has a right to a disinterested and impartial trustee. This rule probably only affects the parties to the trust; for if a cestui que trust should be appointed, and should sell the estate under a power of sale, the purchaser would be protected. 7 Cestuis que trust are not absolutely incapacitated to take the trusts, and courts themselves sometimes appoint them; but it is not generally desirable. So, near relationship is not a disqualification; but it is almost always better to have a capable person not intimately connected with the cestuis que trust.9 Nor should the donee of a

§ 298. It may happen that although words of express trust are used in the grant or bequest of an estate to a trustee, yet no estate vests or remains in the trustee. This may be because only a power is given and no estate, as where a testator simply directs his executor to sell certain property and apply the proceeds to certain purposes instead of granting the property to the executor or trustee to sell, &c., or because the statute of uses executes the legal estate at once in the cestui que trust. Thus, if A. grants or bequeaths land to B. and his heirs, in trust for C. and his heirs, the trustee, B., will take nothing in the land, but the legal title, as well as the beneficial use, will vest immediately in C.; ¹ for the statute of uses,² so called, executes the possession and the legal title in the same person to whom the beneficial interest is given. As stated in previous sections,³ a large part of the land in England was at one time held to uses. The legal title was in one person, but upon the trust and confidence that such person would apply it to the use of some person named, or that such legal owner would permit some other person to have the possession, use, and income of the estate. This system, originating partly in fraud of the law, and partly in the necessities and convenience of the subject, became at last the source of great abuses. To remedy these abuses, the statute of uses was enacted.⁴ This statute exe-

It does not abolish the conveyance to uses, but only annihilates the intervening estate, and turns the interest of the cestui que use into a legal instead of an equitable estate. 1 A use, a trust, and a confidence is one and the same thing, and if an estate is conveyed to one person for the use of, or upon a trust for, another, and nothing more is said, the statute immediately transfers the legal estate to the use, and no trust is created, although express words of trust are used.2 So absolute is the statute that it will operate upon all conveyances in the words above stated, although it was the plain intention of the settlor that the estate should vest and remain in the first donee; for the intention of the citizen cannot control express enactments of the legislature,3 or positive rules of property. § 299. The statute of uses is in force in most of the United States, 1 but where the statute is not in force either by adoption or by re-enactment, and even where it is expressly repealed and a form of deed is enacted, a knowledge of the law of uses is necessary in order to understand and apply the common forms of conveyance.2 The statute of uses, and the doctrines it established, are so interwoven with the history of every American State, and with the growth of its jurisprudence in regard to real estate, that the law of tenures is necessarily interpreted in America by the precedents established under the statute; 3 and in this branch of the law, as in all others, it is impossible to obtain a clear perception of its present state, without a full knowledge of the successive steps by which the latest development has been reached. The application of the statute has been very much modified in many of the States, but the general idea is still acted upon.4 (a) Mr. Washburn remarks, that it is not a fair inference that the doctrine of uses would be inapplicable in any State where they are not declared not to exist, either because

to the intention of the parties. Emery v. Chase, 5 Maine, 235. And the statute of uses is in force. Shapleigh v. Pilsbury, 1 Maine, 271; Emery v. Chase, 5 id. 232; Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. 496; Morden v. Chase, 32 Maine, 329.

In New Hampshire, the form in which lands may be conveyed is fixed by statute. Rev. Stat. But this does not exclude other known forms of conveyance at common law, and the statute of uses is in full force. Exeter v. Odiorne, 1 N. H. 232; Chamberlain v. Crane, id. 64; French v. Heywood, 50 id. 496.

In Vermont, there is a similar legislation as to the form of conveyances; but Chief-Justice Redfield held that the English statute of uses was not in force, for the reason that their court of equity could carry out the intention of parties without the help of the statute. Gorham v. Daniels, 23 Vt. 600; Sherman v. Dodge, 28 id. 26. Mr. Justice Thompson, of the United States court for the district, held the contrary. Soc. &c. v. Hartland, 2 Paine, C. C. 536.

In Massachusetts, a deed acknowledged and recorded conveys land without any other ceremony. Gen. Stat. 1860, c. 89, § 1. The form of deed in general use gives, grants, bargains, sells, and conveys, upon a consideration, limiting the estate to the grantee and his heirs to their use. These words prevent a resulting use in the grantor; and it is a conveyance at common law, since the grantee and the cestui que use is the same person. But if, for any reason, it is necessary, in order to give effect to the conveyance, to construe it as operating under the statute of uses, the court will do so. Cox v. Edwards, 14 Mass. 492; Marshall v. Fish, 6 Mass. 24; Hunt v. Hunt, 14 Pick. 374; Wallis v. Wallis, 4 Mass. 135; Pray v. Pierce, 7 Mass. 381; Russell v. Coffin, 8 Pick. 143; Blood v. In Rhode Island, deeds of bargain and sale, lease and release, and covenants to stand seized, are recognized by statute. Rev. Stat. (1857), p. 335. And the statute of uses would seem to be in partial force. 1 Lomax, Dig. 188; Nightingale v. Hidden, 7 R. I. 132.

In Connecticut, the act of acknowledging and recording a deed is held equivalent to livery of seizin. Barrett v. French, 1 Conn. 351. But the statute of uses is held to be part of its common law. Bacon v. Taylor, no case has arisen in the courts of the State to test the question, or because a form of deed not known under the statute

Kirb. 368; Barrett v. French, 1 Conn. 354; Bryan v. Bradley, 16 Conn. 474.

In New York, previous to 1827, the English statute of uses was in full force. Jackson v. Myers, 3 Johns. 388; Jackson v. Fish, 10 id. 456; Jackson v. Root, 18 id. 79; Jackson v. Cary, 16 id. 302; Jackson v. Dunsbagh, 1 Johns. Cas. 91; Jackson v. Cadwell, 1 Cow. 622. After that year, the rules of the common law were repealed; all uses and trusts were abolished, except such as were expressly authorized. Every interest in land is declared to be a legal right, and cognizable in a court of law except where it is otherwise provided. A conveyance by grant, assignment, or devise is substituted for a conveyance to uses, and future interests in lands may be conveyed by grant. 3 Rev. Stat. 15 (5th ed.); 4 Kent, 300. It has, however, been determined that if land is granted to one in fee in trust for another, the cestui que trust takes the estate absolutely, but subject, however, to such incumbrances as the trustee made upon the estate at the time of the conveyance, as if the trustee should give back a mortgage for the purchase-money, it would be held to be one transaction. Rawson v. Lampman, 1 Seld. 456. Nor have these statutes any application to securities by mortgage. King v. Merchants' Exchange Co., 1 Seld. 547.

In New Jersey, the statute of uses is substantially re-enacted. Den v. Crawford, 3 Halst. 107; Prince v. Sisson, 13 N. J. 168.

In Pennsylvania, a statute declares all deeds in a prescribed form equivalent to a feoffment with livery of seizin at common law, and the statute of uses is also in full force. Opinion of the Judges, 3 Binn. 599; Welt v. Franklin, 1 Binn. 502; Ashburst v. Given, 5 Wat. & S. 323; Sprague v. Woods, 4 id. 192; O'Kinson v. Patterson, 1 id. 395; Hurst v. McNeil, 1 Wash. C. C. 70; Franciscus v. Reigart, 4 Watts, 118. Indeed, at one time the Pennsylvania courts carried the application of the statute to an unusual extent, and held that equitable were converted into legal estates in all cases except active trusts, and even then if the purposes of the trust did not furnish a legitimate reason for not executing the trust in the beneficiary. Kuhn v. Newman, 26 Penn. St. 227; Whichcote v. Lyle, 28 id. 73; Bush's App., 33 id. 85; Kay v. Scates, 37 id. 31. But these cases were overruled, and the law restored to its former condition, in Barnett's App., 46 Penn. St. 392; Shankland's App., 47 id. 113; Earp's App., 75 id. 119; Deibert's App., 78 id. 296.

In Delaware, the statute provides that lands may be transferred by deed without livery, and that the legal estate shall accompany the use, and pass with it. Rev. Code (1852), p. 266.

In Maryland, the English statute of uses is the foundation of their conveyances, and their rules of construction of it are nearly similar to the English rules. Lewis v. Beall, 4 Harr. & McH. 488; Mason v. Small-of uses may have been declared by the statute of a State sufficient to convey lands. It is true that Lord Hardwicke is wood, id. 484; Matthews v. Ward, 10 Gill & J. 443; Cheney v. Watkins, 1 Harr. & J. 527; West v. Biscoe, 6 id. 465; Calvert v. Eden, 2 Harr. & McH. 331.

In Virginia, the statute of uses was a part of the colonial law; but it was repealed in 1792. Afterwards, in 1819, and in Rev. Code (1849), p. 502, a partial substitute was adopted, by which the possession was transferred to the use only in cases of deeds of bargain and sale, lease and release, and deeds operating by way of covenant to stand seized to uses. If uses or trusts are raised by any other form of conveyance, as by devise, they remain, as before the statute of Henry VIII., mere equitable estates, not cognizable by courts of law. Bass v. Scott, 2 Leigh, 359; 1 Lomax, Dig. 188; 2 Matt. Dig. 34; Rowletts v. Daniel, 4 Munf. 473; Tabb v. Baird, 3 Call, 475; Duvall v. Bibb, id. 362.

In North Carolina, the statute is similar to the statute of Virginia, and the statute of uses has nearly the same application. Rev. Code (1854), p. 270; Den v. Hanks, 5 Ired. 30; Smith v. Lockabill, 76 N. C. 465.

In South Carolina, the statute of uses was re-enacted in terms. 2 Stat. at Large, p. 467; Ramsay v. Marsh, 2 McCord, 252; Redfern v. Middleton, Rice, 464; Kinsler v. Clark, 1 Rich. 170; Chancellor v. Windham, id. 161; Laurens v. Jenney, 1 Spears, 356; McNish v. Guerard, 4 Strob. 74.

In Georgia, the form of deed in general use is that of bargain and sale, which operates under the statute of uses. Adams v. Guerard, 29 Ga. 676.

In Florida, there is a statute similar to the statute of Virginia, and the statute of uses is in partial force. Thompson's Dig., p. 178, § 4; 1 Lomax, Dig. 188.

In Alabama, the statute of uses is part of the law of the State. Horton v. Sledge, 29 Ala. 478; You v. Flinn, 34 Ala. 411.

In Mississippi, there is a statute similar to the statute of Virginia. How. & Hutch. Dig. p. 349.

In Louisiana, conveyances originated under the civil law, or the code of France.

In Texas, a statute recognizes deeds of bargain and sale, which operate under the statute of uses.

In Arkansas, the mode of conveyance is by deeds of bargain and sale, and of course the statute of uses must be a part of their law.

In Tennessee, the statute of uses is not in force, though deeds good at common law or under the statute of uses are valid to convey estates; but if uses are raised, they remain as before the statute of Henry VIII.

The statute of Kentucky is in nearly the same words as the statute of reported to have said, that the statute of uses had no other effect than to add at most three words to a conveyance; ¹ Mr. Kent thinks this rather too strongly expressed, and says that the doctrine of the statute has insinuated itself deeply and thoroughly into every branch of the jurisprudence of real property. ² It seems to have been the intention of the statutes of the various States to supply the want of livery of seizin, and to make all deeds, or other writings executed with certain formalities, equivalent to the old feofiments; therefore, any old and well-established rule of conveyancing

Virginia, and the statute of uses has the same application. Rev. Stat. p. 279 (ed. 1860).

In Ohio, the statute of uses was never in force, and if trusts or uses are raised by the form of conveyance they remain unexecuted, and mere equitable estates, cognizable only in courts of equity. Williams v. Presbyterian Church, 1 Ohio St. 497; Helfensteine v. Garrard, 7 Ham. 276; Foster v. Dennison, 9 Ohio, 124; Walker, Am. Law, 124; Thompson v. Gibson, 2 Ohio, 439.

In Indiana, the statute of uses is enacted in substance. Rev. Stat. (1843) p. 447; Linville v. Golding, 11 Ind. 374; Nelson v. Davis, 35 Ind. 474.

In Illinois, the statute is very similar to the statute of Virginia. 2 Stat. (1858) p. 959; Witham v. Brooner, 63 Ill. 344.

In Michigan, the laws are similar to the statutes of New York, by which all uses and trusts are abolished. 2 Compt. Laws (1857), p. 824; Ready v. Kearsley, 14 Mich. 228.

In Missouri, the statute of uses is re-enacted in substance. Rev. Stat. (1845) p. 218; Guest v. Farley, 19 Miss. 147.

In Iowa, uses are recognized, and deeds may operate under the statute of uses. Pierson v. Armstrong, 1 Iowa, 282.

In Wisconsin, the statute is very similar to the statute of New York, and all uses and trusts are abolished except those specially provided for. Rev. Stat. (1858) p. 529.

In Minnesota, deeds may be in form of bargain and sale, which operate under the statute.

In California, conveyances originated under the old Spanish law, and probably the statute of uses has little or no influence upon the law of the State ought not to be considered as abolished, in the absence of express provisions to that effect.

In Kansas, a conveyance to A. to the use of B. vests the estate at once in B., by force of the statute. Bayer v. Cockerill, 3 Kan. 292.

§ 300. The statute of uses at the time when it was passed had an immense effect upon the tenures of the realm. Many interests in land which had been merely equitable, and cognizable only according to the rules of equity, became at once legal interests, cognizable in courts of common law. Many persons who were seized of estates to uses, and who only could sue or be sued at law in relation to the same, ceased at once to have any title either at law or equity. Although it is probable that it was the intent of the statute to convert all uses or trusts into legal estates, 1 yet the convenience to the subject of being able to keep the legal title to an estate in one person, while the beneficial interest should be in another, was too great to be given up altogether, and courts of equity were astute in finding reasons to withdraw a conveyance from the operation of the statute.² Three principal reasons or rules of construction were laid down, whereby conveyances were excepted from such operation: first, where a use was limited upon a use; second, where a copyhold or leasehold estate, or personal property, was limited to uses; third, where such powers or duties were imposed with the estate upon a donee to uses that it was necessary that he should continue to hold the legal title in order to perform his duty or execute the power.3 In all of these three instances, courts both of law and equity held that the statute did not execute the use, but that such use remained, as it was before the statute, a mere equitable interest to be administered in a court of equity. These uses, which the statute did not execute, were called trusts, and justify Mr. Cruise's language that "a trust is a use not executed by the statute of 27 Henry VIII." The statute may execute the use in regard to one party and not as to another in the same deed; for example, where land is conveyed to A. in trust for B. for life, contingent remainder to C., the statute may execute the life estate in B., and still leave the fee in A. for the preservation of the remainder.

² Mr. Cruise thought that the strict construction put upon the statute by the judges in a great measure defeated its effect. Id. Mr. Blackstone is of a similar opinion. ² Black. Com. 336. And Lord Mansfield, in Goodright v. Wells, ² Doug. 771, said that it was not the liberality of courts of equity, but the absurd narrowness of courts of law, resting on literal distinctions, which in a manner repealed the statute of uses, and drove cestuis que trust into equity.

⁸ Hill on Trustees, 230. See § 735, a; Farr v. Gilreath, 23 S. C. 511; Preachers' Aid Society v. England, 106 Ill. 129 (referring to the text). Where an estate is conveyed to A. for the use of B., and nothing more is said, the title is immediately vested in B. by the statute, even though express words of trust are used; but if certain duties are imposed on A., such as collection of rents, making investments, &c., which require that

§ 301. The first two of these rules originated in a strict construction of the technical words used in the statute, which are, "where any person is seized of any lands or to the use of another." If A. grants lands to B. for the use of C. for the use of D., B. was said to be "seized" of the lands to the use of C.; and the statute immediately executed the use in C. and gave him the legal title. But C. was said not to be "seized" of lands to the use of D., but only of a use; therefore the use in C. for D. remained, as it was before the statute, unexecuted.2 It remained, therefore, a mere equitable estate or trust cognizable in a court of equity alone. Hence the maxim that a use could not be limited on a use; not that such second use was void, but the statute did not execute it, and it remained a mere equitable interest. Thus, if lands come to A. and his heirs by feoffment, grant, devise, or other assurance, to the use of B. and his heirs, to the use of C. and his heirs; or to the use of C. in fee or for life, with remainders over; or to B. and his heirs in trust to permit C. and D. to receive the rents, — in all these cases the statute exe-

he should keep the estate, the trust will be an active one, and the statute will not execute it. Kellogg r. Hale, 108 Ill. 164; Howard r. Henderson, 18 S. C. 189; Hooberry v. Harding, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 392; Henderson v. Hill, 9 Lea (Tenn.), 25.

cutes the first use only in B. and his heirs, and the legal estate is vested in him, as trustee for the parties beneficially interested.¹

§ 302. So where lands are conveyed by covenant to stand seized, or by bargain and sale, or by appointment under a power, to A. and his heirs, to the use of B. and his heirs, the legal estate will vest in A., and B. will take only an equitable interest; for these conveyances do not operate to transfer the seizin to A.² They merely raise a use which the statute executes in him, and stops there. Thus, in a deed of bargain and sale, the operation is as follows: the consideration and the bargain raise a use in the bargainee which the statute executes; and thus, under a deed of bargain and sale, the bargainee obtains both the use and the legal title. But no use can be limited and executed on a use.

The statute of uses in some of the States, as Virginia, speaks of uses raised by deed. Consequently, it is said that uses raised by devise are not executed, but remain trusts. Judge Lomax, however, denies this construction. 1 Lomax, Dig. 188, 196. In New York, the uses named in the text would be executed in the cestui que use by the statute of uses and trusts, and he would have the entire legal title.

² Johnson v. Cary, 16 Johns. 304; 1 Cruise, Dig. tit. 12, c. 1, § 9; Gilb. on Uses, 67, 347. Mr. Blackstone condemned this rule. 2 Black. Com. 336. And Lord Mansfield said that the rule grew up from the absurd narrowness of courts of common law. Goodright v. Wells, 2 Doug. 771. And Mr. Greenleaf doubts if the rule that a use cannot be limited upon a use would be generally acted upon in the United States, especially in those States which have declared by statute what formalities shall alone be necessary to pass estates. Green. Cruise, Dig. tit. 12, c. 1, § 4, n. (vol. i. p. 380); and see Davis v. Hayden, 9 Mass. 514; Flint v. Sheldon, 13 Mass. 443; Marshall v. Fisk, 6 Mass. 24.

Hence, if A. conveys land to B., to the use of C., by a deed of bargain and sale, the statute will not execute the use in C., but the legal title will remain in B. subject to a trust for C., to be administered in equity; for the consideration and bargain only raise a use in B., which the statute executes, but the use in B. for C. is in the nature of a use limited upon a use, which the statute does not execute.¹

§ 303. Another technical construction of the word "seized" withdrew all uses or trusts created in copyhold or leasehold estates, and all chattel interests and personal property, from the operation of the statute. The judges resolved in the 22d of Elizabeth that the word "seized" was only applicable to freeholds; consequently no one could be said to be "seized" of a leasehold or other chattel interests in real estate, or of personal property. Therefore, if A. gave lease holds or personal property to B. for the use of C., the statute did not execute the use, but B. took the legal title in trust for C., which trust was not recognized at law, but only in equity.² So tenants by curtesy or in dower cannot stand

¹ The question has been raised in Massachusetts whether land can be conveyed by deed of bargain and sale to one for the use of another, and create anything more than a trust for the last beneficiary. Stearns v. Palmer, 10 Met. 32; Norton v. Leonard, 12 Pick. 152. The general doctrine stated in the text is fully admitted, but it is claimed in answer that the deeds in general use, although in the general form of deeds of bargain and sale, are in fact, by force of the statutes, equivalent to grants or feoffments, and it is said that if deeds will not operate in the form in which they are drawn, they shall be construed to operate according to the intention of the parties. Higbee v. Rice, 5 Mass. 352; Pray v. Peiree, 7 Mass. 381; Knox v. Jenks, id. 494; Russell v. Coffin, 8 Pick. 143. The question was left undecided in Norton v. Leonard and Stearns v. Palmer, ut supra, but see the remarks of Chief Justice Dana, in Thatcher v. Omans, 3 Pick. 528. The same question may arise in other States, where their deeds are in form deeds of bargain and sale.

² Anv. § 6; Dyer, 369 a; Doe v. Routledge, 2 Cowp. 709; Sympson v. Turner, 1 Eq. Ab. 383; 2 Wooddes, Lect. pp. 295, 297; 1 Cruise, Dig. p. 354, and tit. 12, c. 1; Gilb. Ten. 182; Gilb. Uses, 67 n.; Rice v. Burnett, 1 Spear, Eq. 579; Joor v. Hodges, Spear, 593; Pyron v. Mood, 2 McMullan, 293. In some States, the statutes use the word "possessed" instead of the word "seized," in which case both real and personal estate and seized to a use, for they are in by act of law in consideration of marriage and not in privity of estate; but in equity they would be held to execute any trusts charged upon their interests or estates.¹

§ 304. From these instances, it will be seen that, in order to create a trust, it is necessary to prevent the legal estate from vesting in the cestui que trust, and it is necessary that not only the legal title, but the primary use, should vest in the trustee. Any form of conveyancing that will effect this, notwithstanding the statute, will create a trust; as if a grant or devise be made to a trustee and his heirs, to the use of the trustee and his heirs, or unto and to the use of the trustee and his heirs, the title and the primary use will both be vested in the trustee; and although there is a trust or use over to some other person, yet it will not be effected by the statute, it not being the primary use.²

§ 305. The third rule of construction is less technical, and relates to special or active trusts, which were never within the purview of the statute.³ Therefore if any agency, duty, or power be imposed on the trustee, as by a limitation to a trustee and his heirs to pay the rents,⁴ or to convey the chattel interests would be transferred to the uses raised. Tabb v. Baird, 3 Call, 482. But this construction is controverted by Judge Lomax. 1 Lomax, Dig. 196.

the words in the sentence, and the priority of the words, and the consideration whether the instrument is a deed or will, will have a material bearing upon the decision. Mr. Jarman and Mr. Lewin suggest that the repugnancy would be obviated in such a case by construing the instrument to give an election or discretion to the trustees.

§ 307. Although the direction may be for the trustees to permit and suffer another person to receive the rents, vet if any duty is imposed upon the trustees expressly or by implication, the legal estate will remain in them unaffected by the statute. As if the direction is to permit Λ , to receive the net 3 rents, or the clear 4 rents, the trustees take the legal estate, the words net and clear implying that the trustees are to pay all charges, and pay over the balance. So if, in addition to a devise in trust to preserve contingent remainders, there is a direction to permit A. to receive the rents and profits; 5 and so if trustees are to pay certain life annuities out of the rents, and subject to those annuities to permit and suffer certain persons to receive the rents and profits. 6 So if the trustees are to exercise any control, 7 as if there is a trust to permit and suffer a woman to receive the rents, and that her receipts with the approbation of one of the trustees should be good.8

there is some other implication that they are to exercise an active trust for the purpose. (a) Nor does the legal estate vest in the trustees where the charge of the debts and legacies upon the real estate is contingent upon the insufficiency of any other fund, for in that case the trustees do not take an immediate vested interest; 2 but if the charge is made in aid of any other fund without contingency, the trustees will take immediately a legal estate.³ So if the trustees are to demise the estate for a term, at rack-rent or otherwise, the term must come out of their interest, and the legal estate must be in them. 4 If, however, the instrument confers by construction upon the trustees a mere power of leasing, a good legal term may be created by the exercise of the power and without the legal estate in them. 5 So if a testator give his trustees a simple power of disposing of his estates, as that his executors or trustees, or other persons, shall sell or let or mortgage, or otherwise dispose of his estate, to pay his debts or legacies or annuities, or other charges, or where he directs his executors to raise money, no estate vests in the trustees, executors, or other persons, but it descends to the heir or the person to whom it is directed to go in the will, until it is wanted for the purposes named, and then it is to the use of the trustees in trust for another; for the statute only executes the first use.¹

§ 310. If an estate be given to trustees upon a trust for a married woman "for her sole and separate use," and "her receipts alone to be sufficient discharges," or if the trust be to "permit and suffer a feme covert to receive the rents to her separate use," the legal estate will vest in the trustees, and the statute will not execute it in the cestui que trust.2 In all these cases the court will give this construction to the gift, if possible; 3 for if the statute should execute the estate in the married woman, certain rights would arise to the husband which might defeat the intention of the donor.4 These are not the only words that will prevent the estate from vesting. Any words that show an intent to create an estate or a trust, for the sole and separate use of a married woman, will have the same effect.⁵ And a woman in contemplation of marriage may deed lands to another to stand seized to the sole use of the grantor, and the statute will not affect the transaction, but a trust will be created, as otherwise the intent of the parties would be defeated. But it is said that if an estate is "released by deed" to A. and his heirs "upon a trust" for "the sole and separate use of the releasor," and no active duty is imposed upon the trustee in respect to the sole and separate estate, a common-law court will reject the sole and separate use as an estate unknown to the law; and it has been held in such case that the statute vested the estate in the cestui que trust.

§ 310 a. But in order that an estate given to the sole and separate use of a woman may vest and remain in the trustees, it is necessary that she should be married or in immediate contemplation of marriage. For if she is unmarried, or the estate is not given in the immediate contemplation of her marriage, it will vest in her at once by the statute of uses; or she will have the right to call for the execution of the trust at once, by a conveyance of the legal estate to her by the trustee, unless there are some other provisions in the will or purposes of the trust which render it an active trust, and the continuance of the legal estate in the trustees necessary for its purposes.2 It is not necessary that the contemplation of her immediate marriage should appear upon the face of the will or settlement, if in fact an immediate marriage was contemplated, and such fact was probably known to the testator or settlor.3 In such cases the trust will continue during the coverture of the woman, and at the decease of her husband she will have the right to call for a conveyance of the property as upon a termination of the trust.4 A conveyance "in trust for B., wife of C., and her heirs and assigns forever," creates a trust during B.'s coverture and a legal estate afterwards. If C. dies, the legal estate is in B. and her heirs, though B. subsequently marries again.¹

§ 311. As stated, chattel interests in land and personal property were never within the statute of uses, and the legal title to them will remain in the trustee, until the purposes of the trust are accomplished, and until the possession of the property is in some way transferred to the person entitled to the use, or the last use.² But where the trust is at an end, the title is in the person entitled to the last use;³ and a mere delivery, without other formality, gives such person full and absolute control of the property.⁴ Until such delivery the law cannot recognize any equitable interests in the property.⁵ If the cestui que trust is an infant, it is said that the trust will not be executed by delivering the property to him, because he is incapable of assenting to such transfer.⁶

§ 312. In all cases where an estate is given to one for the use of another, in such manner that the statute of uses steps in and executes the estate in the cestui que trust, the statute executes in the cestui que trust only the estate that the first donce or trustee takes; that is, the statute executes or transfers the exact estate given to the trustee. Therefore, if A. give an estate to B. and his heirs for the use of C. and his heirs, the statute will execute the fee-simple in C. But if

A. gives an estate to B. for the use of C. and his heirs, the statute will execute only an estate for the life of A. in C.; for that is the extent of the estate conveyed to B. by a deed in that form; that is, by a deed that has no words of inheritance in B.1 While this is the rule in respect to estates which the statute executes, a very different rule applies to estates upon a trust or use not executed by the statute. In these cases, the extent or quantity of the estate taken by the trustee is determined, not by the circumstance that words of inheritance in the trustee are or are not used in the deed or will, but by the intent of the parties. And the intent of the parties is determined by the scope and extent of the trust. Therefore, the extent of the legal interest of a trustee in an estate given to him in trust is measured, not by words of inheritance or otherwise, but by the object and extent of the trust upon which the estate is given.2 On this principle, two rules of construction have been adopted by courts: first, "Wherever a trust is created, a legal estate, sufficient for the purposes of the trust, shall, if possible, be implied in the trustee, whatever may be the limitation in the instrument, where a testator gave to a married woman the rents and profits of certain lands to be paid her by his executors, it was held to be a devise of the land itself to the executors, although nothing was given them in terms, to enable them to carry out the purposes of the trust. § 314. In the same manner, and for the same reasons, courts have enlarged or extended estates given to trustees. Thus, if A. gives an estate to B. without words of limitation, it is an estate for the life of A.; but if A. gives an estate to B. to pay certain annuities to persons named, for their lives, the trustee takes an estate for the lives of the several annuitants.3

§ 315. not by the mere power. Where it is possible that the trustees may be under the necessity of exercising a power over the fee, as by mortgage, a gift to them of the fee will not be cut down; 2 and the rule is that all the trusts which trustees must execute are to be executed out of the estate given them.3 Lord Talbot said that it was wholly a matter of intention whether the trustee should take a fee or not; 4 hence, in other cases, it has been said that if no intention appeared upon the face of the will that the trustees were to take anything beyond what was necessary for the execution of the trust, the estate, though limited to them and their heirs, would be cut down to the limit of the trust. 5 So trustees may take only a chattel interest in real estate, although limited to them and their heirs, as where they are to hold it in trust only for a short time to pay debts and legacies, and convey it to the cestui que trust when he comes of age or at a certain time;6 and this construction will be much stronger if the fee is not limited to them. trustees will prevail where the limitation is to them and their heirs, to their use and behoof forever, whether it is contained in a deed or will. Where a gift was made to one in trust for his wife for life, and to her heirs forever, subject to her husband's curtesy, the trustee took an estate for the life of his wife only, and at her death the trust ceased.²

§ 317. Where a testator gave all his real and personal estate to trustees, "their executors, administrators, and assigns," in trust to pay several annuities, sums, and legacies, on the deficiency of the personal estates out of the rents, issues, and profits arising from the real estate, and gave the residue over, Lord Hardwicke held that if the annual reception of the rents and profits would satisfy the purposes of the trust, the trustees would take only a chattel interest in the real estate; but, as the land must be sold for the payment of the legacies, the trustees took the fee.3 The court, however, is always reluctant to enlarge an estate in trustees beyond the terms of the gift; and it will not be done unless it is necessary for the execution of the trust.4 Where it is plain that the trustees are to pay all charges, debts, legacies, annuities, or other moneys out of the rents and profits of the estate, and no anticipation of the income is necessary or contemplated for that purpose, they will take a chattel interest, or a term for years necessary for the purpose, and not the legal inheritance; 5 and if the testator use an inartificial word, as that the trustees are to lend the estate, they will not take a fee. A trust to preserve contingent remainders, without limitation to heirs, will not be enlarged; for the trust does not require an estate of inheritance.²

§ 318. If, however, the subject-matter of the gift to trustees is personal estate, the whole legal interest will vest in them without words of limitation. They may generally dispose of personal estate absolutely, being compelled to account for it.³

§ 319. In England, a distinction is kept up between limitations to trustees in wills and deeds. Thus it is said that in wills there is more room for construction to ascertain and carry into effect the intention of testators, and that in deeds the rules of property are carried into effect with more strictness. So it is said, that if in a deed an estate is given to a trustee and his heirs, there is no power to abridge the estate on the ground that the purposes of the trust do not require a fee in the trustees; and that, on the other hand, when an estate is given by deed to a trustee in trust without words of inheritance, there is no authority to enlarge the estate in the trustee because the purposes of the trust seem to require a larger estate. There is a very respectable amount of authority, even in England, that an estate given to trustees and their heirs in trust, by a deed, may be restricted to an estate for the life of another, where the purposes of the trust can

Smith, 1 Sneed, 304, held that when personalty was limited to trustees, their heirs and executors, in trust for a married woman for life, and after her death to be equally divided among her children or to be conveyed to her children, the trustee took an estate for her life only, and that at her death the trust ceased. These cases, however, are not consistent with principle or authority, and probably would not be followed.

all be answered by such an estate in the trustee. In the cases sustaining the power to abridge the legal operation of the words of inheritance in a deed, there were some further limitations of the estate, either to the trustees or to third persons, inconsistent with the idea of a fee in the trustees.² The authorities, however, greatly preponderate, that courts cannot look to the equitable interests given or created by a deed, in order to determine whether the trustee under it takes a fee or not, if there are plain words of inheritance in Lord Eldon said, that it appeared to him very difficult to apply the doctrine to a deed, and he refused thus to cut down an estate.3 While there is this conflict of authority upon the point, whether an estate given in fee by deed to trustees can be abridged to the extent of the trust, there is said to be no authority in England that an estate given by a deed to trustees without words of inheritance can be enlarged to suit the purposes of the trust; 4 although there is one expression by Lord Hardwicke that such enlargement is within the power of the court when the circumstances require it.5

§ 320. In the United States, the distinction between deeds and wills, in respect to the trustees' estate, has not been kept up; and the general rule is, that, whether words of inheritance in the trustee are or are not in the deed, the trustee will take an estate adequate to the execution of the trust, and no more nor less. Courts will abridge the estate where words of inheritance are used, if the execution of the trust does not require a fee; and so they will enlarge the estate if no words of inheritance are used in a deed. In examining the cases, however, where a trust ceases upon the death of a tenant for life, or upon the death of a person for whom the property was held in trust, care must be taken that this principle is not confounded with another. Thus, where an estate is given to trustees and their heirs in trust to pay the income to A. during her life, and at her decease to hold the same for the use of her children or her heirs, or for the use of other persons named, the trust ceases upon the death of A. for the reason that it remains no longer an active trust; the statute of uses immediately executes the use in those who are limited to take it after the death of A., and the trustees cease to have anything in the estate, not because the court has abridged their estate to the extent of the trust, but because, having the fee or legal estate, the statute of uses has executed it in the cestui que trust.2 But where the operation of the statute of uses does not put an end to the trust,

§ 321. As a general rule, the legal estate in the hands of a trustee has at common law precisely the same properties, characteristics, and incidents, as if the trustee were the absolute beneficial owner. The legal title vests in him, together with all the appurtenances and all the covenants that run with the land. The trustee may sell and devise it, or mortgage it, or it may be taken on execution. It may be forfeited, and it will escheat on failure of heirs, and so it will descend to heirs on the death of the trustee. All these properties and incidents attach to the legal estate at common law, whether in the hands of a trustee or of an absolute owner; but these incidents do not generally interfere with the proper execution of the trust, for all conveyances and all incumbrances made or imposed upon the estate by the trustee, for other purposes than those of the trust, or in breach of the trust, are utterly disregarded by a court of equity, whatever may be the effect of such conveyances or incumbrances in a court of common law.² And as the trustee may in a court of law, as a general rule, deal with the legal estate in his hands, as if he was the absolute owner, so the cestui que trust in a court of equity may deal with the equitable estate in him: he is the beneficial and substantial owner, and in the absence of any disability, — that is, if he is sui juris, — he may sell and dispose of it; and any legal conveyance of it will have in equity the same operation upon the equitable estate as a similar conveyance of the legal estate would have at law upon the legal estate. 3 (a) While a trust for the general benefit of one sui juris, not confined to maintenance, may create a transmissible interest, yet a trust for the maintenance of an imbecile son will not create a transmissible interest, although the will contains a limitation over to the issue of such son.4 In case of a trust for the use of a married woman as if she were sole, the husband has no control over the property, and cannot of himself lease or otherwise dispose of it.5

CHAP. XI.] DOWER AND CURTESY IN EQUITABLE ESTATES. [§ 323.

§ 322. The legal estate in the hands of a trustee was subject at common law to dower and curtesy; 1 but, as those who take in dower or curtesy take by operation of law, they are subject to the same equities as the original trustee; therefore, if the widow of a trustee should take dower in a trust estate, she would take her dower subject to the same trusts that the estate was under in the hands of her husband. It would thus be of no benefit to her; and it is now understood to be the equitable rule, that a widow has no dower in the lands held by her husband as trustee, and the same observations apply to the right of curtesy in trust estates. 2 (a) If, however, the equitable estate meets the legal estate in the same holder, the equitable merges in the legal estate, and dower and curtesy will attach; 3 and so they will attach so far as there is a beneficial interest in the trustee. 4

§ 323. While speaking upon this subject, it may be said that, until lately, in England, the widow of a cestui que trust had no dower in his equitable estate, or his equitable fee in lands.⁵ A widow was not dowable of a use, and lands were frequently conveyed to uses to defeat the right of dower.⁶

Thus, if a man before marriage conveyed his lands to trustees upon trust for himself and his heirs in fee, or if after marriage he purchased lands, and took the conveyance to a trustee upon a trust for himself and his heirs, his wife had no right of dower. 1 But if lands were settled on trustees upon a trust for a woman and her heirs in fee, her husband was entitled to his curtesy.2 This anomaly grew up from an attempt to give to equitable estates the same incidents that belong to legal estates; but when it was proposed to assign dower to a widow out of her husband's equitable estate, it was found that it would disarrange so many titles and estates that the attempt was abandoned. The same inconvenience did not arise in allowing curtesy to a husband, for the reason that a wife could not convey her equitable interests without her husband joining in the act, and thus, to allow him curtesy would not affect titles to any considerable extent.3 But by a late statute a wife is now dowable in equity of all the lands in which her husband dies possessed of a beneficiary interest.4

§ 324. The general rule in the United States is, that a wife is dowable in equity in all lands to which the husband had a complete ⁵ equitable title at the time of his death. ⁶ (a) This

The husband also in most States has curtesy in the equitable estates of his wife. But the wife must be actually in possession of her equitable interest: a mere right not in possession is not enough to entitle the husband to curtesy. But the husband's curtesy will not be defeated by the negligence of the trustee, as where money is directed to be laid in land in such manner that the husband would have been entitled to his curtesy, and the trustee neglected to invest the money during the life of the wife, the husband was held to be entitled to his curtesy. Nor will a trust for the separate use of the wife exclude the husband's curtesy, if at her decease the estate is to go to her heirs. 2

§ 325. At common law if a person holding land committed treason or felony, he forfeited his land to the crown; and if he died without heirs, the land escheated to the crown or to his superior lord. Exactly the same incidents applied to land held in trust for another, if the trustee committed a treason or felony, or died without heirs.3 This rule of law has been changed in England by statute.4 At the present day the land either will not be forfeited or escheat, or the crown or superior lord will take it subject to the same equities under which the trustee held it. In the United States, either the land would not be forfeited or escheat, by reason of the failure or incapacity of the trustee or his heirs, or the State would hold it, subject to all the equities it was under in the hands of the trustee. It might not go to the State, for the reason that, if trustees are wanting, courts will appoint new trustees; and if, for any reason, the trust estate should vest in the State, care would be taken that all the rights of the cestui que trust should be protected. statutes in most of the States determining the rights of the cestui que trust in such cases.

§ 326. The trustee is so far clothed with the legal title and all its incidents, that he must perform all the duties of the holder of the legal estate.¹

§ 327. Before the statute of uses, the estate of the cestui que use was not forfeited for crime, and did not escheat upon failure of heirs; but the feoffee to uses held the estate absolutely as his own.2 And the same rule was afterwards followed in regard to trusts.3 Although it was enacted by statute that the cestui que use or cestui que trust should forfeit his equitable interest upon conviction for treason, 4 vet the law never went further; and if the cestui que trust committed a felony, so that he could no longer claim his equitable rights, the trustee continued to hold the lands for his own use discharged of the trusts.⁵ And so it was held, after great debate in Burgess v. Wheat, that if the cestui que trust left no heirs, the trust estate of inheritance did not escheat, but that the trustee thenceforth held the estate discharged of the trust.6 This case has been doubted,7 but it has been followed as the law. 8 (a) This is upon the principle, that there is no want of a tenant to the land, the trustee being clothed with all the rights of ownership against all the world except the cestui que trust, and those claiming under him. But this principle does not apply to chattels, where there can be no tenant, nor to leaseholds, nor to an equity of redemption. In the United States, trustees would hold personal property subject to the right of the State as ultima hares, in case the cestui que trust died without heirs or next of kin; and it is conceived that they would hold real estate under the same rule.

§ 328. It is the duty of the trustee to defend and protect the title to the trust estate; and, as the legal title is in him, he alone can sue and be sued in a court of law; the cestui que trust, the absolute owner of the estate in equity, is regarded in law as a stranger.⁴ The rule is carried to the extent that the grantee of the trustee can alone maintain an action upon the legal title, although the conveyance to him was a breach of the trust.⁵ To protect himself, the trustee must defend the title if he is sued. It is his duty to give the cestui que trust notice of a suit hostile to his interests, and to detend the action in good faith. To act otherwise would be a breach of trust. A trustee may also maintain an action for any trespass upon the land; but if the cestui que trust is in the actual possession of it, he may maintain an action for any injury done to his possession.3 If, however, the trust is terminated by operation of law or otherwise, and the property has vested in the cestui que trust, he may after that time maintain an action upon the title; 4 and so if there has been a conveyance or surrender by the trustees to the cestui que trust, or a presumption of a surrender from the fact that the purposes of the trust are all accomplished. 6(a) If the trustee is in possession, he must sue for all injuries to the possession, and he is the proper person to maintain the claim for damages for flowing the land under the mill acts, or for taking it for railroad purposes, turnpikes, or public highways.7 (b) In Pennsylvania, however, the action of ejectment is an equitable action, and the cestui que trust may maintain the suit if he is entitled to possession, or it may be maintained by the trustee. 8 (c) In a few States there are statutes or codes which enact that parties beneficially interested in the subject-matter of the suit shall be made the parties' plaintiffs; but the right or duty of trustees, or persons holding the legal title in a fiduciary capacity, to sue is generally provided for. Merely nominal trustees, as officers of a town or parish, cannot sue in their own name.²

§ 329. Whether the trustees are entitled to the possession, control, and management of real estate, as against the cestui que trust, depends upon the whole scope of the settlement, and the nature of the duties which the trustees are required to perform. A fund in trust for the sole use of a person, with power to dispose of the fund by will, does not give the cestui a right to recover possession of the fund from the trustee.³ If the entire interest is vested in the trustees, and they are to manage the property, keep it insured, and pay taxes, premiums, annuities, and other charges out of the income, the court will imply that the trustees are to have the possession, and will not take it from them, unless there is some very clear intention expressed to control such directions.⁴ (a)

And the trustees may purchase whatever is necessary, and cultivate the land instead of renting it. If the cestui que trust, or tenant for life, is a female, the court will continue the possession in the trustees for her protection in case of marriage. 2 So, if the trustees themselves have a beneficial interest, or a reversion or remainder after the death of the tenant for life, the court will continue the possession in them. 3 (a) If, however, the plain intention of the settlement is that the cestui que trust is to have the possession, then all other considerations must give way; as, if it is plain that the settlor intended the estate to be a place of residence for the cestui que trust, the intention must be carried out.4 If the tenant for life takes a legal estate, subject to a charge, he will of course be entitled to the possession, so long as he discharges all incumbrances thus put upon the estate.⁵ But if the tenant for life allows the annuities or other charges to fall in arrears, the trustees must take possession for the security of the annuitants, and must continue the possession until ample security is made for the future. 6 Security may be required in any case where the tenant for life is let into possession.7

negotiable paper; therefore, substituted trustees cannot sue upon a contract made with their predecessors in the trust, but the suit must be in the names of the parties with whom it was made, for the benefit of the estate. Generally, all notices and tenders 2 must be made to the trustees; and they must use all due diligence in prosecuting suits in favor of the estate and of the cestui que trust, and they must take the proper care in defending such suits; and if appeals are taken from decrees or judgments in favor of the estate, or of the cestui que trust, they must duly support the rights of the cestui que trust in whatever court the case may be carried.3 If the cestui que trust brings an action in the name of the trustee, the trustee may insist upon indemnity against the costs.4 If the trustee collusively releases such suit without the consent of the party beneficially interested, the court will set aside the release. 5 So, if a trustee discharges a debt or mortgage without payment, the court would set aside the discharge; 6 and if a trustee refuses to bring a suit, or to allow his name to be used, equity will compel him to take such steps as the interest of the estate and of the cestui que trust requires. In all such suits in the name of the trustee, a debt due from the cestui que trust cannot be set off.8 (a)

If a trustee sue for matters pertaining to the trust estate, a private debt due from the trustee cannot be set off. A trustee cannot set off against the assignee of the cestui a debt for money lent by him to the cestui before his appointment as trustee. ²

§ 331. The trustee, being liable for a breach of the trust, if he permits any misapplication of the funds should of course have the possession and control of all personal property. So all the duties and privileges which attach to such property pertain to him. If the property consists of stocks in corporations, he may attend corporate meetings, vote, and hold office by virtue of such stock.3 If the trustee die, the personal property devolves upon his executor or administrator until the appointment of a new trustee, and such executor or administrator has a right to vote upon stocks at corporate meetings.4 So the trustee is rated or assessed for taxes, and must see that the taxes upon the trust property are paid. The statutes of the various States determine the localities where such property shall be assessed: real estate is generally assessed in the parish, town, or county where it is situated; and personal property, either in the place of the domicil of the trustee or of the cestui que trust, as the statutes of a State may direct. In the absence of a statute, the law would look upon the trustee as the owner, and assess the property at his domicil.5

§ 332. The trustee must prove a debt against a bankrupt debtor of the estate, as he is the person to receive the dividend; but in special cases the concurrence of the cestui que trust may be required, as where he may have a right to receive the payment. 2

§ 333. In England, trustees had at common law the right to vote for local officers and for members of parliament, by virtue of the qualification conferred upon them by the trust property, if it was sufficient in amount. Statutes have, however, changed the common law, and given the right in most cases to the cestui que trust. In the United States, property qualifications of voters are generally abrogated.³

§ 334. Trustees of real or personal estate may, at law, sell, convey, assign, or incumber the same, as if they were the beneficial owners, 4 and each of several trustees may exercise all his rights of ownership. If the trustees are jointtenants, each may receive the rents,5 and each may sever the joint-tenancy by a conveyance of his share,6 and each may collect the dividends on stocks, and on the death of one, the survivor may sell the whole estate. The general power of a trustee to sell and convey the estate is co-extensive with his ownership of the legal title; and this general power over the legal title is entirely distinct from the execution of a special power given in respect to the sale of an estate. Though the trustee may thus sell, even in breach of the trust, a conveyance without consideration will not injure the cestui que trust; as the grantee, who is a volunteer, will hold upon the same trusts as the trustee held, and if the purchaser for a valuable consideration have notice of the trust he will still hold the estate upon trust.8 In New York, however, a statute has converted the trustee's ownership of the legal title into a power, or power in trust; ¹ and where a trust is expressly created by a written instrument, every sale in breach or contravention of the trust is declared to be absolutely void, even if the sale is under the sanction of a court. ² Whether a trustee intends to convey an estate is frequently a question made upon conveyances, and it has been determined that a general assignment of all the trustee's estates, for the benefit of his creditors, does not pass estates held by him in trust. ⁸

§ 335. As among the incidents of the trustee's legal title in the trust estate is his power to sell it, so he may devise it by his last will and testament. The principal question that here arises is, whether the words of the will of a trustee embrace estates held by him in trust, for a trust estate will not in all cases pass by the same words as would pass the beneficial ownership; for wherever an estate passes, not by operation of law, but by the intention of any one, it is necessary to find the intention from the instrument under the circumstances in which it is made; and an intention to devise a trust estate is not so readily inferred as an intention to devise a beneficial estate. If the trust is only a personal one, the donor using no words requiring continuance of the trust beyond the life of the immediate trustee, the estate cannot be devised by the trustee, but ceases at his death.⁴

§ 336. An assignment in general words by a trustee of all his estate for his creditors will not pass a trust estate, for the reason that the court will not presume that the trustee intended to commit a breach of trust; 1 for a similar reason it has at times been said that a devise of all a trustee's estates in general words would not operate upon estates that he held in trust, unless there appeared a positive intention that they should so pass.2 The question was finally considered by Lord Eldon; and after a careful examination, the rule was declared to be, that "where the will contained words large enough, and there was no expression authorizing a narrower construction, nor any such disposition of the estate as it was unlikely a testator would make of property not his own, in such case the trust property would pass." 2 Mr. Hill states the rule, "that a general devise of real estate will pass estates vested in the testator as trustee or mortgagee, unless a contrary intention can be collected from the expressions of the will, or from the purposes or limitations to which the devised lands are subjected." 4 This general rule is acted upon in the United States.5

§ 337. Notwithstanding the rule, that a trust estate will pass by general words in a devise, unless there is something in the will to show a contrary intention, there has continued to be a conflict of opinion upon the propriety of the rule, and more conflict upon its application. But a charge of debts, legacies, and annuities upon the estate devised, or a power

given to sell it, is an indication that the testator did not intend that the trust estate should pass under the words of his devise, for the reason that he could not have intended that his devisee should do that with the estate which would be a breach of trust. So, if there is a limitation of the estate in strict settlement, with a great number of complicated conditions, contingencies, remainders, and limitations, it will not be presumed that a trustee intended to devise a dry trust in a legal title upon such terms, and the estate will not pass under general words; 2 so if the devise is to A. in tail with remainder over in strict settlement; 3 so a devise to a testator's nephews and nieces in equal shares as tenants in common is to a class not ascertained at the date of the will, and will not by general words pass a trust estate. So a devise to a woman for her separate use, (a) imports a beneficial use, and not a dry legal estate, and the trust estate would not pass to her under general words.⁵ But a devise to a woman, her heirs and assigns, to her and their own sole and absolute use, passes the estate for the reason that there is nothing inconsistent with their holding the absolute use in trust;6 and a devise to A. and B. to be equally divided between them, as tenants in common, and their respective heirs, will § 338. The interest of a mortgagee in fee in the mortgaged land stands upon a somewhat different ground. The mortgagee has a debt due him which is the principal thing, and the mortgage is a beneficial interest in the land as security for the debt. This interest generally goes with the debt. And mortgage estates will pass by a general devise, notwithstanding a charge of debts and legacies, if the intent appears, to pass them as securities for money. But if there are special trusts for sale, or other special charges annexed to the devise, inconsistent with the idea of holding the estate as security for money, it would not pass under a general devise.

intend by his devise to commit a breach of the trust. It is simply a question, whether the testator has devised, or can or should devise, a trust estate, or whether he should allow it to descend to his heir or legal representatives. It was said in Cook v. Crawford, that it was not lawful for the trustee to dispose of the estate, but that he ought to permit it to descend; that a devise did not differ from a deed inter vivos; and that it was only a post mortem conveyance. 1 On the other hand, it is said that there is a wide distinction between a conveyance and a devise. That during the trustee's lifetime there was a personal trust and confidence in his discretion, which he could not delegate; that the settlor could have reposed no confidence in the heir, for he could not know beforehand who the heir would be; that if the estate was allowed to descend, it might become vested in married women, infants, bankrupts, or persons out of the jurisdiction of the court; and that therefore it could not be a breach of trust for a trustee to devise the estate by will to persons capable of executing it, or of transferring it to other trustees.² (a) Mr. Lewin concludes from these observations, that whether the devise of the trust estate is proper or not depends upon the circumstances of each case. If the heir is a fit person to execute the trust, the testator ought not to intercept the descent and pass the legal estate to another, and especially not to an unfit person. In such case the estate of the testator might be liable for the costs of restoring the trust estate to its proper channel or to proper trustees. If, however, the heir is an unfit person, as an infant, bankrupt, insolvent, lunatic, married woman, or out of the jurisdiction, it may be proper to devise the estate.3 And this seems to be the result of the authorities.4

$ 340. It does not follow that the devisee can execute the trust from the fact that the legal title is devised to him, nor does it follow that the heir can execute the trust from the fact that the legal title descends to him. How far either can execute the trust depends upon the intention of the settlor, to be gathered from the terms of the instrument.1 Thus, if an estate is so vested in A. that A. alone shall personally execute the trust, neither the heir nor the devisee of A. could execute it, although holding the legal title.2 As if an estate is vested in A. and his heirs upon a trust to sell, and A. devises the estate, neither the heir nor the devisee can sell: for the heir has nothing in the estate to sell, it having gone to the devisee; and the devisee has no power, he not being mentioned in the original settlement.3 So, where property was vested in two trustees, their executors and administrators in trust, and the surviving trustee devised the property to A. and B., and appointed A., B., and C. executors, the court refused to hand over the property to A. and B., for the reason that devisees were not named as parties who could execute the trust; and the court refused to hand it over to the executors, for the reason that the legal title was given away from them; new trustees were therefore appointed to receive the property and execute the trust.4 But where the word "assigns" is part of the limitation of the estate to trustees, as where an estate is vested in A., his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns in trust, and A. devises the estate, the devisee may execute the trust, for the reason that he comes within the limitation of the persons who may take the trust property and execute the trust.5

This principle has been doubted and criticised, but it seems to be acted upon in the English courts.²

§ 341. In New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Alabama, and Missouri, (a) trust property, upon the death of the surviving trustee, does not descend to the heir, nor can it be devised, but it vests in the court, and will be administered by the court by the appointment of new trustees to execute the trust.³ In the other States, the trust estate descends to the heir, or vests in the devisee, as the legal title must go somewhere in the absence of a statute, upon the death of the surviving trustee.4 Courts in the United States do not have occasion often to consider the question, whether the heir or devisee can execute the trust, as new trustees can be appointed in any case at the desire of the parties, and, in many States, the trust property may be vested in the new trustees by an order of the court. In most cases, it would simply be a question whether the words of the will were comprehensive enough to pass the trust estate, or whether it had descended to the heir; and this question would be important only in determining who should make a conveyance of the trust property to the new trustees, if it became necessary that a conveyance should be made.

This rule is confined to real property. Trusts in personal property are governed by the ordinary rules that apply to them in other States. Bucklin v. Bucklin, 1 N. Y. Dec. 242.

⁽a) In Missouri, the heirs of the the property or to have a new trustee trustee take the legal title upon his death, and it is their duty to care for the property or to have a new trustee trustee take the legal title upon his death, and it is their duty to care for 113 Mo. 188.

§ 342. If an owner of real estate contracts to sell it, he becomes a trustee of the legal title for the vendee; and if he dies before conveying the legal title, it will descend to his heir or heirs, as the legal title must vest somewhere; and so he may devise it; and the heir, in case it descends, and the devisee, in case it is devised, may be called upon to convey it to the vendee. In Massachusetts, there is a statute authorizing the vendor's executor or administrator to convey such estate, under the direction of the court of probate. 2

§ 343. Trust property is generally limited to trustees, as joint-tenants; and if by the terms of the gift it is doubtful, whether the trustees take as joint-tenants, or tenants in common, courts will construe a joint-tenancy if possible, on account of the inconvenience of trustees holding as tenants in common; and, where statutes have abolished joint-tenancy, an exception is generally made in the case of trustees. And courts will not allow a process for the partition of a trust estate.3 Therefore, upon the death of one of the original trustees, the whole estate, whether real or personal, devolves upon the survivors, and so on to the last survivor; and upon the death of the last survivor, if he has made no disposition of the estate by will or otherwise, it devolves upon his heirs if real estate, and upon his executors or administrators if it is personal estate. 4 (a) The title in the surviving trustee is complete, and no breaches of trust after the death of his co-

trustees can be charged upon their estate; nor can the representatives of his cotrustees interfere with his management of the trust estate, even if he is insolvent or unfit for the trust.²(a) The cestui que trust alone can interfere or apply to the court for redress or relief. So all rights of action are in the surviving trustee, and he may sue in his own name or as survivor, according as the cause of an action accrued before or after the death of his cotrustees; 3 and, in case of his death, his executor or administrator may continue the action.4 The rule is that actions must be brought in the names of the parties to the contract.⁵

§ 344. So absolute is the rule that the heir or administrator takes the trust property upon the death of the last surviving trustee, that a husband, as administrator of his wife, takes the personal property that she held in trust, but he must hold it upon the original trust.6 In England, the

A surviving partner is so far a trustee that, if he misappropriates held liable for breach of trust. Russell v. McCall, 141 N. Y. 437; heir in case of real estate in trust, or the executor in case of personal, is competent to administer and execute the trusts, but they cannot execute discretionary trusts confided personally to the original trustee, unless the power and confidence are also confided in them by the instrument. In the United States, the heirs or executors will take the trust property, and they must settle the accounts of the testator in relation to the trust. They must also see that the property is protected and preserved, but they are not under any obligation to execute the trust. They may decline the office, and generally the court will appoint new trustees to succeed to the original trustees. If the heirs or executors continue to act as trustees, they will be liable for no past breaches of trust, but only for breaches that occur under their own management.²

§ 345. It has been before stated that a general assignment for creditors does not pass a trust estate. In such case it requires special words to vest the estate in an assignee. So an assignment in bankruptey of all the trustee's property does not pass estates which the bankrupt holds in trust. (a) If the bankrupt by a breach of trust has converted the trust estate into other property, the cestui que trust may follow it into the hands of the assignee, so far as he can identify the particular property obtained by breach of the trust. or identified, the cestui que trust must prove his claim.¹ If an assignee should get possession of the trust estate, and refuse to restere it, the trustee, though a bankrupt, may maintain a suit for its restoration, or the cestui que trust may have a bill for the appointment of new trustees, and the conveyance of the property to them.² But if a bankrupt trustee has a beneficial interest in the trust property, it will pass to his assignee; and the assignee will hold the bankrupt's beneficial interest in trust for his creditors, and the remainder of the property in trust for the other parties beneficially interested.³

§ 346. It is now a universal rule that all those who take under the trustee, except purchasers for a valuable consideration without notice, take subject to the trust, and they must either execute the trust themselves, or convey the property to new trustees appointed by the court. Thus the heir, executor, administrator, devisee, and the assignee by deed or in bankruptcy, are bound by the trust; so are those who take dower or curtesy in the trust estate, or a creditor who levies an execution upon it. (a) If the trust estate is forfeited to the crown or the State, it is still subject to the trust; so if it escheats upon the failure of heirs. But a disseizor is not an assignee of the trustee; he holds a wrongful title of his own, adversely to the trust. The cestui que trust has no remedy in such case, except to procure the trustee to bring an action upon his legal title to recover the possession. The cestui que trust could not maintain a suit in equity to compel the disseizor to hold upon the same trusts as the trustee; for

Where the legal and equitable estate in the same land becomes vested in the same person, the equitable will merge in the legal estate; for a man cannot be a trustee for himself, nor hold the fee, which embraces the whole estate, and at the same time hold the several parts separated from the whole.² But in order that this may be true, the two estates must be commensurate with each other; or the legal estate must be more extensive or comprehensive than the equitable. course, in law the estates will merge wherever the interests meet; but courts of equity will preserve the estates separate, where the rights or interests of the parties require it. If the trustee acquires the equitable interest by any breach of his duty, or by fraud, courts will not allow it to merge. So if there are intervening heirs who would be squeezed out, the estates will not merge. So if the legal estate comes to the cestui que trust by a conveyance which turns out to be void, there will be no merger. Whether charges upon an estate, as mortgages, will merge in the legal title, upon being paid off, depends upon the intention of the parties, and frequently upon the interests and equities between them. If a leasehold is held by a wife in her right, but is in the occupation of her husband, and he purchases the reversion, there will be no merger.

only a partial interest, the presumption is that the charge was to be kept on foot. Mere possession of the property by the trustee or by the cestui que trust is no evidence of a merger. 2

§ 349. Sometimes where an estate has been vested by deed or will in trustees for a cestui que trust, whether it is a fee or some lesser estate, the law will presume that the trustees have surrendered, conveyed, or assigned the estate, whatever it was, to the cestui que trust.3 This presumption of law is necessary for the quieting of titles. If such presumptions could not be made, some titles would remain forever imperfect. There might be an outstanding legal estate, which would at any time defeat the tenant, if there could not be a presumption of a conveyance or surrender by the trustee to the cestui que trust. This presumption is somewhat different from that prescription by which one tenant by an open, peaceable, and adverse occupation, under a claim of right, obtains the legal title as against another person. In such case, after a definite period of time, a grant or conveyance is presumed in favor of the tenant in occupation, though it may be well enough understood that no such grant or conveyance was ever made. So there may be a presumption that a trustee has conveyed to the cestui que trust, though such presumption may not always be founded on a belief that such conveyance was actually made.¹ There is another difficulty between trustees and cestuis que trust which does not exist between adverse claimants of the same legal title. The titles of the trustee and cestui que trust are not adverse to each other, and generally the possession of the cestui que trust is the possession of the trustee; at any rate it is generally consistent with the legal title of the trustee. Therefore, mere length of time as between trustee and cestui que trust will afford no ground for a presumption of a conveyance or surrender from the trustee to the cestui que trust,² as cestuis que trust may occupy the estate indefinitely under a merely equitable title.

- § 350. This presumption has been discussed at length in several cases, and some difference of opinion has been expressed; (a) but it seems now to be well settled that three circumstances must concur in order to raise the presumption of a conveyance or surrender by the trustee to the cestui que trust: (1) It must have been the duty of the trustee to make the conveyance; (2) There must be some sufficient reason to support the presumption; (3) The presumption must be in support of a just title, and not to defeat it.
- § 351. Thus where the cestui que trust becomes absolutely entitled to the whole beneficial interest in the trust estate, and the active duties of the trustee have ceased, the statute of uses generally executes the legal title of the trustee to the cestui que trust, and he obtains the legal as well as the beneficial estate. (b) But there are cases where the active duties of the trustee having ceased, the legal title does not pass without a conveyance. In such cases it is clearly the duty of the trustee to convey the legal title to the cestui que trust, or to such person as he shall appoint. Therefore, if the beneficial owner has been a long time in possession, dealing with the estate in every respect as his own, it will be presumed that the trustee performed his duty and conveyed the legal estate to the proper person. As where a mortgage in fee was made to a trustee for the real mortgagee, and the cestui que trust or real mortgagee took a conveyance of the equity of redemption, and ever after dealt with the estate as if the legal fee was in him, a conveyance of the mortgage was presumed to have been made to him by the trustee.2 There was a use of the estate in this case for one hundred vears. Where lands were conveyed to trustees for a religious society, which was afterwards incorporated, it was held, after the use of the land for one hundred and forty years by the incorporated society, that a conveyance by the trustees might be presumed.3 So where several persons conveyed to a trustee a tract of land for the purposes of a partition by the trustee conveying back to each person his share in severalty, as set forth in the deed, it was held, after an occupation of many years by each person in severalty according to the intended partition, that the trustee might be presumed to have conveyed.4 Where the trustees are to convey upon a certain event, or at a certain time, as when a minor becomes twenty-one, the presumption will arise after a much shorter lapse of time. Thus, where trustees were to convey to the testator's son immediately on his coming of age, the son became of age in 1788, and granted a long lease in 1789, the court presumed a conveyance in 1792, or only four years after the event, there being no proof of an actual conveyance. Lord Kenyon said "there was no reason why the jury should not presume a conveyance from the trustees. They were bound to make one, and a court would have compelled them to have done it if they had refused. It is rather to be presumed that they did their duty. And as to time, the jury may be directed to presume a conveyance and surrender in much less time than twenty years." So where the direction to the trustee to convey applies to only a part of the estate, the court may presume a conveyance of the whole, if the circumstances require or warrant such presumption.

§ 352. If the estate was originally conveyed to trustees for some particular purpose, as by way of security or indemnity, or to raise an annuity or portion, or for any other purpose, as soon as the purpose is accomplished, the trustees become mere dry trustees, and it is their duty to convey the estate to the beneficial owner. Where, from lapse of time joined with other circumstances, there is a moral certainty that the purposes of the trust have all been accomplished, the court will act upon the certainty, and presume a reconveyance although there is no direct proof of the fact.

§ 353. Where an estate is vested in trustees upon an express trust, they must retain the legal title until the trusts are fully executed. Therefore, no conveyance will be presumed, so long as the trustees have any duties to perform; for that would be to presume a breach of trust, which will never be presumed: the fact must be proved by competent evidence. In Aiken v. Smith, the court presumed that the conveyance was made at the death of the tenant for life, that being the time fixed for the conveyance, and the time when the active duties of the trustees ceased.

§ 354. But there must always be sufficient reason for presuming a reconveyance or surrender by the trustee; that is, there must be some evidence of such a conveyance, or some evidence upon which the presumption of the conveyance may be founded. The mere fact that the trustee was to convey upon the execution of the trust, or upon the happening of a certain event, is not enough. There must be some circumstance from which it may be reasonably concluded that he did in fact convey. Mere length of time is not enough. Courts have refused after the lapse of one hundred and twenty years to presume a reconveyance, when there were no intermediate transactions to give force to the length of time;3 for the possession during all that time may not be inconsistent with the trustee's title.4 However, great lapse of time is an important circumstance; and the fact that it was the duty of the trustees to convey is another important circumstance. Very slight circumstances added to these will be sufficient to justify a court or jury in presuming a conveyance; and a conveyance may be presumed where the estate has been dealt with by the beneficial owner in a manner in which reasonable men do not deal with their estates, unless they are the legal as well as beneficial owners. 1

§ 355. It is further said that the purpose of the presumption must be to prevent a just title from being defeated by mere matter of form.2 The presumption is a shield for defence and not a sword for attack, as was said of another principle of law. As the presumption was introduced for the security of estates and the protection of innocent purchasers, it cannot be set up to eject them from their estates; and therefore the presumption will be made only in favor of the person in whom the beneficial title is clearly vested for the time being, whatever may be the extent of his equitable interest.3 So it was not allowed to be set up in favor of a defendant who showed no title but a mere naked possession, which might have been obtained by a disseizin of the beneficial owner.4 And where two litigants both claimed to be the beneficial owners, a surrender of an outstanding legal estate or term was not presumed, lest either obtaining it should defeat the other without regard to the merits of his beneficial title.5

§ 356. In England, there was a system of conveyancing by which outstanding terms were made to attend the legal title and protect it. Much litigation and discussion has been had over these terms, their merging in the legal title, and their presumed surrender: They have very little importance in this country, and the statement of the law concerning them is not deemed necessary.⁶

§ 357. It is a fundamental proposition that equitable estates are governed by the same rules as legal estates, otherwise inextricable confusion would ensue. If there was one rule on the equity side, and another on the law side of courts, there would be no certainty or uniformity of interpretation or construction. Thus at common law a grant to A. for life, remainder to the heirs of his body, vested an estate in fee-tail in A., which he could bar, and cut off the remainder. The same rule was applied to executed trusts. Thus if land is given to A. and his heirs in trust for B. for life, remainder to the heirs of his body, B. takes an equitable fee-tail; 2 for the same rules apply to the two species of estate. 1 Therefore where technical words are used in the creation of an executed trust estate, they will be taken in their legal technical sense,2 though Lord Hardwicke once added this qualification, "unless the intention of the testator or author of the trust plainly appeared to the contrary." 3 But this qualification has been time and again overruled, and it is now an established canon that a limitation in trust, perfected and declared by the settlor, shall have the same construction as in the case of an executed legal estate.4 But while technical words receive their technical meaning in equitable as well as legal estates, technical words are not always necessary to create and limit equitable estates in fee. Thus an equitable fee may be created in a deed without the word "heirs," and an equitable entail without the words "heirs of the body," if the words used in their popular sense are equivalent to the technical words, or if the intention is sufficiently expressed and clear.⁵ Thus if an estate is devised to A. and his heirs in trust for B. without other limitations, B. will take an equitable fee; for it is plain that B. is to take an equitable estate as large as the legal estate that passed to A. and his heirs, which is a legal fee. But if an estate is conveyed by deed to A. and his heirs in trust for the grantor for life, remainder for his children, without the word "heirs," the children take an estate for life only, in analogy to the rules of law.7

² This illustration states the law only in States where the rule in Shelley's case, as it is called, is in force—In States where the rule is abrogated by statute, those who take in remainder under the limitation, take as purchasers; and the same rule applies to equitable estates.

§ 358. The rule in Shelley's case was never a rule of intention, or of construction to reach and carry out the settlor's intention; but it was established as an absolute rule of property to obviate certain difficulties that would arise in relation to tenures, if certain persons to whom property was limited were allowed to take as purchasers, and not by descent. (a) It is notorious that the rule disappointed the intention of settlors in most cases, and gave an absolute disposal of the inheritance to the first taker, where the set-

(a) The rule in Shelley's case applies to leasehold as well as freehold estates. Hughes v. Nicklas, 70 Md. 484. Under that rule, a devise to the testator's son for life with remainder to his legitimate child or children, if any, and if he dies without issue, then to another son of the testator for life and afterwards to his legitimate child or children, if any, was held to give to the first son, who died without issue, an estate tail in the testator's realty. Pierce, 157 Mass. 52; Cloutman v. Bailey, 62 N. H. 44.

The rule in Shelley's case appears, in England, to be a rule of law, to be applied even when a testator expressly declares that it shall not apply to any of the limitations of his will. Van Grutten v. Foxwell, [1897] A. C. 658; 66 L. J. Q. B. 745. And in this country the rule has been held when applicable, in the case of devises, not to be controlled by the testator's intention. Lippincott v. Davis, 59 N. J. L. 241. But see De Vaughn v. Hutchinson, 165 U.S. 566; Hambel v. Hambel (Iowa), 75 N. W. 673; Brown v. Bryant (Texas), 44 S. W. 399.

for life. As trusts are wholly independent of tenure, they ought not to be affected by the rule, and a few cases have seemed to indicate that they were withdrawn from the operation of it; but it is now established that the same rule shall apply to the same limitation whether it is of an equitable or a legal estate. Thus the rule in Shelley's case will be ap-

1 For these reasons the rule is now abolished in many of the States by statute. The proposition of the text, however, should be read in the light of the remarks of Agnew, J., in Yarnall's App., 70 Penn. St. 340: "In regard to wills the cases show that technical phrases, as well as forms of expression decided in other cases, are not permitted to overturn the intent of the testator, when that intent is clearly ascertained to be different in the will under examination by the court. This broad principle needs no citation to support it, for it is founded on the universal rule that the intention of the testator is the guide for the interpretation of wills. The rule in Shellev's case is only an apparent not a real exception to this statement. It sacrifices a particular intent only to give effect to the main intent of the testator. All the authorities are agreed that this rule has no place in the interpretation of wills, and takes effect only when the interpretation has been first ascertained. Mr. Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p. 188, says, 'Nothing can be better founded than Mr. Hargrave's doctrine, that the rule in Shelley's case is no medium for finding out the intention of the testator; that, on the contrary, the rule supposes the intention already discovered and to be a superadded succession to the heirs, general or special, of the donee for life, by making such donee the ancestor terminus or stirps, from which the generation of posterity or heirs is to be accounted; and that whether the conveyance has or has not so constituted an estate of freehold, with a succession engrafted on it, is a previous question which ought to be adjusted before the rule is thought of; that, to resolve that point, the ordinary rules for interpreting the language of wills ought to be resorted to; that when it is once settled that the donor or testator has used words of inheritance according to their legal import, has applied them intentionally to comprise the whole line of heirs of the tenant for life, and has really made him the terminus, or ancestor by reference to whom the succession is to be regulated, then comes the proper time to inspect the rule in Shelley's case.' In Hileman r. Bouslaugh, 1 Harris, 351, (h. J. Gibson expresses the same idea in fewer words, thus: 'This operates only on the intention of the testator when it has been ascertained, not on the meaning of the words used to express it. The ascertainment is left to the ordinary rules of construction peculiar to wills; but when this is ascertained, is found to be within the rule, then there is but one way; it admits of no exception."

plied to a gift to A. and his heirs in trust for B. for life, and remainder to his heirs, or heirs of his body. The reason of the rule as applied to legal estates was some real or fancied difficulty concerning tenures, or to bring estates one generation sooner into commerce, or some other reason; for neither judges nor text-writers are agreed upon the original reasons of the rule. The reason of the application of the rule to limitations of trust estates is to preserve a uniformity of the law in relation to the two kinds of estates in land. This leads Mr. Lewin to say, that although the rule is not equally applicable to trust estates, yet it is equally applied.1 But the rule will not be applied to vest a fee or fee-tail in the first taker, unless the word "heir" is used as a term of succession, and not as a mere designatio personae. Thus if an estate be devised to A. and his heirs in trust for B. for life, and after his decease in trust for the person who shall then be his heir, B. takes an estate for life only, and the person thus designated takes the estate by purchase. 2 So if the legal estate is given to A. in trust for B. for life, and the legal remainder to the heirs of B., at his decease the rule cannot apply; for the legal and equitable estate cannot so coalesce that B. can take a fee either legal or equitable.³

§ 359. But in order that technical words may receive their legal signification, and in order that the rule in Shelley's case may be applied to limitations of equitable estates, the trusts must be executed and not executory.⁴ All trusts are executory in one sense of the word; that is, the trustee must have some duty, either active or passive, to perform, so that the statute of uses shall not execute the estate in the cestui que trust, and leave nothing in the trustee. 1 But such is not the meaning of judges when they speak of executed v. Coleman, 8 Vin. 267; Stamford v. Hobart, 3 Bro. P. C. 33; Papillon v. Voice, 2 P. Wms. 471; Glenorchy v. Bosville, t. Talb. 3; Gower v. Grosvenor, Barn. 62; Roberts v. Several of these cases were decided by Lord Hardwicke; but in Bagshaw v. Spencer, 1 Ves. 152, he nearly confounded and denied the distinction. In Exel v. Wallace, 2 Ves. 233, however, Lord Hardwicke explained his meaning, and desired to have it remembered that he did not mean to say that his predecessors were wrong. The distinction, as stated in the text, is now firmly established both in England and the United States. Barnard v. Broby, 2 Cox, 8; Wright v. Pearson, 1 Eden, 125; Austen v. Lord King said a trust was executory where the party must come into court to have the benefit of the will. Mr. Lewin says the true criterion is, where the assistance of the court is necessary to complete the limitations, p. 89. Lord Eldon said the trust was executory where the testator had not completed the devise, but had left something to be done, so that the court must look to the intention. Jervoise r. Northumberland, 1 J. & W. 570. Lord St. Leonards distinguishes the two as follows: "Has the testator been what is called, and very properly called, his own conveyancer? Has he left it to the court to make out, from general expressions, what his intention is, or has he so defined that intention that you have nothing to do but to take that which is given you, and to convert them into legal estates?" trusts, and executory trusts. These words refer rather to the manner and perfection of their creation than to the action of the trustee in administering the property. Thus a trust created by a deed or will, so clear and certain in all its terms and limitations that a trustee has nothing to do but to carry out all the provisions of the instrument according to its letter, is called an executed trust. In these trusts, technical words receive their legal meaning, and the rules applicable to legal estates govern the equitable estates thus created. On the other hand, an executory trust is where an estate is conveyed to a trustee upon trust, to be by him conveyed or settled upon other trusts in certain contingencies, or upon certain events, and these other trusts are imperfectly stated, or mere outlines of them are stated, to be afterwards drawn out in a formal manner, and are to be carried into effect according to the final form which the details and limitations shall take under the directions thus given. 2 They are called executory, not because the trust is to be performed in the future, but because the trust instrument itself is to be moulded into form and perfected according to the outlines or instructions made or left by the settlor or testator. (a) Thus land conveyed to A.

(a) When it is uncertain who the remaindermen will be, the trust is executory, and the remainder is an equitable, and not a legal estate. Cushman v. Coleman, 92 Ga. 772; Carney v. Kain, 40 W. Va. 758. "In practice the chief distinction between an executed and an executory trust lies in the fact that the former executes itself by converting its limitations into the corresponding legal estates, whereas in the latter, the court may direct that form of settlement or conveyance which will best give effect to the settlor's intention, and for this purpose may even disregard the construction the instrument would re-

upon trust, to settle the same upon B. and C. and their issue, in the event of their marriage, is an executory trust. 1 There is a conveyance or settlement to be executed by A., and the form or terms of this conveyance or settlement is to be determined by the intention of the original grantor.2 When this conveyance or settlement is finally determined and made, the trust becomes executed in the sense of the word as applicable to this distinction, and it is afterwards governed by all the rules of an executed trust. The difference between the two kinds of trusts is this. In executed trusts the rules of property govern, and not the intention of the settlor, if it is contrary to the law or rule of property.3 Thus if, in an executed trust, an estate is given to A. in trust for B. for life, with remainder to his heirs, B. takes an equitable fee, and may convey the equitable inheritance and exclude his heirs, although it is perfectly certain that the settlor intended that B. should take an estate for his life only.4 But an executory trust is settled and carried into effect according to the intention of the settlor. Wood v. Burnham, 6 Paige, 513; 26 Wend. 9; 4 Kent, Com. 219; 1 West, Ch. t. Hardwicke, 542. A mere direction to convey will not render the trust executory, if the directions are so clear, and the limitations are so certainly defined, that there is nothing to do but to convey in accordance with them. In order that the trust may be executory, there must be some room for construction, in order to determine the intention of the settlor; that is, to determine what limitation shall be, and what shall not be, introduced into the conveyance to be made. Egerton v. Brownlow, 4 H. L. Cas. 210; Austen v. Taylor, 1 Ed. 361; Wight v. Leigh, 15 Ves. 564; Graham v. Stewart, 2 Macq. H. L. Ca. 205; Herbert v. Blunden, 1 Dr. & Walsh, 78; East v. trust, with instructions to convey it to B. for life, with remainder to his heirs, or to convey it in trust for B. for life, with remainder to his heirs, B. takes an estate for life only, and his heirs take by purchase at his decease, if such appeared to be the intention of the original gift or grant.¹

§ 360. In the history of executory trusts, still another distinction has been drawn, or a distinction between executory trusts created by marriage articles, and executory trusts created by wills. This is not so much a difference between two classes of executory trusts, as it is a difference between the rules that will be applied to the interpretation of marriage articles and of wills, in order to determine the intention of the settlor or the testator. Lord Eldon once said, that "there was no difference in the execution of an executory trust created by will, and a covenant in marriage articles; such a distinction would shake to their foundation the rules of equity." 2 But the great chancellor afterwards modified his expression.⁸ And certainly there is no difference in the execution of the two trusts when it is settled what they are; but there is a difference in the construction of marriage articles and of wills in order to reach the intention of the creator of the trusts. Thus, in marriage articles, the intention of the parties to the articles is presumed to be a provision for the issue of the marriage, and such construction is given to the articles as to carry into effect this presumed intention if possible; while in construing wills, in order to settle the limitations of a trust, there is no such presumed leading intention; or, as Sir W. Grant put it, "I know of no difference between an executory trust in marriage articles and in a will, except that the object and purpose of the former furnish an indication of intention, which must be wanting in the latter. Where the object is to make a provision by the settlement for the issue of a marriage, it is not to be presumed that the parties meant to put it in the power of the father to defeat that purpose, and appropriate the estate to himself. If, therefore, the agreement be to limit an estate for life with remainder to the heirs of the body, the court decrees a strict settlement in conformity to the presumable intention. But if a will directs a limitation for life with remainder to the heirs of the body, the court has no such ground for decreeing a strict settlement." 1

§ 361. Thus if, in marriage articles, the real estate of the husband or of the wife is limited to the heirs of the body or to the issue ² of the contracting parties, or either of them, or to the issue of the body, or to the issue and their heirs, ³ so that the words and limitations, taken in their legal sense, would enable the parents, or one of them, to defeat this provision for the children, equity will construe the articles to mean that the estate is limited to the parents for life, and the children will take at the decease of their parent or parents as purchasers; and equity will decree a formal settlement to be drawn in such way as to carry out this purpose. ⁴ (a) If a settlement is already drawn after the marriage, but not in accordance with this rule, equity will correct and reform it so as to carry out this intention. ⁵ But if the settlement was formally drawn out before marriage contrary to this rule, the court will presume that the parties abandoned the articles, and entered into a new agreement, as expressed in the settlement. If, however, a settlement before marriage is expressed on its face to be made to carry out the articles, and it does not carry them out in this respect, equity will reform it.² So if it can be shown in any other way that the formal settlement was intended to carry out the articles, and it does not do so, equity will reform it on the ground of mistake, 3 or if the settlement is made in the very words of the articles, and the legal effect of the words of the articles and settlement is different from the intention of the parties, the settlement will be corrected and reformed in order to carry out the exact intention of the parties.4 If, however, there are any intervening rights, as those of an innocent purchaser without notice, his rights of course will be protected. 5 So it is established that daughters are included under the general term of heirs or issue, and that they take as purchasers.6 And children includes grandchildren. This has been held in England.⁸ Of course in the United States, where primogeniture is abolished, estates will be settled upon sons and daughters equally, or upon daughters alone in default of sons. But if the children or issue of the marriage are provided for in some other way, as by portions to be raised for them in such manner that it appears that they are not intended to take as purchasers of the particular estate under the settlement, then the rule in Shelley's ease will prevail, and the parents or parent may sell the whole estate. And so where there is an actual present conveyance of personal property by a marriage contract executed before marriage in trust for the wife, and at her death to the heirs of her body, it was held to be an executed trust, there being no further conveyances to be executed, and that the rule in Shelley's case applied.

§ 362. In England, when a married woman could not convey her interest in real estate, a strict settlement was not ordered under marriage articles that limited the husband's estate to the heirs of the body of the wife, for the reason that this created an entail that could not be barred without considerable difficulty; but since the Fines and Recoveries Act, the difficulty is removed.³ Nor will the court order a strict settlement, if there is anything in the nature of the limitations, or otherwise on the face of the articles, which indicates that such was not the intention of the parties, for the reason that the rule now under discussion was established in order to carry out the intention of the parties. If, therefore, the intention of the parties appears to be in accordance with, or not contrary to, the ordinary rule, the ordinary rule will be allowed to prevail.⁴

§ 363. If personal property is agreed to be settled on the parents for life, and then to their heirs, or the heirs of their bodies, the chattels will not vest in the parents absolutely, but in the heirs when they are born; ¹ and it is not necessary that they should survive their parents, or become actual heirs, ² unless the gift is to the parents and their heirs living at the death of the surviving parent, or there are other equivalent words. ³

§ 364. If there is a covenant in marriage articles to settle personal property upon the same trusts, and for the same purposes, as the real estate is settled, the court will not apply the same limitations to the personal as to the real estate, for that would be to vest an absolute interest in the heirs at their birth; but the court will insert a provision making the personal property follow the course of the real estate. Courts will also insert a provision that the children or issue shall take, as tenants in common, and not as joint-tenants, on account of the inconveniences of joint-tenancies, and from the presumed intention of the parties; and so the court will

The matter referred to in the text seldom or never arises in the marriage settlements made in the United States, as primogeniture is abolished, and entails on the eldest son are seldom resorted to. But where personal chattels are made to vest under a marriage settlement in the eldest son as heir, and such son dies under age, very awkward effects follow; and, under covenants to settle personal property upon the same limitations as are applied to a settlement of real estate wherein the eldest son takes as heir, it was a matter of great discussion in the Court of Chancery and in the House of Lords, what kind of provisions ought to be inserted to protect the parents and other children in case the eldest son died under age and without issue. insert other words and conditions, and vary the literal instruction of the articles in order to carry out the presumed intention, and promote a convenient settlement for the protection and security of all the parties, as if the settlement is to be of all the property which the settlor might thereafter become entitled to, it will be construed to embrace only the property acquired during the marriage. The court will not always order a formal settlement to be drawn out, but will declare the meaning and intention of the articles, and leave the parties to act upon the declaration, as if it was a formal settlement drawn out and executed by them. So the court will sometimes rectify the settlement drawn under articles by a decree, without ordering a new deed to be drawn out and executed.

§ 365. Marriage settlements, whether made in pursuance of articles, or under directions contained in wills, or under decrees of the court, are matters in which courts exercise the most liberal principles of equity. If a settlement is drawn up under a decree, and it is not in all respects in accordance with the decree, the court will set it aside, and order a new settlement.⁵ In Grout v. Van Schoonhoven, the court ordered a new settlement, in substance that the trust should be for the wife during her life without power of anticipating the income; and upon her death for the use of her husband for life, in case he survived her; and, after the death of both, to be divided equally among all their children then living, and the descendants of such as had died leaving issue, per stirpes; with a power to make advances with the approbation of the trustees to the children, on their attaining full age or being married, out of the capital fund, in anticipation of the ultimate distribution, in order to set them up in the world. An advance cannot be made in order that a child may put the money in his pocket, but an advance may be made to trustees under a marriage settlement for a child.2 Where there was power of advancement to a married woman, it was held that an advance to her husband to set him up in business might be allowed; 3 and so where there was power in a settlement to withdraw funds, and lay them out in the purchase of a trade for the benefit of husband and wife, the power may be exercised for the benefit of one after the death of the other.4 In Imlay v. Huntington, a husband covenanted that he would pay over to certain trustees $10,000, and one-half of certain other expected moneys of his intended wife, to be held by said trustees in trust for the wife for the term of twenty years, after which time they were to convey to such persons as the wife should appoint. The marriage was consummated, and the husband received $60,000, which he continued to hold and manage as his own during the lifetime of his wife, making no payment to the trustees, and neither the trustees nor the wife requesting him to pay the sum over, or to make any settlement in pursuance of the articles. On the death of the wife, at the end of twenty years, her brothers and sisters, there being no issue of the marriage, applied to the court by bill in equity for the execution of the marriage settlement, in accordance with the articles and covenants entered into by the husband before marriage: but it was held that it was competent for the wife to discharge the husband from the fulfilment of the covenants, and to abandon the trust; that, under the circumstances of the case, the articles were abandoned by the wife and all the parties; that the wife's personal property vested absolutely in the husband; and that the wife's heirs had no right to maintain the bill for any part of her personal estate.5

§ 366. In executory trusts created by wills, no presumption arises a priori that a provision was intended for the children of the first taker, as in marriage settlements, and that such children were intended to take as purchasers. If the trust be "for A. and the heirs of his body," or "for A. and the heirs of his body and their heirs," 2 or "for A. for life and after his decease to the heirs of his body," 3 A. will be tenant in tail; and he may disappoint his heirs by barring the entail. So, where a testator directed an estate to be settled on his "daughter and her children, and, if she died without issue," remainder over, the court held that the daughter was tenant in tail; and that in a voluntary devise the court must take it as they find it, though upon like words in a marriage settlement it might be different.4 So where a testator directed lands to be settled on his "nephew for life, remainder to the heirs male of his body, and the heirs male of every such heir male severally and successively, one after another, as they should be in seniority and priority of birth, every elder and the heirs male of his body to be preferred before the younger," it was held that, although the nephew took by a voluntary executory devise, the court must execute it in the words of the will and according to the rules of law, and that equity could not carry the words further than the same words would operate at law, and that the nephew took an estate tail. The words in this case all went upon the idea of an entail.⁵ So if there is a direction that the trustees shall not give up their trust until "a proper entail was made to the heir male by them." 6 But in another similar executory trust, Lord Eldon declined to compel a purchaser to accept the title, on the ground that the entail was too doubtful to be acted upon in so grave a matter.¹ Where a testator devised real estate to his daughter, then unmarried, in trust for her heirs, she to receive the income for her and their support and education, and, if she should die leaving no heirs, then over to her brothers and sisters, it was held that the word "income" passed the estate to the daughter, that the word "heirs" was a word of limitation, and that the daughter took an estate tail.² In the gift of a fund the term "heirs at law" means next of kin or persons entitled under the statute of distributions relating to personal property.³

§ 367. In executory trusts under marriage articles, many distinctions arise upon the question, Who may enforce their specific performance, and compel the execution of the formal deed and the disposal of the property in accordance with the settlement that should have been made under the articles? Thus the general rule is, that parties, seeking a specific execution of such articles, must be those who come strictly within the reach and influence of the consideration of the marriage, or who claim through them, as the wife, or the husband, and the issue of the husband or wife, or both. As a general rule, mere volunteers, or collateral relatives of husband or wife, cannot interfere and ask for a specific performance of the articles. 4(a) But there are so many excep-

(a) In Re Cameron and Wells, 37 Ch. D. 32, 37, Kay, J., said: "When any collateral takes an interest under a marriage settlement, it may be the bargain between the husband and wife that the collateral should so take; but that does not make him any the less a volunteer, because no consideration moves from him, which is the test whether the interest of the collateral is or is not that of a volunteer." It was there held that the rule of Newstead v. Searles (1 Atk. 265; 9 A. C. 320, n.), by which the limitations of a widow's marriage settlement in favor of her children by a former marriage are not voluntary, does not extend to the like limitations in the marriage settlement of a widower.

tions and qualifications to this rule, that a case is rarely decided upon it. The principle is, that, to bring collateral relations within the reach and influence of the consideration. there must be something over and above that flowing from the immediate parties to the marriage articles, from which it can be inferred that relatives beyond the issue were intended to be provided for, and that, if the provision in their behalf had not been agreed to, the superadded consideration would not have been given. While this is the general rule, the court seize hold of the slightest valuable consideration to give effect to the settlement in favor of collateral relatives; and it need not appear that these slight considerations were inserted in favor of distant relatives: the court will presume such to be the case.2 The result of all the cases is, that, if from the circumstances under which marriage articles were entered into by the parties, or as collected from the face of the instrument itself, it appears to have been intended that the collateral relatives in a given event should take the estate, and a proper limitation to that effect is contained in the articles, a court of equity will enforce the trust for their benefit. Such parties are not volunteers outside the deed, but come fairly within the influence of the consideration upon which it is founded. Such consideration extends through all the limitations of the articles for the benefit of the remotest persons provided for, consistent with the rules of law.3 But of course there is a more direct equity in favor of a wife and children.¹ So in respect to chattel interests, it has been held that a bond under seal, though voluntary, will uphold a decree for the execution of the trust in favor of those whom the obligor is under obligations to support, as wife or children; for a seal in law imports a consideration.² But this doctrine seems to be rejected; and it is now held that neither wife nor child can enforce a purely voluntary contract or settlement.³(a)

§ 368. And where a third person—parent, agent, or friend of the parties—holds out any considerations of a pecuniary nature to induce a marriage, and articles are drawn up, and a marriage takes place, equity will compel the party holding out the inducements to make them good, or specifically perform the articles.⁴

The case was again discussed before the State court of Georgia, and the opinion of the circuit court of the district of Georgia was followed. That case was in turn overruled in 13 How. 268. The judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States was, that on the face of that instrument the consideration extended to brothers and sisters; and, further, that it was an executed trust, and that they had an interest.

tion of the testator will be carried out, if it is sufficiently clear, although the same words in an ordinary grant would create an estate tail. Thus, if there are other words in the will that indicate that the words "heirs of the body" are words of designation, and not of inheritance, such heirs will take by purchase, and the first taker of course will have only an estate for life. Thus, if the testator direct a settlement on A. for life "without impeachment of waste," or with a limitation "to preserve contingent remainders," 2 or if he direct that "care be taken in the settlement that the tenant for life shall not bar the entail," 8 the superadded words show the intention to be, that the first taker shall have only an estate for life, with no power over the inheritance. So, where a gift was in trust for the separate use of a married woman for life, she alone to receive the rent, and her husband not to intermeddle, and, after her decease, to the heirs of her body, the wife took only for life, and the words "heirs of her body" were words of purchase; for if the wife takes the inheritance in tail, the husband will have curtesy, which would be contrary to the clause against his intermeddling.4 So, where a testator directed an estate to be settled on a married woman for life for her separate use, and at her death on her issue, she was not tenant in tail; for there would be only an equitable estate in her, while a legal estate would vest in her issue, and the two estates could not coalesce in such manner as to make her tenant in tail. 5 So a direction to settle land on A. and the heirs of his body "as counsel shall advise," 6 or as "the executors shall think fit," 7 implies that a simple estate tail is not intended, for if it was there would be no need of the additional words. And where the trust was to settle on A. for life without impeachment of waste, remainder to his issue in strict settlement, the court directed the estates to be settled on A. for life, without impeachment for waste, remainder to his sons successively in tail male, remainder to his daughters as tenants in common in tail male, with cross-remainders in tail male, and with limitations to trustees to preserve contingent remainders.¹

§ 370. Where a testator devised his estate to trustees for the term of six years, and to be then divided among his children or their issue, and conveyances to be given therefor, and directed that "in each deed or writing to any of my children shall be inserted and expressed a clause limiting such grant or interest conveyed to the grantee for life, with remainder over to the right heirs of such grantee, their heirs and assigns forever," it was held that the deeds must be so drawn as to give the children a life-estate only, and not a fee in their shares.² The same rule of construction has been established and enforced in Georgia, and in Tennessee, and has been recognized in South Carolina, Maryland, and Pennsylvania.

upon sons and daughters in common, with cross-remainders in default of issue, unless the direction was to settle upon some particular one of the heirs of the body or issue.

§ 372. If the limitations of an executory trust are imperfectly or defectively declared in a will, the court will rectify the limitations, and order the settlements to be made in accordance with the intention of the testator, and to be drawn up in proper form to effectuate that intention. But if a testator undertake to be his own conveyancer, and himself draw up in his will all the particulars of the limitations upon which he desires his property to be settled, intending them to be final and to be carried into effect in the trusts, the court is bound by the words, as in Austen v. Taylor, where Lord Northington said that "the testator had referred no settlement to the trustees to complete, but had declared his own uses and trusts," and that there was no authority in the court to vary them.²

§ 373. When a testator has devised lands in strict settlement, and then devises personal chattels as heirlooms, to be held by, or in trust for, the parties entitled to the use of the real estate under the limitations of the settlement; or when he expresses a desire that the heirlooms should be held upon the same trusts as the real estate, — "so far as the rules of law and equity will permit," the tenant for life will have the use of the heirlooms, and they will vest absolutely in the first tenant in tail, upon his birth, though he die immediately after. In such cases, the court regards the trust, either as

executed, or, if the trust is executory, that it has no authority to insert a limitation over in case of the tenant in tail dying under twenty-one. But such a limitation over is not illegal; and if the bequest of the heirlooms is clearly executory, and if the intention of the testator is plainly manifested that no person shall take the chattels absolutely who does not live to become possessed of the real estate, the court will execute the intention by directing the insertion of a limitation that the absolute interest of the first tenant in tail, if he should die under twenty-one, should go over to the next person in remainder. And so where the absolute vesting of the chattels is coupled with the actual possession, and is therefore suspended until the death of the tenant for life, the chattels will vest in the child, who, after the death of the tenant for life, shall fulfil all the requisites of being tenant in tail in possession.² (a)

§ 374. If the words of a will, taken in their ordinary sense, create a joint-tenancy, the court cannot order a settlement giving a tenancy in common, as it may do under marriage articles. But in some cases, where a testator is providing for his children, or where a grandparent in loco parentis is providing for his grandchildren, the court will order a settlement that will create a tenancy in common.³ And, generally, executory trusts under wills will be construed in the same manner as marriage articles entered into after marriage. 1

§ 375. When a settlement is directed in an executory trust, but there is no direction as to the powers to be given under it, the court cannot order the insertion of any powers,2 except perhaps the power of leasing, which generally is an implied power to enable a party to enjoy the estate.3 But if the executory articles or the will contain a direction to insert the "usual powers," powers to lease for twenty-one years,4 of sale and exchange, 5 of varying the securities, 6 of appointing new trustees,7 and (according to the nature of the property) of partition, of leasing mines, and of granting building leases, will be inserted.8 But there is a distinction between powers for the management and enjoyment of the estate, and powers which are personally beneficial to one or more particular persons, such as powers of jointure, to charge portions, or to raise money for a particular purpose.9 The court cannot therefore order these latter powers to be inserted under the direction to insert the usual powers, for there is no rule by which the court could be governed in reducing the corpus of the estate. 10 So if certain particular powers are directed to be inserted, the usual powers will be qualified by the direc-Thus, where it was directed that the settlement should contain a power of leasing for twenty-one years, a power of sale and exchange, and of appointment of new trustees, it was held that a power of granting building leases could not be inserted. 1 So the powers must be inserted and executed as they are directed; as where a power was directed to be inserted of selling and exchanging estates in one county, and all other usual powers, it was held that the powers could not be extended to estates in other counties.2 And where a testator directed the insertion of a power of making leases. and otherwise according to circumstances, and of appointing new trustees, the court refused to insert a power of sale and exchange, saying that, if where nothing is expressed nothing can be implied, it is impossible, where something is expressed, to imply more than is expressed, especially where the will notices what powers are to be given.3 But under particular directions as to certain powers, and general directions that other usual powers should be inserted, the two directions being separate and independent of each other, it was held that a power to appoint new trustees might be inserted.4 Where proper powers of making leases or otherwise were directed to be reserved in the settlement to the tenants for life while qualified to exercise them, and when disqualified to the trustees, and a power of sale and exchange was inserted in the settlement, Lord Eldon held that it was improperly introduced; 5 and Sir T. Plummer gave a similar decision, on the ground that the tenant for life ought not to have a power of sale unless it was expressly directed, nor ought the trustees to have such a power in the absence of an express direction.⁶ But where there was a settlement of stock with a power of varying the securities, and also a covenant to settle real estate upon the same trusts and with like powers, it was held that a power to sell and exchange was

§ 376. In drawing up the final deed of settlement under executory articles or a will, the intention of the settlor is to be carried out if possible. If the intention conflicts with any of the rules of law, it shall be executed so far, and as near as it can be. The doctrine of cy près applies to this class of executory trusts. Thus, if a settlement is directed which would create a perpetuity, the court will order a settlement which shall carry the trust as far as it can extend without running counter to the rules against perpetuities. As where there was a devise to a corporation in trust to convey to A. for life, and after his death to his first son for life, and so on to the first son of such first son for life; and, in default of male issue, then to B. for life, and to his son for life after the death of B., and so as in the case of A., Lord Cowper said the attempt to create a perpetuity was vain, yet the directions should be complied with, so far as consistent with the law, and he directed that all the sons already born should take estates for life in succession, with limitations to unborn sons in tail.2 But if the devise is such that it cannot be carried into effect, in any form approximating the intention of the testator, without contravening the law against perpetuities or remoteness, the whole trust will be void.3

Again, it has been said, that "a perpetuity is when

if all that have interest join, yet they cannot pass the estate."1 These are characteristics of a perpetuity. There are other descriptions given, as that "a perpetuity is a thing odious in the law, and destructive to the commonwealth: it would stop commerce and prevent the circulation of property."2 Others have described the rule of law as respects the period of remoteness, rather than the thing itself called a perpetuity;3 thus, "a perpetuity is a limitation tending to take the subject out of commerce for a longer period than a life or lives in being and twenty-one years beyond, and, in the case of a posthumous child, a few months more, allowing for the term of gestation." 4 Mr. Saunders says: "A perpetuity may be defined to be a future limitation, restraining the owner of the estate from alienating the fee-simple of the property, discharged of such future use or estate, before the event is determined, or the period is arrived, when such future use or estate is to arise. If that period is within the bound prescribed by law, it is not a perpetuity." 5 This describes the thing itself, and not the rule of law, or the length of time, which may vary. Mr. Lewis gives a fuller definition: "A perpetuity is a future limitation, whether executory, or by way of remainder, and of either real or personal property, which is not to vest, until after the expiration of, or will not necessarily vest within, the period fixed and prescribed by law for the creation of future estates and interests; and which is not destructible by the persons for the time being entitled to the property, subject to the future limitation, except with the concurrence of the individual interested under that limitation." 6 If such person is not yet in being, as he may not be after an extended period, of course the estate cannot be conveyed, even if all the world join in the deed.

§ 378. Executory devises are a species of testamentary dispositions, allowed by courts of law, and when properly exercised, they pass the legal estate or interest to all persons in favor of whom the dispositions are made. They are devises to take effect at a certain time in the future, or upon a certain event, and in favor of certain persons. Limitations by way of springing or shifting uses are similar in effect, except that they are created by deeds inter vivos, and are based upon the statute of uses. Whenever the event happens when a shifting or springing use is to take effect, the statute of uses vests the legal seizin and ownership in the person entitled by virtue of the use. These executory devises, and shifting and springing uses, must vest in the persons intended to be benefited within the time allowed by law, or they will be declared illegal and of no effect. The same rules apply in equity to trusts. In cases of trusts the legal estate is vested in certain trustees, and their heirs; but the beneficial interest, or equitable estate, is given by the grantor, testator, or settlor to such person or persons, and upon such terms and upon such events, as he shall declare. The settlor can change and shift the beneficial enjoyment of the equitable estate from one person to another, in the future, in a manner analogous to the limitations of springing or shifting uses under the statute of uses. § 379. The rule against perpetuities has been gradually established by judicial decisions, and affords a most notable instance of the nice adaptation of the principles of the common law to the decision of a question which requires at once a due regard for the rights of persons and property, and a careful consideration of these larger principles of public policy so essential to the welfare of communities and States. For public policy is opposed to the perpetual settlement of property in families in such manner that it is forever inalienable, or inalienable so long as there may be a person to take, answering the designation of some testator who died genera-The first stand of the judges was to allow only tions before. those limitations which would take effect at the end of one life from the death of the testator. heirs, but in a conditional limitation or an executory devise, it is limited over to other persons. Even in the case of a condition, the power of alienation may be restricted, though it cannot be entirely taken away. In re Dugdale, 38 Ch. D. 176, 179; Potter v. Couch, 141 U.S. 296, 315; Sellers v. Dean v. Dean, [1891] 3 Ch. 150. See Symes v. Symes, [1896] 1 Ch. 272. In construing a will, a remainder will always be life in being, - that of the longest liver. The next step was much debated; but it was finally settled, that an executory devise might be made to vest at the end of lives in being and twenty-one years after, to allow for the infancy of the next taker, who by reason of infancy could not alienate the estate.² The statute of 10 & 11 Wm. III., c. 16, having provided that children en ventre sa mère, born after their father's death, should for the purposes of the limitations of estates be deemed to have been born in his lifetime, a further extension of nine or ten months was allowed for the period of gestation.³ The next step was to allow a period of nine months for gestation at the beginning of the term, as the life in being during which the term would run might be that of a child en ventre sa mère.4 Much discussion arose upon each one of these steps.⁵ For instance, the term of twenty-one years, it was said, could not be allowed as a term in gross, and without reference to the infancy of some person interested in the estate; this question was not settled until Cadell v. Palmer, in the House of Lords in 1833, when it was finally determined, that twenty-one years might be allowed as a term in gross, without reference to the infancy of any person, but that the period of nine months for gestation should be allowed in cases only where the gestation had commenced of some persons who, if born, would take an interest in the estate. By such steps, by imperceptible degrees, and after two centuries of doubt and litigation, and unaided by legislation, the judges framed and completed the great rule against perpetuities.²

§ 380. Thus all future legal estates which arise by way of executory devise, conditional limitation, or shifting and springing uses, must vest within a life or lives in being at the death of the testator, and twenty-one years; and, in case the person in whom the estate or interest should then vest is en ventre sa mère, nine months more will be allowed; and all estates created as aforesaid, and so limited that they may not vest within that time, are void.³ If the estates are created and limited by deeds inter vivos, the lives in being must be those persons who are living at the execution of the deed, and not at the death of the grantor or settlor.⁴ And if an

⁴ Lewis on Perpetuity, 171, 172. Mr. Lewis observes an inconsistency in taking lives in being at the death of the testator, if the future interest is created by will, and lives in being at the date or execution of the deed, if such interests are created by deed. But it should be remembered that absolute term is taken, and no anterior term for a life in being is referred to, such absolute term cannot be longer than twenty-one years; but a term of any number of years may be taken, provided the term is so connected with some life or lives in being that the interest must vest in some person living at the death of the testator and at the time of the vesting. So estates limited to take effect after an indefinite failure of issue of a living or deceased person are void, for the reason that the issue of such persons may not fail until after the term of a life or lives in being and twenty-one years has expired. § 381. It will be observed, that, in determining whether a particular devise is contrary to the rule against perpetuities, the inquiry is not whether the contingency upon which the estate is to vest actually occurs within the time limited by the rule, but whether it is possible that the event may not happen within the time. If it is possible that the event upon which an executory devise or shifting or springing use is to vest in some person may not happen within the time, the executory estate is void, although in fact the event actually happens within the time.2 And it must further be observed, that, if the estate is to vest in some persons within the time limited, it will not be obnoxious to the rule against perpetuities, even if such person may not be entitled to the actual enjoyment of the property; that is, the rule as to perpetuities deals with the vesting of the title, and not with the actual reception of the profits of an estate.3 A gift may be to unborn children for life and then to an ascertained person, if the vesting of the estate in the latter is not postponed too long. The person who is to take must become certain within the period, the right of possession may be postponed longer. Moreover, if a certain estate is to vest within the time on a contingency which actually occurs, the devise is not affected by the fact that the estate was limited to take effect at an-

more be tolerated when it is covered by a trust, than when it displays itself undisguised in the settlement of a legal estate. "If," as Lord Guilford said, "in equity you could come nearer to a perpetuity than the common law admits, all men, being desirous to continue their estates in their families, would settle their estates by way of trust, which might make well for the jurisdiction of chancery, but would be destructive to the commonwealth."

§ 383. Therefore, the creation of a trust or equitable interest, which may not vest in the object of the trust within the time limited by law for the vesting of legal estates, will be nugatory.² Thus where a testator devised his real estate to trustees, in trust to apply the rents to the support of his wife, and his present and future grandchildren, during the life of the wife, and on her death to convey the estates to all his present and future grandchildren, as they respectively attained the age of twenty-five years, to hold to them and their heirs as tenants in common, it was held that the trust to convey was void, for the reason that some of the grandchildren might not become twenty-five years old until after the expiration of the life of the tenant for life, and twenty-one years in addition.³ So a testator cannot authorize his trustees to limit an estate beyond the limits of the rule against perpetuities; but the persons appointed to take must be capable of taking directly under the will. So where a testator devised land to a corporation in trust to convey the same to A. for life, with remainder to his oldest son for life, remainder to the son's oldest son for life, and so on in an endless series, and in default of issue of A., then to B. for life, and remainder to his oldest son for life, and so on in the same manner as to the sons of A., it was held to be void and vain as a perpetuity. So if any directions are given which, if complied with, must enforce a perpetuity, they will be void; as when a testator gave land to a college, and directed that the same should be leased forever to his wife's relations at two-thirds its value, it was held to be a void direction, as tending to a perpetuity.

In private trusts the beneficial interest is vested absolutely in some individual or individuals who are, or within a certain time may be, definitely ascertained; and to whom, therefore, collectively, unless under some disability, it is, or within the allowed limit will be, competent to control, modify, or end the trust. Private trusts of this kind cannot be extended beyond the legal limitations of a perpetuity, as before stated. But a trust created for charitable or public purposes is not subject to similar § 386. A legal estate in fee cannot be conveyed to a person with a provision that it shall not be alienated, or that it shall not be subject to the claims of creditors; and so trusts cannot in general be created with a proviso, that the equitable estate, or interest of the cestui que trust, shall not be alienated or charged with his debts. (a) If it is ascertained that an interest is vested in the cestui que trust, the mode in which or the time when he is to reap the benefit is immaterial. The law does not allow property, whether legal or equitable, to be fettered by restraints upon alienation.

Therefore, when an equitable interest is once vested in the cestui que trust, he may dispose of it, or it may pass to his assignces by operation of law, if he becomes a bankrupt. Thus a trust for a person's support, or to pay the interest to a person for life, as the trustees may think proper,2 or when it shall become payable, or in such sums or portions, and at such times and in such manner as the trustees think best,4 may be exercised according to the discretion of the trustees; (a) but the bankruptcy of the cestui que trust puts an end to the discretion of the trustees, and vests the whole interest in the assignees; and this is so, even where the trustees were directed to pay as they should think proper, and at their will and pleasure and not otherwise, so that the cestui que trust should have no right, claim, or demand, other than the trustees should think proper. The court thought, in Snowdon v. Dales, that, taking the whole instrument together, the cestui que trust had a vested interest, that these directions applied only to the manner of enjoyment, and that the equitable interest vested in the assignces at his bankruptcy. 5 The test is, Would executors of the cestui que trust have a right to call for any arrears? if so, the assignees would have the right to call for the future income or interest.6

§ 386 a. This doctrine, that the incidents of a legal title attach to an absolute equitable interest, and that an equitable estate for life in any other than a married woman carries with it the power of alienation by the cestui que trust, and may be taken for the payment of his debts, and that no provision which does not operate to terminate his interest can protect it from the claims of creditors, is the well-settled law of England, and has been approved and applied in many dicta and decisions in the United States.¹ But it has not been allowed to pass unchallenged, and there is eminent authority in the Federal and the State courts for the proposition, that the power of alienation is not a necessary incident to an equitable estate for life, and that the owner of property may, in the free exercise of his bounty, so dispose of it as to secure its enjoyment to the objects of his bounty without making it alienable by them or liable for their debts, and that this intention, clearly expressed by the founder of a trust, must be carried out by the courts.²(a) In those States, however,

The argument in these cases proceeds upon the ground, that the doctrine of the English cases must rest upon the rights of creditors; and it is claimed that the policy of the States of this Union has not been carried so far in furtherance of creditors' rights, that creditors can have no claim upon property which belonged to the founder of the trust, and of which he had the full and entire right of disposing as he chose, for the benefit of the cestui que trust, who parts with nothing in return, and that the intent of the donor clearly expressed in disposing of his property for a lawful purpose must be carried out; and the laws enacted in nearly or quite every State, exempting property of greater or less amounts in value from liability for the payment of debts, are relied on as showing the policy of these States. It is conceded that there are, however, limitations, which public policy or general statutes impose upon dispositions of property, such as where the doctrine of the English cases has been adopted. these distinctions and observations must be borne in mind. If the absolute equitable interest is in the cestui que trust, it goes to his assignees or creditors in case of insolvency. And it may be said that, if an absolute equitable interest is given to a cestui que trust, no restraints upon alienation can be imposed. But a trust may be so created that no interest vests in the cestui que trust; consequently, such interest cannot be alienated, as where property is given to trustees to be applied in their discretion to the use of a third person, no interest goes to the third person until the trustees have exercised this discretion. So if property is given to trustees to be applied by them to the support of the cestui que trust and his family, or to be paid over to the cestui que trust for the support of himself and the education and maintenance of his children. In short, if a trust is created for a specific pur-

those designed to prevent perpetuities and accumulations in corporations, &c. But the owner of property is governed by the rules of law, both in the use and enjoyment and in disposing of his property; and the doctrine in question seems to be founded upon the rule that title to property includes the right of alienation and liability for debts, and it seems impossible that there can be any reason in public policy, under a free government, having for its object the growth and development of a commercial people; for such a limitation of the incidents of title to property and the argument from the exemption laws would seem to be well answered by the maxim, expressio unius est exclusio alterius. Many of the American cases, where the English doctrine has been doubted or denied, seem to have been cases of trusts for the support and maintenance of the cestui que trust; and a clearly manifested intention on the part of the donor that the income of the fund shall be devoted to that purpose may impose a duty and give a consequent power in the trustee, either in his discretion or under the direction of the court, to pay over the income only in such manner as shall insure its application in accordance with the intent of the donor and protect it from the claims of creditors and the improvidence of the beneficiary, with substantially the same result upon the absolute character of the estate of the cestui que trust as if the instrument declaring the trust had expressly provided that the payments should be made at the discretion of the trustee, - a result more in accordance with the rules of interpretation than a strict adherence to a definition to the extent of defeating the accomplishment of the benefit intended by the donor.

pose, and is so limited that it is not repugnant to the rule against perpetuities and is in other respects legal, neither the trustees, nor the cestui que trust, nor his creditors or assignees, can divest the property from the appointed purposes. (a) Any conveyance, whether by operation of law or by the act of any of the parties, which disappoints the purposes of the settlor by divesting the property or the income from the purposes named, would be a breach of the trust. Therefore it may be said, that the power to create a trust for a specified purpose does, in some sort, impair the power to alienate property.

§ 386 b. In the cases referred to in the last section, it will be perceived that the trust may be for a particular purpose, and that purpose may not be exclusively for the benefit of the primary cestui que trust; as where an estate was vested in trustees by a marriage settlement in trust to apply the annual produce thereof "for the maintenance and support of A. B., his wife and children," it was held that the wife and children were to be supported, and that A. B. was entitled to the surplus after their support, and that such surplus would go to his assignees in case of his bankruptcy: 2 but when the trustees have an arbitrary power of applying such part of an income as they see fit to support of a cestui que trust, and for no other purpose, it was held that nothing passed to his assignees. 3 And so if the trustees are to apply the money to the support of one and his wife and children, nothing tangible can pass to the assignces; but if the power is not arbitrary, but is imperative on the trustees to pay over the income for the support of the cestur que trust and another person or persons, the assignces are entitled to take a part upon the insolvency of one, or the whole in the event of the death of the others.²

§ 387. There is a further exception to the general rule, that an equitable interest, without the right to alienate, cannot be created; and that is in the case of trusts created for married women. It is not unusual to create trusts for married women, and give such women all the rights of unmarried women over their separate equitable interests, and at the same time to insert a clause against their anticipating the income, by which means they are unable to assign or transfer it, or in any way receive any benefit from the property, except by receiving the income, as it becomes due and payable.³

§ 388. But though a settlor cannot put a restraint upon alienation, or exclude the rights of creditors, he may settle property upon another in such manner that it cannot be alienated, and creditors and assignees cannot take it. But in such case the cestui que trust must lose the use of the property in case of his bankruptcy. Thus A. may settle property upon B. until alienation or bankruptcy, with a limitation over to C. upon either event. Or A. may give real or personal estate to B. with a proviso, that, on alienation or bankruptcy, it shall shift over to C.⁴ But a clause divesting the property upon alienation alone, will embrace only the voluntary acts of the party, and will not apply to transfers by operation of law, as by bankruptcy, unless it was intended that the clause should have so wide a signification. Nor will a power to confess judgment be a voluntary act of alienation, unless it was within the contemplation of the parties; nor will the marriage of a woman be an alienation of her choses in action. So if there is a clause against anticipation, an assignment of arrears already accrued, and not of future income, is good. An assignment in general words will not embrace property which would be forfeited by such assignment.

§ 390. Thus where trusts are complete in themselves, or are what are termed executed trusts, courts will not mould, alter, or put any peculiar construction on them, in order to avoid or evade the rule against perpetuities. The ordinary rules of construction will be adhered to without regard to the consequences of avoiding trusts that are illegal.2 But in cases of executory trusts, where trustees are directed to settle a formal deed of trust upon terms which are faintly and incompletely sketched, another rule will be applied. If from the articles or will it appears that a perpetuity was intended, that must be the end of the trust, whether executed or executory. But if the direct object of the limitations suggested in the articles is not the creation of a perpetuity, and if the remoteness is confined to some of the distant links only in the chain of limitations, equity, in decreeing the settlement, will carry into effect the general intention, especially if the expression of that intention clearly indicates that the limitations are to be carried out so far as the law allows.3

§ 391. In some of the States, legislation has been had whereby the period within which estates must vest is short-Thus in Alabama¹ estates may be given to wife and children, or children only, severally, successively, and jointly, and to the heirs of the body of the survivor, if they come of age, and in default thereof over. But gifts to others than wife and children must vest within the term of three lives in being, and ten years thereafter. In Connecticut,2 no estate can be given by deed or will to any person or persons, except such as are in being, or to the immediate issue or descendants of such as are in being at the time of making the deed or will. In New York, Michigan, Minnesota,5 and Wisconsin,6 the absolute power of alienation cannot be suspended, by any limitation or condition, for a longer period than the continuance of two lives in being at the creation of the estate, except that a contingent remainder in fee may be limited on a prior remainder in fee to take effect in the event that the persons to whom the first remainder is limited shall die under the age of twenty-one years, or upon any other contingency by which the estate of such persons may be determined during their minority. Successive limitations of estates for life are not valid except to persons in being at the time of their creation. And if a remainder is limited on more than two successive estates for lives in being, all the subsequent successive estates are void; and upon the death of those two persons the remainder will take effect as if no other life-estate had been created. No remainder can be created for the life of a person other than the grantee or devisee of such estate, unless such remainder is in fee; nor can a remainder be created upon such an estate in a term of years, unless it is for the whole residue of the term. If more than two lives are named, the remainder takes effect upon the death of the two persons first named, in the same manner as if no other persons had been named or lives introduced. A contingent remainder cannot be limited on a term for years, unless the contingency on which it is limited is such that it must vest during the continuance of two lives in being at the creation of such remainder, or at the termination of such term of years. Thus a limitation to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder to C. and D., and the survivor of them, is within the statute, and void as to C. and D. as a limitation upon more than two lives in being. If the power of alienation is suspended for an indefinite period, the trust is void.

absolute power of alienation cannot be suspended by limitations or conditions for a longer period than during a life or lives in being and twenty-one years and ten months; which is substantially the common-law rule in the form of a statute. So, in Iowa, alienation cannot be suspended for a period longer than lives in being and twenty-one years. In Arkansas² and Vermont,³ their constitutions declare that a perpetuity shall not be allowed. What is a perpetuity in those States would necessarily, in the absence of legislation, be determined by the common-law rule. So it is conceived that the common law prevails in those States. In all the other States, except perhaps Louisiana, where the rules of property were derived from the civil law or the code of France, and California, where they were derived from the Spanish laws, the common-law rules as to perpetuities are in force, and trusts that are contrary to these rules are void.

§ 393. Intimately connected with this matter is the rule against accumulations. Trusts for accumulation must be strictly confined within the limits of the rule against perpetuities. It has been seen that a settlor may restrain the alienation of property for a life or lives in being and twenty-one years; and, in case the beneficiary is then en ventre sa mère, an addition of nine months may be made to the term. In analogy to this rule, a settlor may prevent the beneficial enjoyment of property for the same length of time, by directing an accumulation of the interest, income, rents, or profits.⁴

If a trust for accumulation may possibly exceed this limit, it is wholly void, and it cannot be cut down to the legal limit. (a)

§ 394. The above is the rule where there are no statutes to control it. Trusts, by which the vesting, alienation, or enjoyment of property is postponed beyond the legal period, are considered as contrary to public policy, and therefore void; and as courts cannot substitute legal directions in the place of illegal provisions in a will, the whole fails if there is an illegal gift for accumulation. The period during which accumulation might go on was found to be inconvenient in case a settlor availed himself of all its terms. Thus Mr. Thellusson, by an ingenious and skilful use of these legal limitations, constructed a will by which a fortune of £600,000 was left to accumulate for some person to come into existence in the future, answering a certain description, while mere pittances were given to his children and grandchildren then in being. It was calculated that accumulations might go on under this will from seventy-five to one hundred years, and that the gross accumulation would amount to a sum from £32,000,000 to £100,000,000, according to the time during which it might accumulate. The will was most carefully considered and discussed in all the courts, but it was found to be drawn earefully within the law, and all its provisions were sustained. 1 Thereupon Parliament interfered, and passed a statute, usually called the Thellusson Act, which curtailed the period during which accumulations to accumulate. Rogers' Estate, 179 Penn. St. 602.

In New York, directions to accumulate rents, except during the minority of legatees, are void by statute. See Spencer v. Spencer, 56 N. Y. S. 460.

might be directed. (a) This act established four alternate periods during which accumulations might be made: (1) The life of the settlor; (2) Twenty-one years from the death of the settlor; (3) The minority or minorities of any persons living at the death of the settlor; (4) During the minority or minorities of any person or persons who, if of full age, would be entitled under the limitations to the income which is directed to be accumulated.

§ 395. It has been determined that these four periods are alternative, and not cumulative, and that accumulations must be confined to one of them.² If the accumulation does not begin until several years after the testator's death, it must cease at the end of twenty-one years from his death,³ excluding the day of his death.⁴ The act further directs, that any accumulation directed contrary to its provision shall be void. By these words accumulations directed contrary to the statute are not wholly void, as at common law, but only the excess beyond the time allowed by the statute is void.⁵ Mr.

Lewis calls this a "rule of construction entirely novel." 1 It is also said, that the act is one of restraining force, and cannot give validity to trusts for accumulation, which are in themselves void, as transgressing the common-law limits of a perpetuity. Thus a direction to accumulate beyond the time allowed by the statute, but within the time allowed by the common law, will be good for the actual time allowed by the statute, and void only for the excess; but a direction to accumulate, beyond the rule of common law against perpetuity, is wholly void notwithstanding the statute. Consequently, in England a trust for accumulation may verge almost upon the outside of the limit of a perpetuity, and vet be void only for the excess beyond the time established in the statute; but if a trust for accumulation transcends in the slightest degree the boundary of a perpetuity, it is wholly void, and will fail without regard to the actual course of events.2

§ 396. If a good bequest is made to a devisee, subject to an illegal or void direction to accumulate, as where such direction is independently engrafted upon the devise, and can be stricken out without destroying the substantial form of the gift, the gift may be held to be good, but the direction to accumulate void.³ But where the gift is limited to take effect after a prescribed period of accumulation, and out of the accumulated fund, as part of the subject-matter of the gift, and such period of accumulation is illegal or too remote, the gift itself will fail, as the form of the gift in such case is of the substance of it. If the gift and all its accumulations are of necessity to vest in some person absolutely, in such manner that he will have a right to call for the fund, and stop the accumulations within the legal period, the bequest will be good, although such persons should allow the accumulations to go on as directed; that is, the same rule applies as in the case of perpetuities. The law concerns itself with the possibilities of an illegal accumulation, and not with the fact, whether a person, having an absolute vested right to a fund, allows it to go on accumulating in accordance with a void direction.

§ 397. When a direction to accumulate is void for a part of the term, the income during such void part will belong to the heir or next of kin, or to the residuary legatee. Jarman has pointed out the destination of such income as follows: (1) Where there is a present gift in possession, and the direction for accumulation is merely to govern the mode of enjoyment, the result is to give those entitled the present income, the same as if the direction had not been given.3 (2) Where the trust for accumulation is grafted upon an estate where vesting is deferred or made contingent until after the period of accumulation, the statute by stopping the accumulation does not hasten the vesting or the possession, and the income goes to the residuary legatee or the heir, according as it is personal or real estate, until the vesting or possession of the estate is matured. But where the residue is not given absolutely, but only for life or years, the interest upon a legacy thus directed to be accumulated beyond the legal period goes into the residue of the estate as capi $tal.^4(a)$ (3) Where a residue is directed to be accumulated,

the income, when its accumulation becomes illegal, will go to the heir or next of kin, according as the property may be real or personal estate. same in each State. In those States accumulations may be directed by deed or will, during the minority of one or more persons, to commence with the creation of the estate out of which the accumulation is to be made, and to end with the minority of the persons named. If there is a direction for an accumulation for a longer period, the excess only is void. In Alabama, accumulations can go on only for ten years, unless they are for the benefit of a minor child in being at the creation of the trust, or at the death of the testator, in which case they may continue during its minority. In Pennsylvania,2 trusts for accumulation cannot be created for a longer term than the life or lives of the grantor or testator, and the term of twenty-one years from the death of such grantor or testator, and if these limits are exceeded, the excess is void. In the other States, the common-law rules, as before stated, are supposed to prevail. The rule in regard to accumulation is analogous to the rules in regard to the vesting of executory estates. At common law, the same rule prevails in both cases. In many of the States, the rules regulating the vesting of such estates have been altered by statutes. Whether the modification of those rules by statute, without reference to the rule as to accumulations, would also alter the rule as to accumulations in those States does not seem to have been considered.

§ 399. Where there are no statutes regulating accumulations, a direction to accumulate a fund for a charity, for a term beyond the common-law limit, does not vitiate the gift for the charity, although no limit has been determined by courts during which an accumulation for a charity may be permitted. It is probable that courts would take care that no extraordinary or extravagant term for accumulation should be allowed for a future and prospective good. But where there are statutes against accumulations, charities will be governed by the same rules unless they are specially excepted. (a)

§ 400. In Bassil v. Lister,² it was determined that a direction of a testator that premiums on policies of insurance should be paid out of his estate, upon the lives of his sons during their lives, was not a direction for an accumulation within the prohibition of the statute. The case is severely criticised in Jarman on Wills;³ but it would seem, that it would not be illegal for a testator to direct the premiums to be paid upon a life policy, if the primary object of such a direction is not accumulation, but security or safety. The question cannot arise, however, in the absence of statutory provisions upon the subject of accumulations; for it can be an accumulation for one life only in being at the time, and such an accumulation is legal by the rules of the common law. the bond is obliged to pay the full amount, he is not discharged from the trust, nor does the trust property vest in him beneficially. He is still a trustee, and must account for the trust property, and all the income and profits. Courts of equity, however, in such cases have power to do equity; and the trustee would not be ordered to convey the trust property without repayment to him of the money paid out on his bond. Until the trustee has been discharged, the cestui que trust may require the due execution of the trust; and where the trustee will not take proper steps to enforce a claim against a debtor, he may file a bill against the trustee for the execution of the trust and to obtain the proper order for using the trustee's name or for obtaining a receiver to use the trustee's name.² Trustees will be held to great strictness in their dealings with the estate, but courts will treat them leniently when they act in good faith.³ A trustee is bound to exercise ordinary care and judgment, and it is no excuse for him that he did not possess them; by accepting a trust, whether gratuitous or not, he undertakes that he does possess and will exercise them. 4 (a)

In England, § 30 of Lord St. Leonard's Act (22 & 23 Vict. ch. 30), enabling trustees to obtain the advice or direction of the court of chancery, does not relate to nice questions of law, but was intended to procure for trustees the assistance of the court upon points of minor importance in the management of the trust estate. In re Tyrrell's Trusts, 23 L. management of property for the benefit of another, he has no right to impose that duty on others, and if he does he will be responsible to the cestui que trust, to whom he owes the duty. Therefore, if a trustee confides his duties or the trust fund to the care of a stranger, 2 or to his attorney, 3 or even to his cotrustee or coexecutor,4 he will be personally responsible. But, before this responsibility can arise, the trustee must have accepted the office. Where a person named executor received a bill by post, and passed it over to a coexecutor who had accepted the trust, it was held that the act might be considered as the act of a stranger, and did not impose any responsibility. 5 So where a coexecutor collected money, and paid it to a banker, who was also his coexecutor, and whom the testator employed as his banker, he was held excused for trusting the same person as his coexecutor whom the testator trusted as his banker.6

§ 403. So trustees are not responsible, if they follow the directions of the settlor. Thus, where a testator recommended his executors to employ a person who had been his own agent and clerk, and they employed him to collect moneys, and he became insolvent, it was held that, as the testator pointed out the agent to whom certain business might be delegated, the executors were not liable for the loss, if they used due diligence to recover the money. 1 So if an executor pays over money which he has no right to retain. Thus a testator appointed A., B., and C. his executors, and authorized A. to sell real estate for certain purposes. A. employed B. as his agent to sell the real estate; B. sold the estate and paid the money over to A., who misapplied it; and it was held that B. received the money, not as executor, but as agent of A., and as A. had authority to sell, he had a right to the money, and that B. could not retain it, and was not responsible for it.2

§ 404. But there are circumstances where the trustees must employ agents. (a) Lord Hardwicke said: "There are two sorts of necessity, legal necessity and moral necessity. As to the first a distinction prevails. Where two executors join in giving a discharge for money, and only one of them receives it, they are both answerable for it; because there is no necessity for both to join in the discharge, the receipt of either being sufficient; but if trustees join in giving a discharge and one receives, the other is not answerable, because his joining in the discharge was necessary. Moral necessity is from the usage of mankind, if the trustee acts prudently for the trust, as he would have done for himself, 'and according to the usage of business;' as if a trustee appoint rents to be paid to a banker at that time in credit, but who afterwards breaks, the trustee is not answerable. So in the employment of stewards and agents; for none of these cases are on account of necessity, but because the persons acted in the usual method of business." 1 Other cases have held that "necessity includes the usual course of business," 2 as in employing a broker in making investments of a class usually so made.3 But the agent must not be employed out of the scope of his regular business.4 Where an executor in London remitted money to an executor in the country to pay debts there due, it was held to be a necessary transaction in the course of business, and the executor in London was not responsible for the loss of the money by his coexecutor in the country. 5 So, where A. and B. were assignees of a bankrupt, and A. signed dividend checks and delivered them to B. for his signature, and for delivery to the creditors, and they were stolen from B. and negotiated at the bank, it was held that Λ , was not responsible for the loss, as he had delegated the checks to B. in the necessary course of the business. 6 So a trustee is not called upon, in the ordinary course of business, to take security from the agent or other person whom he employs. To One trustee may employ his cotrustee as his agent, or one trustee may act for the whole, within the scope of those duties where an agent may be employed. 8(a)

§ 405. It was held in one case, that assignees were responsible for the loss of money by an attorney employed by them to collect debts due the estate, on the ground that there was no necessity for them to allow the attorney to receive a shilling of the money except the costs, as he could not give a valid receipt for the same; and Lord Eldon was cited as an authority for this. Mr. Lewin questions this case, and says that trustees must not allow money to remain in the hands of an attorney, but that the authorities are doubtful which say that money may not pass through the hands of an attorney in the ordinary course of business. The case is authority, however, thus far, that attorneys cannot sign receipts for trustees, and if they authorize them so to do, the trustees will be responsible as for the acts of an agent improperly appointed.²

§ 406. If money is to be transmitted to a distant place, a trustee may do so through the medium of a responsible bank, or he may take bills from persons of undoubted credit, payable at the place where the money is to be sent; but the bills must be taken to him as trustee: if he neglects these precautions he will be responsible for any loss.³

Such a state of facts would not sustain a plea of plene administravit in a court of law. But a court of equity would adjust the account of the executor upon equitable principles.1 A court of probate, in taking the account, would also act upon equitable principles.2

§ 408. If a trust is of a discretionary nature, the trustee will be responsible for all the mischievous consequences of the delegation, and the exercise of the discretion will be absolutely void in the substitute. 3 (a) Nor can a discretionary trust be delegated to a cotrustee.4 Where a sum of money was given to three trustees to be distributed in charity in their discretion, and they divided it into three parts, and each took control of a third, Lord Hardwicke said: "I am of opinion that the trustees could not divide the charity into three parts, and each trustee nominate a third absolutely, because the determination of the propriety of every

- § 409. But it must be observed that the appointment of an attorney, proxy, or agent is not necessarily a delegation of the trust. The trustee must act at times through attorneys or agents, and if he determines in his own mind how to exercise the discretion, and appoints agents or instruments to carry out his determination, he cannot be said to delegate the trust, even though deeds or other instruments are signed by attorneys in his name. (a) So, if he gives instructions to his attorneys and agents how to act, it cannot be said to be a delegation of the trust.²
- § 410. It has been before stated that a sale or devise of the trust estate by the trustee will not be a delegation or communication of a discretionary trust to the vendee or devisee, unless the original instrument of trust contemplated and authorized such an act by vesting the trust or power annexed to the estate in the trustee and his assigns or devisees.³

Where the trustees are numerous, the court generally inserts an order that moneys may be paid to two or more.2 This rule is, however, relaxed in the United States; and it has been held that payment of a mortgage to one of two trustees is a valid payment.³ So all the trustees must join in proving a debt against a bankrupt; 4 but, under special circumstances, the court may order the proof to be made by one or more, even when payment must be made to all the trustees.⁵ A different rule prevails in regard to bank stocks, for the bank recognizes only the legal title, and at law one joint-tenant may receive moneys; so one trustee may receive dividends upon public stocks, 6 or the rents of real estate, unless the tenant has had notice not to pay to one; 7 but all the trustees must join in conveying such stocks or in executing a conveyance of land, 8 or pledging the trust property. 9 A deed of land executed by one trustee does not convey his share, as in the case of ordinary joint-tenants. 10 Where a deed was executed by two of three trustees, the burden was put upon the purchaser to prove that the other trustee was dead. 11 It has been said, however, that in a case of necessity, and after considerable time, the concurrence of a cotrustee may be presumed in some transactions. 12 A banker may require checks to be signed by one only, or by all the trustees. But if trustees place money at a banker's in such manner that one of their number can withdraw it in his sole name, all the trustees will be liable in case of a loss under such an arrangement.¹

§ 413. In the case of a public trust, where there are several trustees, the act of the majority is held to be the act of the whole number; 2 but the act of the majority must be strictly within the sphere of their power and duty.3 When a special power is given to trustees, it cannot be exercised by a majority only: all must join.4 If a settlement declares, that, on the death or resignation of a trustee, the surviving trustees shall appoint his successor, all the surviving trustees must join in the appointment.⁵ Where the trustees are numerous, as in the case of a charity, the court may direct that a majority shall form a quorum. Private trusts, where the rule prevails that all must join, cannot be affected by these principles, or by any agreements that may be made by the parties. ⁶ But an instrument of trust may contain express directions that the trust shall be administered according to the will of the majority of the trustees, in which case the minority will be compelled to give effect to the determinations of the majority.7 So if the power is given to either of two trustees.8 So trustees are bound to concur in every merely ministerial act necessary for the execution of the trust; and if they refuse, they may be compelled by order of the court. - § 414. A bare authority, committed to several persons, ceases upon the death of one; but if the authority is coupled with an interest, it passes to the survivors. (a) The committee of a lunatic's estate are mere protectors without any interest, and the death of one extinguishes the office. An executorship survives, for the joint executors have an interest in the estate. So testamentary guardianship survives, as such guardians have an authority over the estate. So cotrustees have an authority coupled with an interest in the legal title of the estate, and the office is impressed with the quality of survivorship. If land is given to two trustees in trust to sell, and one dies, the other may sell, as he holds the legal title in the land, and the office of trustee. Otherwise, the precaution taken by a settlor to guard his estate, by increasing the number of trustees, would be futile; for the death of one of them might result in defeating his whole trust. Where the trust was to raise £2000 out of the testator's estate, by sale or otherwise at the discretion of the trustees, who should invest the same in their own names upon trust, one of the trustees died and the other sold; and Vice-Chancellor Wood held that the survivor could make a good title. He said: "I find a clear estate in the vendor, and a clear duty to perform. Is it to be said that the sale is a breach of trust, because the cotrustee is dead? If I were to lay down such a rule, it would come to this, that when an estate is vested in two or more trustees, to raise a sum by sale or mortgage, you must come into this court on the death of one of the trustees." 1 The survivorship of the trust will not be defeated, because the settlement contains a power for restoring the original number of trustees by new appointments, unless there is something in the instrument that specially manifests such an intention.3 Where an act of Parliament declared that "survivors should, and they were thereby required "to appoint new trustees, the court expressed an opinion that the clause was not imperative, but simply directory.4

"that where lands or leases were conveyed to two or more upon trust, and one of them receives all or the most part of the profits, and after dyeth or decayeth in his estate, his cotrustee shall not be charged or be compelled in chancery to answer for the receipts of him so dying or decayed, unless some practice, fraud, or evil dealing appear to have been in them to prejudice the trust; for they being by law jointtenants, or tenants in common, every one by law may receive either all or as much of the profits as he can come by; it is no breach of trust to permit one of the trustees to receive all or the most part of the profits; it falling out many times that some of the trustees live far from the lands, and are put in trust out of other respects than to be troubled with the receipt of the profits. (a) But his lordship and the said judges did resolve, that if, upon the proofs or circumstances, the court should be satisfied that there had been any dolus malus, or any evil practice, fraud, or ill intent in him that permitted his companion to receive the whole profits, he should be charged though he received nothing." And the same doctrine has been acted upon from that day to this.1 Connivance, co-operation, permission, acquiescence, or participation will bring liability; 2 and ignorance of the default of a cotrustee if it results from neglect is no excuse, as

where one trustee collects a fund and keeps it without reinvestment, the other trustees may be liable. 1

§ 416. In the same case of Townley v. Sherborne, it was determined that if the trustees joined in signing a receipt for money, they should each be responsible for it.² But where the administration of a trust is vested in several trustees, they must all join in signing a receipt for the principal or capital sum of the trust fund, and it is now established that a trustee who joins in the receipt for conformity, but without receiving any of the money, shall not be answerable for the misapplication of the money by his cotrustee who receives it; as it would be tyranny to punish a trustee for an act which the nature of his office compelled him to do.³ But in such case the burden is on the trustee to prove that his acknowledgment of the receipt of the money was merely for conformity, and that in fact he received none of the money, and that his cotrustee received it all.⁴ If there is no evidence upon this point, all the trustees who join in signing the receipt will be held responsible in solido, on the ground that the acknowledgment in the receipt is prima facie evidence of the facts stated. At law the receipt is conclusive evidence and estops the trustee from denying that he received any of the money; but a court of equity rejects estoppels, and pursues the actual truth, and will determine and decree according to the verity and justice of the fact. But if a trustee, signing a receipt, receives any part of the money, and it does not appear how much, he will be answerable for the whole; as, where he mixes his corn with another's heap, he must lose the whole.

§ 417. It was said in Townley v. Sherborne,⁵ that individuals are sometimes joined in a trust, where it is not expected that they are to take an active part in its management; and it is well settled that each of several trustees is not bound to take upon himself the active management of every part of a trust; and it seems that the management of the whole may be left to any one of the number.⁶ So trustees may apportion their duties among themselves, as where one of two guardians accepted the trust, saying he would take care of the real estate, but would have nothing to do with receiving and disbursing money, which duties the other guardian assumed, it was held that the former was not answerable for the defaults of the latter.⁷ It sometimes happens that the convenience or necessities of business require the trust funds to be in the hands of one trustee. If a loss happens from the default of such trustee, the others will not be held to answer. As where a bond is to be collected by one trustee, or money is put in the hands of one to be paid away; or where a fund was given to three trustees, one in London and two in Cornwall, to build an almshouse in London, it was held that the fund was properly in the hands of the trustee in London, and that during the construction of the almshouse the others were not answerable for the loss of part of it by his insolvency. The same rule applies where the shares of a company are required to be in the name of a single individual;² and so where the settlor appoints one of the trustees to perform certain acts, or make certain sales, or receive certain moneys.³ But if trustees expressly agree to be answerable for each other, courts will hold them to their agreement.4 So this power to apportion the duties of the trust, or the rule that a trustee not receiving the money shall not be liable for the defaults of his cotrustees, does not excuse him for not exercising a general superintendence and care over the trust, or for not intervening, if the fact come to his knowledge that the fund is unsafe, or that it ought not longer to remain under the control of the other trustee. 5 Even a direct provision in the deed of settlement, that trustees shall not be liable for the defaults of their cotrustees, does not excuse them from this general care and superintendence, and from the duty of intervening, if they hear any fact tending to call for their intervention; nor will it justify them in paying over the money to the sole credit of one trustee; and generally it will not authorize them to do any acts which would be a breach of trust, if such clause was not in the deed or will. While one trustee is not liable for the defaults of cotrustees which he has not the means of preventing or guarding against, yet he must exercise due care in the approval of or acquiescence in the acts of his associates.² If the trustees join in accounting, and hold themselves out, in joint accounts, as acting together and as jointly liable, they will be estopped to deny their joint liability to those who have acted on a knowledge of such accounts; and this would be almost conclusive evidence of a joint liability in all cases.³ So, if the will makes them all liable for the acts of each, or contemplates the joint action and joint liability of all, they cannot excuse themselves if they accept the trust.4

§ 418. Though a trustee may join in a receipt without receiving any of the money, and may not be liable or answerable for it, yet he may be responsible for the whole, though he receives none; thus, if knowing that his cotrustee has no character or credit, and is unfit to manage the trust funds, he suffers the money to be received by him, or to remain in his hands, he will be answerable, as if he receives it himself, on the ground that he has committed a breach of trust in not using due care and diligence; 1 and the same rule will apply if he suffers the money to remain in the hands of his cotrustee, however competent and responsible, longer than is necessary.2 It is also the duty of the trustee to ascertain the actual facts, and not rely upon the bare assertion of his cotrustee, in relation to the condition of the trust fund.3 Thus, where two trustees allowed their cotrustee to open a box at their banker's in which were stocks and bonds, and he converted some of the trust property to his own use, but assured his cotrustees that all was right, they were held to answer for the loss, because they had not taken the pains to ascertain the facts, but had relied upon the assertion of their cotrustee. 4 So trustees must ascertain the condition of the funds at all times within which a reasonable man should ascertain the condition of his own property; as where a mortgage to three trustees had been paid off, and the money came to the hands of one, and was invested in bills and notes of the East India Company payable in two years, and these were paid into the hands of the same trustee to whom the mortgage had been paid, and the acting trustee asked to have the money remain in his hands on a mortgage to be given; and it so remained for a year, no mortgage being executed, the other trustees taking no active steps for several years to know the actual condition of the trust fund; this was held to be a breach of trust, and they were decreed to make good the loss. A trustee is bound to inquire and ascertain for what purpose a cotrustee desires the money; what investments he proposes to make, and what securities he proposes to take, and he must take pains to see that the proposed investments are actually made. If a trustee performs his duty in these respects, and his cotrustee, in spite of these precautions, squanders or wastes the fund, he will not be answerable therefor. So if the cotrustee gets possession of the trust fund by a fraud or crime, the others will not be liable. But if a trustee receive any portion of the funds from a transaction, he must personally see to the application of them: he cannot pass them over to his cotrustee for investment or distribution; and if he do so, he will be personally responsible for the acts and defaults of such cotrustee.

so if a trustee does not collect a debt due to the estate from his cotrustee. In all cases, if a trustee becomes aware of any fact tending to show that his cotrustee is committing a breach of trust, or if he learns any fact endangering the trust fund, he must communicate it to his cotrustees or make application to the court, and take active measures to protect the fund, or he will be personally liable for its loss. If a trustee himself receives the trust fund or part of it, and pays it over to his cotrustee, who wastes it, he will be liable for it; and so if he permits his cotrustee to receive money, having notice that it will be misapplied, or if he is guilty of any negligence or want of reasonable care. 4 (a)

§ 419 a. If the trust instrument gives the cestui a right to appoint one to whom the trustee shall convey, this power cannot be exercised by will, for the will takes effect only at the death of the cestui, and that very event terminates the relation of trust between the trustee and cestui.⁵ This reasoning seems very flimsy, and likely to produce injustice if applied to cases where the facts are different from those in the above case, where the title was held to have passed by the will itself, though not by the trustee's deed in pursuance of the will.

§ 420. In a few cases, it has been held that, if trustees join in executing a power of sale, and one receive the money, all must be held answerable, if it is lost by the one that receives it. These decisions have been founded upon the rule, that all the trustees who join in any transaction must be responsible for carrying it through. But they ignore the other rule, that a power must be strictly executed by all the persons to whom it is given, and that if a trustee joins in the power, and signs receipts for conformity, but receives none of the money, omits no duty, and does no act tending to a breach of the trust, he will not be held for a loss occasioned by a breach of trust by the other trustees. The great preponderance of authority is, that a sale under a power is not different from the execution of a receipt for the trust moneys.² If, however, a proper investment of the money received under a sale is once made, the hability of a nonacting trustee ceases under all the cases.3 If a trustee renounces the trust, he, of course, cannot be liable for a breach of the trust by the other trustees, unless the trust fund is in some manner in his hands, and is misapplied by him. 4 So the estate of a deceased trustee cannot be liable for a breach of trust by a surviving trustee, after the decease of a cotrustee.⁵ A distinction has been attempted between discretionary trusts and directory trusts as follows: it has been said, that, in discretionary trusts, that is, where the funds may be invested or employed according to the discretion of the trustees, a non-acting trustee will not be responsible for a misapplication of the fund by a cotrustee, unless he is guilty of some fraud or negligence that amounts to a breach of trust, upon the principles before stated; 1 but where a will is peremptory that certain investments shall be made by the trustees, all the trustees will be liable if the directions of the will are not carried out.² But these directory trusts may be executed by a part of the trustees, and the others may join for conformity, without doing more than is absolutely necessary to accomplish the trust, and therefore these trusts fall within the rule, that a trustee who signs receipts for conformity, and does no more, is not liable for a breach of trust by his cotrustee.³ But if the will expressly provide for the joint action and responsibility of the executors or trustees, it will be binding upon all those who assume the trust, and render them all liable for any loss through the default of one.4

§ 420 a. Where there are two trustees, and the management of the trust is left to one, and the acting trustee commits a breach of trust, the passive trustee is not entitled to indemnity from the acting trustee, unless there are some special circumstances, as where the acting trustee is solicitor for the trust, or has derived a personal benefit from his breach of trust.⁵

§ 421. Following the rule as to cotrustees, executors are generally liable only for their own acts, and not for the acts of their coexecutors.⁶ But while cotrustees may not be liable for money which they did not receive, although they joined in the receipt, coexecutors are always liable if they join in the receipts. (a) The reason is this: trustees must join in many acts, they having for the most part a joint power, while executors have a several power, over the estate. Each executor has an independent right over the personal property of his testator: he may sell it, and receive the purchase-money, and give receipts in his own name. If, therefore, an executor joins his coexecutor in signing a receipt, he does an unmeaning act, unless he intended to render himself jointly answerable for the money; and so the court hold, that if an executor joins in giving a receipt for money he shall be answerable, whether he received any of it or permitted his coexecutor to receive the whole. (b) So, if an executor joins in executing a power of sale, given

(a) "At the present day, executors and administrators hold the assets of the estate in a fiduciary capacity. Their rights and liabilities, in respect of the fund in their hands, are very like those of trustees. But this way of regarding them is somewhat modern." Holmes, J., in an article in 9 Harv. L. Rev. p. 42, which reviews instances of this change in the law. "The executor originally was nothing but a feoffee to uses. The heir was the man who paid his ancestor's debts and took his property. The executor did not step into the heir's shoes, and come fully to represent the person of the testator as to personal property and liabilities until after Bracton wrote his great treatise on the Laws of England." Clarke has been agreed to, though the case itself seemed to go further.4 Lord Harcourt, in Churchill v. Hobson, 5 started another distinction, that executors who joined in the receipt were liable to creditors, though they did not receive the money, while they were not liable to legatees or heirs; but this distinction has no standing in a court of equity, whatever may be the rule at law, and is now overruled.6

§ 423. But if the act is such that it is absolutely necessary that the executors should all join in it, their liability will be put upon the same ground as the liability of trustees joining; as, if it is necessary that they should indorse a bill in order to collect it, or that they should join in transferring stock. But even if the act is indispensable, it is still the duty of the executor to see that it is consistent with a due execution of the trust, and he must not rely upon the representations or assertions of his coexecutor, as to its necessity. He must use due diligence and make due investigations to ascertain if the representations are true; as where the debts should have been long paid in the ordinary course of administration a coexecutor applied to the other to join in a sale of stocks to pay the debts, and the executor inquired and learned that there were debts to be paid, but it afterwards appeared that the coexecutor had the money to pay the debts in his own hands; the executor who joined in conveying the stocks was held for the default of his coexecutor, on the ground of negligence in not knowing how the assets in the hands of the coexecutor were disposed of, and how it happened that the debts remained unpaid.²

- § 424. So an executor will be called upon to make good the loss of money that he allows to remain two years or any other unreasonable time in the hands of his coexecutor; but he will not be called upon to repay that part which he can show that his coexecutor actually expended in the execution of the trust. So, if an executor neglects for an unreasonable time to insist upon the payment of a debt to the estate due from his coexecutor, he will be liable to pay the debt himself.
- § 425. The same rules that apply to the powers and liabilities of coexecutors apply also to the powers and liabilities of joint administrators. There is one dictum that the liability of joint administrators is like the liability of cotrustees, but it is well settled that the liability of joint administrators and coexecutors is identical.²

§ 426. It must be borne in mind, that in the United States, administrators, executors, guardians, and a large class of trustees, are appointed by judges of probate, surrogates, ordinaries, or officers exercising a similar jurisdiction. All trustees appointed under wills, proved and recorded in probate courts, are appointed by decrees of the court in the same manner as executors. In many cases, a bond with sureties is required as a prerequisite to an appointment and qualification to act, unless such bond is expressly waived by the testator or the cestui que trust. This bond generally runs to the judge or some officer for the use and protection of those beneficially interested in the estate. If it is a joint bond, executed by all the joint administrators, guardians, coexecutors or cotrustees, it is in the nature of an agreement to be answerable for each other's acts and defaults. The remedy for a breach of trust in such cases is a suit upon the bond in the name of the proper person for the benefit of those interested, (a) against all the joint makers and sureties of the bond; and any breaches of trust, committed by either or all of the trustees, may be given in evidence, and a judgment against all will be rendered, although the breach of trust was committed by one alone.3 This joint liability of all the cotrustees under a joint bond results from the nature of the bond, and from the technical nature of an action at law for a breach of the bond by a breach of the trust. however, one of the coexecutors or cotrustees dies and a breach of trust is committed by the survivor after his death. the estate of the deceased executor cannot be made liable for the breach of the trust.1 It will be seen at once, that very few of the rules heretofore stated in relation to the liabilities of executors or trustees for the acts and defaults of their coexecutors or cotrustees have any bearing upon the liability of cotrustees who have given a joint bond for the faithful execution of the trust. The statutes of many of the States, however, provide that separate bonds with sureties may be taken from each of the administrators, executors, guardians, or trustees, as the case may be. And where separate bonds are taken from each of the executors or trustees, the liability of the executor or trustee for the acts and defaults of his coexecutor or cotrustee would be governed by the rules and principles hereinbefore stated.2 But if they sign a joint bond, they are jointly liable.3

§ 427. Trustees hold a position of trust and confidence. The legal title of the trust property is in them, and generally its whole management and control is in their hands. At the same time the beneficiaries of the trust may be women, or children, or persons incompetent to protect their own interests. For these reasons, to protect the weak and helpless on the one hand, and to prevent trustees from using their position and influence for their own gain, and to prevent them from hazarding the trust property upon what they may think to be profitable speculations, on the other, they are not allowed to make any profit from their office. They cannot use the trust property, nor their relation to it, for their own personal advantage. All the power and influence which the possession of the trust fund gives must be used for the advantage and profit of the beneficial owners, and not for the personal gain and emolument of the trustee. No other rule would be safe; nor would it be possible for courts to apply any other rule, as between trustee and cestui que trust.1 This rule is so stringent that Lord Eldon once sent a case to a master to inquire whether the privilege of sporting on the trust estate could be let for the benefit of the cestui que trust; if not, he thought the game should belong to the heir; the trustee might appoint a game-keeper for the preservation of game for the heir, but he ought not to keep up a lodge for his own pleasure. 2 So where a trustee retired from the office in consideration that his successor paid him a sum of money, it was held that the money so paid must be treated as a part of the trust estate, and that the trustee must account for it. as he could make no profit, directly or indirectly, from the trust property or from the position or office of trustee.3 If a trustee joins in betraying the trust for private gain, he will have to bear any loss that may fall on him by the dishonesty The law will not aid him against them. of his confederates. It will not unravel a tangled web of fraud for the benefit of one through whose agency the web was woven and who has himself become enmeshed therein. 4 Trustees may be enjoined from carrying out a contract made for their own benefit.5 But where one holds a trust for the support of another, the trustee may supply goods from his store at a fair price. This is not dealing with the trust for his private gain.¹

§ 428. A trustee, executor, or assignee cannot buy up a debt or incumbrance to which the trust estate is liable, for less than is actually due thereon, and make a profit to himself; but such purchase inures for the benefit of the trust estate, and the creditors, legatees, and cestuis que trust shall have all the advantage of such purchase.² But if a trustee buys up an outstanding debt for the benefit of the cestuis que trust, and they refuse to take it or to pay the purchasemoney, they cannot afterwards, when the purchase turns out to be beneficial, claim the benefit for themselves. 3 Nor can the trustee make any contract with the cestui que trust for any benefit, or for the trust property, nor can he accept a gift from the cestui que trust.4 The better opinion, however, is, that a trustee may purchase of the cestui que trust, or accept a benefit from him, but the transaction must be beyond suspicion; and the burden is on the trustee to vindicate the bargain or gift from any shadow of suspicion, and to show that it was perfectly fair and reasonable in every respect, and courts will scrutinize the transaction with great severity. 5 (a) So, if a trustee buys the trust property at private

§ 429. Trustees cannot make a profit from the trust funds committed to them, by using the money in any kind of trade or speculation, nor in their own business; nor can they put the funds into the trade or business of another, under a stipulation that they shall receive a bonus or other profit or advantage. In all such cases, the trustees must account for every dollar received from the use of the trust-money, and they will be absolutely responsible for it if it is lost in any such transactions. By this rule, trustees may be liable to great losses while they can receive no profit; and the rule is made thus stringent, that trustees may not be tempted from selfish motives to embark the trust fund upon the chances of trade and speculation.² If a trustee charge a bonus in his

to the estate shall have the advantages which are thus obtained. 1 As where a mortgagee had purchased the right of dower of the widow of a deceased mortgagor, the heir of the mortgagor, upon a bill to redeem, was held to have the right to take the purchase of the dower at the price which the mortgagee had paid.2 So an heir cannot hold an incumbrance for more than he gave for it, against the creditors of the ancestor's estate, 3 and it is conceived that the same rule applies to a devisee. 4 But if the heir or devisee is himself an incumbrancer at the death of the ancestor, he may buy in a prior, but not a subsequent, incumbrance, and hold it for the whole amount due. The court considers him, in buying such a prior incumbrance, not as heir or devisee, but as an incumbrancer or stranger; and so if, as such prior incumbrancer, he obtains a prior incumbrance by the bounty or gift of another, he shall hold such bounty or gift for the benefit of his own incumbrance, and there is no reason why he should hold it for the benefit of the creditors of the ancestor. 5 So the heir or devisee may hold a prior incumbrance for full value, though bought for less, against a subsequent incumbrancer.6 So, if one of several joint purchasers of an estate buy in an incumbrance for less than its face, he shall hold it for his copurchasers at the same price he paid.7 And the opinion has been expressed, that a tenant for life holds the same relation toward the remainder-man; and if such tenant buy in an incumbrance upon the estate for less than Luxembourg Ry. § 432. The rule that trustees can make no profit out of the estate is carried so far in England that they can receive no compensation for their services. In the United States, trustees are entitled to reasonable compensation. But both in England and the United States, a trustee can receive no indirect profit from the estate by reason of his connection with Thus a trustee cannot be appointed receiver with a salary, 2 nor would be appointed without compensation except under peculiar circumstances; for it is his duty to superintend and watch over the receiver.3 The same reasons do not apply for excluding a dry trustee.4 If trustees are factors, 5 or brokers, 6 or commission agents, 7 or auctioneers, 8 or bankers,9 or attorneys, or solicitors,10 they can make no charges against the trust estate for services rendered by them in their professional capacity to the estate of which they are trustees. They may employ the services of such agents, if necessary, and pay for them from the estate; but if they undertake to act in such capacities themselves for the estate. they can receive no compensation. This rule is so strict, that if the trustee has a partner, and employs such partner, no charge can be made by the firm; but if the trustee is excluded from all participation in the compensation, the partner of the trustee may be paid like any other person for similar services.² In one case where several trustees were made defendants, one of them, being a solicitor, conducted the defence, and was allowed his full costs, it not appearing that the costs were increased by such conduct.3 This case is put upon the ground that the services were rendered under the eye of the court, and there could be no danger of collusion; but the case is not approved in England, and has not been followed.4 In the United States, a trustee has been refused compensation as solicitor, for professional services rendered by himself for himself as trustee, on the ground that no man can make a contract with himself. 5 (a) set up a title to the trust property in himself, he should refuse to accept the trust. But if a claim is made upon him by a third person, adverse to the cestui que trust, he may decline to deliver over the property to his cestui que trust until the title is determined, or he is indemnified or secured against the consequences, 1 or he may pay the fund into court, 2 and if he neglects to do so, and thus makes a suit necessary, he will recover only such costs as he would have been entitled to if he had paid the money into court.3 A trustee must assume the validity of the trust under which he acts, until it is actually impeached, although he may have some suspicion that there may have been fraud or collusion in the appointment and settlement. 4 (a) So, if a trustee obtains a knowledge of facts that would defeat the title of his cestui que trust, and give the property over to another, he is not justified in morals in communicating such facts to such other person. His duty is to manage the property for his cestui que trust, and not to keep his conscience, or betray his title or interests: 5 and he can make no admissions prejudicial to the rights of his cestui que trust,6 nor can he use his influence to defeat the purposes of the trust as declared by the creator of it.7

In Thomson v. Eastwood, 2 A. C. 215, 233, Lord Cairns, L. C., held a trustee, not proved to be chargeable with personal fraud, liable for denying, unconscionably and upon untenable grounds, his beneficiary's title to trust-money, and thus postponing full payment.

§ 434. In England, a trustee, being in possession of real estate in trust, may profit from his trust if the cestui que trust dies without heirs; for, as the trustee is tenant in possession, there is no such failure of a tenant as to cause an escheat; and the trustee thenceforth holds the lands for his own use, there being no cestui que trust to call him to an account. This is a benefit to the trustee; but it arises rather from an absence of right in others, than from an affirmative right in himself. But if he is not in possession, or if he has need of the assistance of a court of equity to enforce his rights, the court will not act; 2 though it is said, that having the legal title, which a court of law must recognize, he can obtain all the rights which a court of law must give. 3 But if the cestui que trust devise the estate to another upon trusts that fail, the trustee must pass over the estate to the devisee, for the reason that the trustee can have no advantage from trusts that so fail, and be has no equity against the devisee to keep the estate.4

§ 435. Upon this rule of law in England, several questions were started in the case of Burgess v. Wheate,⁵ which are rather curious than practical in this country; as, for instance, if a purchaser should pay the money in full for land, and die without heirs, before he obtained a conveyance, could the vendor keep both land and purchase-money? Again, if a mortgagor in fee should die without heirs, could a mortgage in fee keep the whole estate, for the reason that there was no person having a right to redeem? Of course the equity of redemption would be assets for the payment of the debts of the mortgagor.¹ But if there were no debts, could the mortgagee keep a large estate for a small debt?² Another question was raised, whether a trust in such cases might not result to the grantor.³ No answers have been given to these questions by decided cases, and as they were put more than a century ago, it is not probable that a case will arise requiring their judicial determination.

§ 436. In the United States, if a cestui que trust should die without heirs, the trustee could not hold for his own beneficial use; but he would hold for the State as ultima hæres where all other heirs fail.⁴

§ 437. Where a cestui que trust of chattel dies without heirs, the trustee can take no benefit; for the beneficial use in such chattel will go as bona vacantia to the crown or State. So, if the cestui que trust makes a will and appoints an executor, but makes no further disposition of his personalty, the executor will take for the State; for the executor can take no beneficial interest unless the will expressly gives it to him.⁵

§ 437 a.6 Payment of a trust debt by crediting the trustee's individual account is not good. A trustee may in good faith compromise a doubtful debt due the trust estate, and a fraud committed by him upon others is admissible to show his zeal for the interests of the estate. But a compromise of a debt due from the trust by which an advantage is gained, as where a legatee accepted $1100 for a $3000 legacy, inures to the benefit of the trust estate, and the trustee cannot transfer the whole gain to one of the cestuis. 1 A trustee to sue for and recover certain property may make a fair and judicious compromise by which the title is secured to the cestui.2 Church trustees cannot, by their acts, create any lien on the trust property unless they have express authority for so doing.3 A trustee can be held personally for materials ordered by him for the trust estate, and on contracts made by him in its behalf, unless there be a special agreement to look only to the trust, and this even though the trustee acted under order of the court, this being merely a security to the trustee that he shall be indemnified out of the trust funds. 4 (a)

S. 847, it was intimated that, when the trustees are sued as such, for negligence causing personal injury, they cannot be held to answer personally in the same suit by amendment. See also Ferrier v. Trépannier, 24 Can Sup. 86.

But the mere fact of want of authority in a trustee to bind the estate will not make him personally liable in cases of executory contract where the facts show that no such liability was intended by either of the parties. (a) A trustee with absolute control can give a license for his life to a railway company to use the land for a roadbed. A trustee cannot go beyond the purposes of the trust deed and bind the estate.

Though "trustee" be added to the signature of a note or bond it may be mere descriptio personæ, and the obligation individual.⁴ And, on the other hand, although the signature of a receipt be merely that of the trustee as an individual, the receipt may be really given as trustee and bind the cestuis.⁵ A note, though not signed as trustee, will, as between the cestui and the trustee, be the obligation of the former if the debt was properly incurred for its benefit.⁶

§ 438. The first duty of a trustee, after his appointment and qualification to act, is to secure the possession of the trust property and to protect it from loss and injury. Until possession is properly taken by the trustee the grantor is entitled to the profits of the estate. If the trust property is an equitable interest or estate, he must give notice to the holder of the legal title; and if he cannot have the legal title transferred to himself, he must take such steps that no incumbrances can be put upon it by the settlor or assignor. If the trust fund consists in part of notes, bonds, policies of insurance, and other similar choses in action, notice should be given to the promisors, obligors, or makers of the instruments. This is the general rule in England and in many of the United States. (a) In some States, however, it is held that an assignment of a chose in action is complete in itself when the assignor and assignee have completed the transfer, and that notice to the debtor is not necessary in order to make the assignment valid as against third persons, or attaching creditors, or subsequent assignees without notice. 1 But it seems to be agreed in all the cases, that, if the debtor without notice and in good faith pays the debt to the assignor, it will be a good payment, and discharge him from further liability; but if he should pay after notice he would still be liable to the assignee.3 Under all circumstances, it is safer to give notice to the debtor, whether the courts of a State hold notice necessary or not. If the assignor receive the money of the debtor after the assignment, he will hold the money in trust for the assignee.4 These general rules concerning notice do not apply to equities in real estate.⁵ Trustees should also insist upon possession of all the notes, bonds, policies, and other obligations for the payment of money being delivered to them; for if negligent in this respect. and suits and costs arise, they might be made responsible personally.6 So, if there are debts or securities already due and payable to the trust estate, the trustees must proceed to collect them. If any loss happens to the estate from any delay, they would be responsible, and they may accept payment even before the debts are due. Where it is important for the trustees to give notice of an assignment to them, notice to one of several obligors is notice to all: so notice to one of several of a society of underwriters is sufficient; and if the obligors compose a corporation, there must be notice to the directors or trustees of the corporation. So, if notice to trustees is necessary in any case, notice to one is sufficient.

§ 439. There is no fixed time within which executors are to get in the choses in action of the testator. They must use due diligence; and what is due diligence depends upon the existing facts in every case, and a large discretion must necessarily be vested in the executor.⁵ If there is property that cannot be kept without great expense, it should be sold forthwith. If the testator's establishment is expensive, it should be broken up within a reasonable time; and, under special circumstances, two months were held to be reasonable.⁶ If there are shares or stocks in corporations, the executors must exercise a sound discretion to sell in the most advantageous manner, and at the most advantageous time. In the case of some Crystal Palace shares owned by a testator, a sale within a year was held to be the exercise of a reasonable discretion, although it was claimed that they ought to have been sold within two months.1 So, where a large part of an estate consisted of Mexican bonds, which the testator directed to be converted "with all convenient speed," it was held that these words added nothing to the implied duty of every executor to convert such property with all reasonable speed; that a conversion in the course of the second year was proper and reasonable; that if executors were bound to sell at once without reference to the circumstances, there would often be a great sacrifice of property, and therefore that executors were bound to exercise a reasonable discretion, according to the circumstances of each case.2 But generally stock should be sold within the year allowed for the settling of a testator's estate, and a delay beyond this time may render the executors or trustees liable for the loss, although they act in good faith, and although some of the trustees became of age only a short time before the sale.3 If, however, it is clear that the trustees have a discretion to sell or not according to their judgment, the case will be governed by the intention and not by the general rule.4

§ 440. Personal securities change from day to day; and as the death of the testator puts an end to his discretion in regard to them, unless he has exercised it in his will, the executor or trustee will become personally liable, if he does not get in the money within a reasonable time. 1 He must not allow the assets to remain out on personal security, 2(a) though it was a loan or investment by the testator himself.3 It is not enough for the executor to apply for payment through an attorney: he must follow the collection actively by legal proceedings, 4 unless he can show that such proceedings would have been futile and vain.⁵ An executor must take the same steps when his coexecutor is a debtor to the estate, even if the testator has been in the habit of depositing or lending money to the coexecutor as to a banker.6 Executors are not justified in dealing with a testator's money as he dealt with it himself, nor may they trust all the persons that he trusted. Nor will a direction in the will "to call in securities not approved by them" excuse executors from not calling in personal securities; for such direction refers to the different kinds of securities sanctioned by law and the court, and not to all investments outside the sanctions of the law. 1 If the executors are to get in the money "whenever they think proper and expedient," they will be liable for the fund if they allow it to remain uncollected out of kindness or regard for the tenant for life, and not upon an impartial judgment for the best interest of all the parties.2 If the outstanding debt is secured by a real mortgage, it ought not to be called in, if it is safe, until it is wanted in the course of the administration.3 But pains should be taken to ascertain whether the security is safe.4 If the mortgage security is not adequate, the executor or trustee must insist upon payment, even where the cestui que trust is to consent to every change of investment, and he refuses to consent; for nothing will justify conduct that endangers the fund.⁵ But if the fund is safe on a security sanctioned by the court and selected by the testator, it might be a breach of trust to call it in, and allow it to remain unproductive, or to invest it anew. 6 (a) But if trustees are ordered by the court to call in securities, and they neglect to do so, they will be liable for any loss that occurs.7 So, if trustees compromise a debt due from a bankrupt estate, they must show that the bankrupt would have obtained his discharge, and that it was impossible to get the whole debt, or they will be liable for the loss. 8 If the trustee himself owes the estate, he must treat his indebtedness as assets collected, and if he becomes bankrupt, he must prove the debt against himself, or he will be liable, even if he gets his discharge.9 But in the United States bankrupts are not discharged from any liabilities which they are under in a fiduciary capacity.

§ 441. It was observed in Harden v. Parsons, that no man can require, or with reason expect, that a trustee should manage another's property with the same care and discretion as his own. But this is neither sound morality nor good law. A trustee must use the same care for the safety of the trust fund, and for the interests of the cestui que trust, that he uses for his own property and interests.² And even this will not be sufficient if he is careless in his own concerns; for a trustee must in all events use such care as a man of ordinary prudence uses in his own business of a similar nature.3 Thus, where a trustee had £200 of his own money, and £40 of trust-money, in his house, and he was robbed by his servant, he was not held responsible.4 And where a trustee deposited articles with his solicitor, to be passed over to a party entitled to them, and the articles were stolen, the trustee was not held responsible.⁵ But if a trustee employs an agent, and the agent steals or appropriates the property intrusted to him, the trustee will be held responsible; that is, the trustee is not responsible for the crimes of stran-

- § 445. In one case it was said, that an executor would not be liable if he had placed money in bank under the control of a coexecutor. The money was entered on joint account, but the individual checks of the coexecutors could draw it out. This was held to be the ordinary and reasonable course of business.¹ If, however, there is any fraud, collusion, or wilful default, or gross neglect, or if the executor has any reason to interfere, and does not put a stop to the mismanagement of his coexecutor, he will be held liable.² The case of Kilbee v. Sneyd, however, is so doubtful on this point, and contrary to authority, that it would be unsafe to act upon it.³
- § 446. Trustees and executors have a reasonable time to wind up a testator's estate, and make investments; and they may, without responsibility, keep the money in a reliable bank for one year after the death of the testator; but if they draw the money out of bank, and make any irregular investment, or lend it to another bank on interest, they will be responsible for the loss of the money, even if the will directs that the trustees shall not be responsible for losses by a banker; the construction of such direction being that the trustees shall not be liable for loss of money deposited with a banker in the ordinary manner.
- § 447. The trustee must not mingle the trust fund with his own. If he does, the cestui que trust may follow the trust property, and claim every part of the blended property which the trustee cannot identify as his own.⁶

§ 448. There may be express trusts for conversion; that is, to sell the trust fund, as it exists at the time of the testator's decease, and convert the same into some other kind of property or investment; (a) and there may be an express trust to allow the cestuis que trust the use and enjoyment of the specific property devised. Both of these forms of trust must be strictly executed, and generally no question arises upon them. But a question sometimes arises from the situation and character of the property, and the relations of the cestuis que trust to it, whether the trustee is to convert the property into another form, or allow the cestuis que trust to

(a) Conversion may be immediate; or it may take place upon the death of the creator of the trust, as when he makes a deed of property subject to a life-estate for himself. See Att. Gen. v. Dodd, [1894] 2 Q. B. 150; Paisley v. Holzshu, 83 Md. 325; Crane v. Bolles, 49 N. J. Eq. 373; Thomman's Estate, 161 Penn. St. 444; Smith v. Loewenstein, 50 Ohio St. 346; In re Holder (R. In Pennsylvania, a testator's express direction in his will that his executor sell all his real estate at the end of twenty years works a conversion thereof as of the time of his death. Handley v. Palmer, 91 F. R. 948; Williamson's Estate, 153 Penn. St. 508.

"The doctrine of equitable conversion is simply an application of the fundamental principle that equity regards that as done which ought to be done. . . . Conversion is effected by a sale. Equitable to sell and a duty to sell. It is not enough to manifest an intent that lands shall pass as money, unless there is also, either in terms or by implication, a grant of the means of turning it into money." Per Baldwin, J., in Clarke's Appeal, 70 Conn. 195, 215, 217.

The conversion always relates back to the earliest possible moment, as to the date of the contract giving an option, and it applies to an intestacy, even when the option to purchase is exercisable only after the grantor's death. All such cases must be determined by their own facts and the construction of the instrument under which the trust exists. (a)

vice versa, where such conversion is not contrary to the will of the donor expressly or impliedly, and is for the interest of the cestui.1 The general rule is, that where the testator gives his personal property, or the residue of his personal property, or the interest of his personal property, in trust, or directly to several persons in succession, and the property is of such a nature that it grows less valuable by time, as where it is leaseholds or annuities, or where the property is wasted or consumed in the use of it, the court implies an intention that such property shall be converted into a fixed and permanent form, so that the beneficiaries may take the use and income of it in succession. (a) Accordingly, in England, such property is converted into the investments allowed by law; and in the United States it must be converted into safe investments, according to the rules in force in the State where the trust is to be administered; and if the trustees fail to do so in a reasonable time, they will be guilty of a breach of trust.4

§ 450. The court presumes an intention that perishable property shall be converted, where several persons are to enjoy it in succession; not so much from the actual fact of such an intention, as from its being a convenient means of adjusting the rights of those who are to enjoy the property in succession.⁵ This presumption is made, unless a contrary intention is indicated upon the face of the will. cases. The object of the rule is to secure a fair adjustment of the rights of all the cestuis que trust in succession; for if the property would greatly depreciate in value in the hands of the first taker, the remainder-man might fail to receive the benefit intended to be given to him; the court, therefore, orders the perishable property to be converted into a permanent fund, unless a contrary intention is indicated in the will. So, if property, not liable to waste, but bearing a high rate of interest, and subject to great risks, is given to one person for life, and to another in remainder, the beneficiary in remainder may call for a conversion of the stocks or bonds into a less hazardous and more permanent investment, that their interests may be better protected; 2 but the court will not call in real securities without directing an inquiry whether it is necessary for the safety or benefit of all parties.3 On the other hand, the court applies the same principles to the protection of the first taker or tenant for life; and so, if there are reversionary interests that may not fall in and become beneficial to the tenant for life, but may come into the possession of the remainder-man, the court may order the reversions to be sold, and the purchase-money to be invested, so that the tenant for life may have the income for life.4 And if the trustees have a discretion as to the time of sale, which the court cannot control, and they sell when the reversion falls in, the court will give the tenant for life the difference between the actual price for which the reversion sold. and its estimated value one year after the testator's death. 5 (a)

convert. (a) If the devise is specific, the direction to vary the securities will not affect the rights of a specific legatee, for such direction is only for the protection of the trust fund.² A debt due to a testator is not devised specifically, although it is embraced in the residue of an estate specifically devised. as it is in no sense in the nature of an investment, and is therefore to be converted.3 And if a testator use any expression implying that leaseholds or stocks or other property are not to be converted, as if he names a time for the sale of them, as at or after the death of the tenant for life, the trustees will have no power to convert the property until the time arrives.4 But where a testator gave to his wife the whole of the interest arising from his property, both real and personal, during her life, and at her decease to be disposed of as therein directed, it was held that the trustees must convert, as there was no indication that she should enjoy any of the property in specie. 5 (b)

§ 452. After a trustee has reduced the trust fund to possession, and has secured the proper custody, and after he has converted so much of the property as was necessary to sell for money, his next duty is to invest the proceeds. It is one of the most important of the duties of trustees to invest the trust fund in such manner that it shall be safe, and yield a reasonable rate of income to the cestui que trust. If there are directions in the instrument of trust as to the time, manner, and kind of investment, the trustees must follow the direction and power so given them. The creator of a trust may specify the kind of investment, and what security may be taken, or he may dispense with all security. In the absence of such directions and powers, the trustees must be governed by the general rules of the court, or by the statutes and laws of the State in which the trust is to be executed. If there are no directions in the instrument, nor rules of court, nor statutory provisions in relation to investments, they must be governed by a sound discretion and good faith.2

They must not have speculation in view, but rather a permanent investment, considering both the probable income and the probable safety of the capital. A trustee should clearly indicate the investments he makes on behalf of the trust. If he invests apparently in his private capacity and after loss claims it was a trust transaction, he opens himself to suspicion of maladministration.² A trustee ought not as a rule to invest in second mortgages.3 Trustees ought to invest in government or State securities, or in bonds and mortgages on unincumbered real estate. The rule is not inflexible, but subject to the higher rule that the trustees are always to employ such care and diligence in the trust business as careful men of discretion and intelligence employ in their own affairs.4 In Rhode Island, neither statute nor rule of court fixes any special class of investments for trust funds, and trustees are therefore only required to be prudent, having regard to the income and the permanence and safety of the investment.⁵ Any loss occasioned by his negligence he must bear.6 It is the duty of trustees having funds for investment to keep them invested, and if they retain trustmoneys uninvested beyond a reasonable time, six months being usually allowed, they are prima facie liable for interest.7 Voluntary investments must not be made by a trustee beyond the jurisdiction of the court having charge of the trust, except in case of necessity for the saving of the fund. If he does so, the investment is at his peril of loss.8 Where a trustee invested in a confederate bond which perished on be sustained, and the trustee makes such investments at the peril of being held responsible for the safety of investment. This rule is not inflexible, but the circumstances must be very unusual to justify the exception to it. Cruiston v. Olcott, 84 N. Y. 339.

his hands, he was held not liable, having acted in good faith and with due discretion according to the lights of the time of investing. The test of liability always is whether or no the trustees have acted as prudent men would have acted in the management of their own property.

§ 453. There is one rule that is universally applicable to investments by trustees, and that rule is, that trustees cannot invest trust-moneys in personal securities. If trustees have a discretion as to the kind of investments, it is not a sound discretion to invest in personal securities.³ Lord Hardwicke said, that "a promissory note is evidence of a debt, but no security for it." Baron Hothman observed, that "lending on personal credit for the purpose of a larger interest was a species of gaming." Lord Kenyon said, that "no rule was better established than that a trustee could not lend on mere personal security, and it ought to be rung in the ears of every one who acted in the character of trustee." 6

However advantageous such an investment may appear, the trustee investing the funds in such undertakings will be compelled to make good all losses, and to account for and pay over all profits. The law discourages all such use of trust funds, by rendering it certain that the trustee shall make no profit from such investments, and that he shall be responsible for all losses. And if a trustee stands by, and sees his cotrustee employ the funds in that manner, he will be equally liable.² The same rule applies if the trustees simply continue the trade or business of the testator.3 It is their duty to close up the trade, withdraw the fund, and invest it in proper securities at the earliest convenient moment; and the same rule applies although the trustees may have been the business agents or partners of the testator. 4 Nor will a power "to place out at interest, or other way of improvement," authorize the employment of the money in a trading concern.⁵ In one case the direction was to "employ" the money, and it was thought that it savored of trade, and might be employed in that manner; 6 but it would not be safe for trustees to rely upon that case as an authority, even if their trust instrument contains a similar direction. If the settlor authorize his trustees to continue the fund in a trading firm, it will be a breach of trust, if the trustees allow the fund to remain after a change in the firm, as by the death or withdrawal of one of the partners. If the trustees are directed to continue the testator's trade, they can invest none of his general assets in the business. They are confined to the fund already embarked in the trade.2 If the trustees act in good faith in continuing the testator's business under such directions in a will, they will not be liable for any loss; 3 but they must act in good faith and without collusion or interested motives. So trustees are not bound to continue the capital in such trade, and they ought not to do so against their judgment. 4 But if all the cestuis que trust are sui juris, and capable of acting for themselves, and they desire an executor, administrator, or trustee to continue the business of the testator a few months, in order to preserve it for his son, and the executor acts in accordance with their request, and uses his best skill and judgment in the conduct of the trade, he will be allowed for the loss in his accounts.⁵

§ 455. In England, trustees cannot invest the trust fund in the stock or shares of any bank or private or trading corporation; for the capital depends upon the management of the directors, and is subject to losses.⁶ It is apparent, that a manufacturing or trading corporation may lose its whole capital in the prosecution of its business strictly within the terms of its charter.⁷ Lord Eldon said of bank stock, that securities.¹ Courts may give directions as to investments by trustees by decrees in particular suits, or by the promulgation of general orders or rules of court.² (a) It is said that the public policy in England of compelling trustees to invest trust funds in government funds originated largely in the necessities of the government, and the public advantage of creating a market and demand for government securities.³

§ 456. The English rule, in relation to investments of trust funds in bank stock and shares in trading and manufacturing corporations, prevails in New York and Pennsylvania.4 It is agreed, that trustees cannot invest trust funds in trade, nor directly in manufacturing, nor in business generally, nor in personal securities, unless there is an authority contained in the instrument of trust. The reasoning is, that trustees cannot use the trust fund in carrying on a private manufacturing establishment, nor in the business of private bankers, nor in underwriting, nor in trade and commerce, and that there is no difference in principle between carrying on such enterprises themselves with the trust fund, or lending it to other individuals to do so on their personal security, and buying shares or stocks in such business corporations carried on by other private individuals, or by the trustees themselves, as officers or agents. Perhaps these are the only States in which the strict English rule is holden. In Maryland, investments in bank stock, gas stock, etc., are good. 5 In Massachusetts, it is held that trustees may invest in bank stocks, and in the shares of manufacturing and insurance corporations, or in the notes of individuals secured by such stocks and shares as collateral security,2 or in certificates of deposit issued by a National Bank.3 The court justifies this rule in an elaborate opinion, affirming that such stocks are subject to no greater fluctuations than government securities; that they are as safe as real securities, which may depreciate in value, or the title fail; that claims against such corporations can be enforced at law, 4 while government funds can only be enforced by supplicating the sovereign power; and that government securities have hitherto been so limited in amount that it was impossible for the trust funds of the country to be invested in that manner. The last reason no longer exists. There are now national, state, county, town, and city bonds in sufficient amounts to absorb all trust funds seeking investment, and it is not to be denied that such investments are more permanent and safe. It may be admitted, that great public emergencies and national dangers have an unfavorable effect upon the value of public securities; but such emergencies and dangers have the same effect upon the stocks of private corporations. In addition to these depressing influences, the capital of such companies runs the risks and chances of trade, business, and speculation. Calamities that depress public credit seldom occur, while the risks of trade are constant. It would seem to be the wiser course to withdraw the funds, settled for the support of women, children, and other parties who cannot exercise an active discretion in the protection of their interests, as much as possible from the chances of business.

⁴ It is said that loans by the city of Boston always command a higher premium in the market than the loans of the Commonwealth. The difference in part is said to be that the city of Boston can be sued upon its contracts, and a judgment against it can be satisfied by seizing, upon an execution, any property of any citizen within the municipal limits; while no suit can be maintained against the State, but everything depends upon the good faith and honor of the legislature in supplying the means of payment.

may be said, that settlors may always do this by directing in what manner the funds settled by them shall be invested. But it would seem to be wiser for the court to establish the safest rule in the absence of special directions, and leave it to the settlor, if he prefers, to direct a less safe investment.

1 A large number of cases have been adjudged in the late confederate States, involving the legality of investments by trustees in the bonds and securities of the confederacy. No new principles have been so established that it is necessary to alter the text; but for convenience the principal cases are noted in this place. Under § 34 of the act of Nov. 9, 1861, of Alabama, which authorized trustees to invest in confederate bonds, or to receive payment in confederate notes, it was held that trustees were justified in making such investments previous to the re-establishment of the authority of the United States. Watson v. Stone, 40 Ala. 451; Dockey v. McDowell, 41 Ala. 476. But a guardian was held liable to account for the cash in full, who received payment in confederate notes after the re-establishment of such authority. Where a trustee procured an ex parte order to invest in confederate bonds, he was held liable for the loss. Snelling v. McCreary, 14 Rich. Eq. 291. Where a trustee received payment of a debt due to the trust fund, in the currency in common use, and reinvested it in securities which became worthless by the result of the war, he was not held liable for the loss. Campbell v. Miller, 38 Ga. 304. To the same effect is Brown v. Wright, 39 Ga. 96, which contains an able statement of the policy of the English government in directing trust funds to be invested in public securities.

In Virginia, commissioners who collected money by order of the court in confederate notes, and held a balance subject to contested liens until it became worthless, were held not liable for the loss. Davis v. Harman. 21 Grat. 200. And substantially the same rule was held in Dixon v. McCue, 21 Grat. 374. In Morgan v. Otey, 21 Grat. 619, it was held that payments should be made in the currency of the day. See Kraken v. Shields, 20 Grat. 377. In Walker v. Page, 21 Grat. 637, it was held that a sale of infant's lands for confederate money was valid at the time it was made, and that further development of events did not vitiate it. In Myers v. Zetelle, 21 Grat. 733, it was held that an agent or trustee who in good faith sold property, and invested the proceeds in confederate securities, at a time when no other investments were open to him, was protected from loss. And see Bird v. Bird, 21 Grat. 711; Beery v. Irick, 22 Grat. 614; Campbell v. Campbell, id. 649; Colrane v. Worrel, 30 Grat. 434.

In State v. Simpson, 65 N. C. 497, it was held that a guardian who collected in money which was well secured to his ward, and invested the same in confederate bonds, was guilty of laches, and was liable for the loss. See Alexander v. Summey, 66 N. C. 578. An agent or trustee is

Lord Harcourt, Lord Hardwicke, and Lord Alvanley appeared to have thought that a trustee or executor might invest the money in well-secured real estates.¹ But Lord Thurlow said, that in latter times the court had considered it improper to invest any part of a lunatic's estate upon private security.² Sir John Leach refused to allow an infant's money to be invested in that manner, and expressed surprise that any precedent could be found to the contrary.³ In a late case, the trustees invested in mortgages at the request

In Texas, trustees could not receive confederate money in discharge of obligations to them. Turner v. Turner, 36 Tex. 41. And see Scott v. Atchison, id. 76; Kleberg v. Bond, 31 Tex. 611; Woods v. Toombs, 36 Tex. 85; Turpin v. Sanson, id. 142; McGar v. Nixon, id. 289; Lacey v. Clements, id. 661.

There can be no doubt that mortgages on real estate are considered proper investments in the United States, and perhaps they are the only investments which are not objectionable in some one of the States. absence of public funds to an amount hitherto sufficient to absorb the money to be invested by trustees, different rules have been established in the several States, but mortgages upon estates of inheritance, taken with proper caution as to the amount and the title, have been named in all the States as proper and safe investments; so that the question in the United States is whether the security is in fact what it is called, security upon real estate. A loan to a company owning coal lands and a canal, to a much greater value than its debts, the interest on the loan being a preferred claim upon the income, was held to be substantially on real estate; but an investment in the stock of a similar company, which stock was not preferred, was held to be a breach of trust.⁵ An investment in railway bonds, secured

London Dock stock and sewer bonds are not real security.2 It is not a breach of trust to leave funds in turnpike bonds, secured by a mortgage of the tolls and real estate of the company, as they had been invested by the testator.3 Under the right of the trustees to invest trust funds in real securities, they cannot convert the funds into real estate by taking the legal title absolutely to themselves in trust; and if they do so, the cestui que trust may elect to take the land, or the trust-money and interest; 4 though a direction to invest in productive real estate was held to justify the purchase of dwellinghouses, or the purchase of a right of dower in order to render the property more productive. 5 If a testator has already invested in mortgages, a trustee may make such further advances of money as are necessary to secure the first investment. such case must make a careful investigation and exercise a sound discretion, or his advances will not be allowed in case of a loss. And so a guardian, in case of a grave emergency, may buy in land for the minor to save a certain loss; 2 so an administrator may buy in the land of a debtor to his estate to save the debt.3 Such an investment is a mere temporary expedient, and is to be treated as personal estate.4 A loan of trust funds on real mortgage does not change the character of the funds, nor constitute an investment in real estate.5 The court may order an investment of accumulations, or of the principal fund temporarily in real estate, with a declaration that it shall continue personalty; 6 and so a court may order an investment in real estate generally, where no other way is pointed out in the trust instrument.7 Where a trustee or guardian is obliged to take land subject to a mortgage, the trustee becomes personally liable to pay off the mortgage, to protect the interest of the cestui que trust. In such case, the guardian or trustee may have the possession of the estate or the management of the trust fund, in order to secure himself for the advancement so made.8 But there must be an urgent necessity to justify such a proceeding. If a trustee is authorized to invest in real estate, stock, or securities, he cannot mortgage the trust fund in order to raise money to invest in such manner, nor invest in machinery for the use of the cestui que trust.9 In all cases the trustee ought to exercise high diligence in ascertaining the valuation, situation, condition, and productiveness of the real estate or other property upon which it is proposed to make a loan of the trust-money; for he will be liable for the loss if he is guilty of any negligence in this respect.¹

§ 459. In a few States, there are statutes authorizing trustees to invest in a particular manner, and excusing them from responsibility if their investments are made in good faith in the prescribed securities. (a) Thus in Pennsylvania,2 an executor, guardian, or trustee may apply to the Orphans' Court, and the court may direct an investment in the stocks or public debt of the United States, of the State, or of the city of Philadelphia, or in real securities, or in the stock of the incorporated districts of Philadelphia County, of Pittsburg and Alleghany, and the water-works of Kensington, Philadelphia County. But it has been held that trustees are not confined to these funds; that the acts are for their benefit; that they can elect other kinds of investment, but will be responsible for losses.3 In New York, there does not appear to be any legislation on the subject; but trustees are bound by the rules of the court to invest in real securities, or government bonds, or in the State loan, or in loans of the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company. 4 In New Jersey, a statute authorized an investment to be made upon an application to the court, but does not establish any particular funds. (b) In Gray v. Fox, the court lay down the rule that investments must be made in government stocks, or in real security. In Maryland, there is neither statute nor rule of court to guide the trustees. The courts do not approve of changes in investments, unless express power is given in the instrument of trust; as where a testator gave certain stocks in trust without direction to vary the security, and the trustee disposed of the stocks and invested the money in other securities, he was ordered to replace the entire sum in the same stocks, although the number of shares were increased by the change.² In Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Michigan, and Missouri, the courts may, upon application, direct trustees as to the manner of investment, but no special investments are pointed out.3 If trustees invest according to the direction of the courts, they are not responsible for any loss. In Georgia, if trustees invest in the stocks, bonds, or other securities, issued by their own State, or in such other securities as shall be ordered by the court, they will be exempt from loss.4 In Mississippi, an investment in bank stocks is allowed.⁵ In States where there are no statutes nor rules of court regulating investments, trustees are bound to act in good faith and with a sound discretion in investing trust-money; and if they so act they are not responsible for any loss that may happen, 6 but to invest in mere personal securities is not a sound discretion anywhere.¹ Nor is it a sound discretion for trustees to subscribe trust funds to new enterprises, as for the stock of new manufacturing, insurance, or railroad corporations, when the undertaking must, in the nature of things, be experimental; and it will not excuse the trustee that he subscribes his own money to such enterprises, as it is permitted to him to speculate with his own money if he sees fit.²

§ 460. The instrument of trust frequently contains directions respecting the investment of the trust funds. If the directions are so general that they do not point to any particular class or classes of investments, the trustees must invest in those securities that are sanctioned by the court; as, if the trust is to invest in "good and sufficient security," the court will sanction no security not allowed by its rules and orders.³ (a) If the trustee is to invest at his "discretion," he cannot invest in personal securities.⁴ (b) The powers and directions given in the instrument must be strictly followed;¹ thus a power to invest in bank stocks or lots of land will not authorize an investment in the loan of the United States.2 A power to loan on real securities does not justify a loan upon railroad bonds secured by mortgage of the road; 3 nor does a power to loan upon mortgage authorize an investment in railroad mortgage bonds.4 A power to invest in "good and sufficient securities in Virginia and Maryland," authorizes a loan upon town securities.⁵ A direction to invest "in any public stocks or securities bearing an interest," embraces a coal and navigation company, that being within the popular meaning of the testator. 6 If there is a direction to invest trust funds in real securities in a foreign jurisdiction, the court will allow the investment; but if no such power is given, such investment will not be allowed.8 Where trustees were authorized in their discretion to invest in a dwelling-house for the daughter of the testator, and she was married and went to reside in a foreign jurisdiction, it was held, that they might invest in a dwelling-house at the place of her residence, although it was in a foreign jurisdiction.9

But where they were authorized to invest in bonds, debentures, or other securities, or the stocks or funds of any colony or foreign country, they were not allowed to invest in railway bonds, though guaranteed by a foreign government.1 As before stated, all these powers are strictly construed; as, if the trustees are authorized to loan £3000 on personal securities, and they lend £5000, it is a breach of trust; 2 and if the power is to loan on bond, they cannot loan on a promissory note.3 If the trustees may loan the trust fund to the husband, with the consent of the wife, they cannot allow the loan to continue if the husband becomes bankrupt; and they will be guilty of a breach of trust, if they do not use due diligence in calling in the loan, or in collecting such dividends as may be coming. An entire change of circumstances may change their duty, although the wife may still desire that her husband should have the use of the money.4 Generally, where the trustees are required to invest the fund in a particular manner, with the approbation of any person, such requirement becomes imperative upon the request of such person. 5 (a) So, if any formalities are prescribed as to the investment, they must be strictly complied with; as, where the written consent of a wife is a prerequisite to a loan to her husband, a verbal consent will not relieve the trustees from the consequences of a breach of trust, if they act on such verbal consent. 6 A subsequent consent is not sufficient where a previous consent was contemplated; nor is it enough for a wife to join the husband in a petition for an order that a loan be made to him. If the trustees go beyond the prescribed limits, neither good faith nor care nor diligence, if they can accompany a departure from the direction of the instrument of trust, will protect them if a loss occurs. If it is impossible for them to invest according to the directions, they must invest in the securities prescribed by the law or by the court, or in the safest class of securities.

§ 461. A direction to invest in good freehold security must be strictly complied with; ⁵ an authority to invest in ground rents authorizes an investment in redeemable ground rents, that being the kind of ground rent in the place where the investment is to be made; ⁶ a power to invest in good private security does not authorize the trustees to use the funds themselves. ⁷ Where stock is settled on a husband and wife for life, with remainder to the children, with a power to vary the securities for greater interest, the trustees cannot purchase an annuity for one of the tenants for life. ⁸ If, however, the existing securities are unsafe, and it is proper to call in the money and reinvest it, trustees may make a temporary investment in safe funds until an investment can be advantageously made in the securities directed by the testator. ⁹ If the direction is to invest in land or any other security, it will be implied that the settlor intended the investment to be made in land if it could be done advantageously, and the alternative part of the direction is to be followed only in case an investment cannot be made in land; and this construction will be followed unless there is some other controlling consideration in the instrument.1 And if trustees are authorized to lend on mortgage to three persons, they cannot lend to two of them, although they get the entire interest in the estate; nor can they lend to the three without the mortgage at the time, although they get the security in two years after. It is no excuse to say that the delay did not occasion the loss. The conclusive answer is, that they committed a breach of trust in not obeying the power, and they must make good the loss.2 And so trustees cannot let money on a mortgage to one of themselves.3 Under a power to loan on mortgage they may continue existing mortgages, if safe.4

§ 462. A trustee must invest the trust funds in his hands, in the manner directed, within a reasonable time, although no direction is given in the deed or will as to the time or manner of investment. If he neglects for an unreasonable time to make the investment, he may be charged with interest; and if any loss or damage occurs to the cestui que trust from the delay, the trustee must make it up. 5 (a) What is a reasonable time depends upon circumstances. When the trustees were directed to invest in the purchase of land with all convenient speed, a year was held to be a reasonable time. 1 But where the trustees are directed to invest in freehold securities, they will not be charged with interest until it has been shown that they could have invested according to the direction; for it is not always practicable to procure such securities.² So a year from the testator's death was considered a reasonable time within which to make an investment in United States stock.3 On the other hand, the Supreme Court of the United States allowed three months as a reasonable time within which to invest capital sums of a trust fund paid in to a banker, and charged the trustee for the sum lost by the failure of the banker after that time.4 In other cases, six months have been allowed as a reasonable time within which to invest trust funds; and trustees have been charged with interest when they kept the money uninvested for a longer time.⁵ But where the trustees make no effort to invest the money, they may be charged with interest from a period earlier than six months.6 Where a trustee or executor is directed to invest a legacy immediately in stock, and he retains the sum for the period of one year or more, or for an unreasonable time, and the price of the stock rises, he will be ordered to purchase as much stock as could have been purchased at the time the fund ought to have been invested.1 Where trustees were directed to invest in the funds, and they paid the money into a banker's with directions to invest in bank annuities, which the banker neglected to do, and the trustees made no inquiry for five months, they were held, after the failure of the banker, for the money or the stock at the option of the cestui que trust.2 Trustees and guardians are held to a stricter rule in relation to investments than executors acting as trustees, for trustees and guardians generally take an estate ready to be invested; and trustees will be held to a stricter rule in relation to capital sums, than in relation to current income from interest, dividends, rents, and other smaller sums; thus in Barney v. Saunders,3 before cited, three months were held a reasonable time within which trustees ought to have invested capital sums paid into the banker's, and they were held responsible for the loss of capital after that time by the failure of the banker, while they were not held liable to replace small sums paid into the same banker's from the rents, interest, and dividends upon the same estate. An executor will not in general be charged with interest for not investing before the expiration of a year from the testator's death.4

⁴ But where it is the duty of executors within a reasonable time to separate a legacy from the estate, and to invest it to accumulate, or for the support and maintenance of the legatee, neglect to do so makes them chargeable with legal interest; and they will not be allowed to limit their liability by showing the rate of interest received upon the general fund,

A year is a reasonable time within which an executor may call in the testator's estate and pay off his liabilities; and it is necessary, during that time, that the executor should keep the money on hand. In most States an executor is allowed that time by statute; and he is exempt from suit by creditors during that year. After that time, if an executor keeps money in his hands without any apparent reason, except for the purpose of using it, it becomes a breach of trust or negligence; and the court may charge him with interest, or with the principal sum if lost. So an executor will be charged with interest during the year, if he receives interest by loaning or using the money.

§ 463. Trustees ought not to mix trust-money with other moneys, and take a joint mortgage for the whole, for this would be to complicate the trust with the rights of strangers; nor should a mortgage in such case be taken in the name of a common trustee, for that would be a delegation of the rights of the trustee; but where the trust fund was very small, it was held to be proper for a trustee to put some of his own money with it in order to loan it to the best advantage on a mortgage. representations that the mortgage was ready, and there was no mortgage, and the solicitors misapplied the money, the trustees were held to make up the loss. When the money is paid in to a banker or broker for investment, the trustees must see that the investment is made at once, and the securities taken in the proper form, or they will be liable for any loss that may happen; 2 or where money is suffered to remain in the hands of third persons unnecessarily, and a loss happens, the trustees must make it up.3 So, if the trustee pays the money into a bank in his own name, and not in the name of the trust, he will be responsible for the money in case of the failure of the bank.4 But as between the trustee, his representatives, and the cestui que trust, the cestui que trust may follow the money into the hands of the banker. If it is a simple account, not complicated by mixture with deposits of the trustee's own moneys and withdrawals, it is a simple debt which the cestui que trust may claim to be held and applied to the trust; but the deposit of the trustee's own money, and the withdrawal of part by checks, will not defeat the right of the cestui que trust. The rule to be applied in such case is stated in Pennell v. Deffell as follows: the checks are to be applied to the earliest items of deposit, whether of the trust fund or of the trustee's own money, and such earliest items will be reduced pro tanto. If anything of the trust fund remains in the hands of the banker under money be loaned on security to be reloaned back to the trustee, or by the trustee at a profit. If a trustee makes such use of the money, he will be responsible for all loss, and he may be compelled to pay the highest rate of interest; or the cestui que trust may follow the money, and insist upon all the profits made by such use; and if the trustee is a trader or business man, he will be presumed to use and employ the money in his business if he deposits it in bank in his own name; for such business men must generally keep some money in bank for the purposes of their credit, and such trust-money answers the purpose as if it was their own.2 If the trust fund is employed in business, the whole increase will belong to the fund; but if the trustee is also one of the beneficiaries, he will be entitled to his share, and it will go to his representatives upon his death.3 Where an executor bought stock in his own name with the trust fund, and the stock rose in price, it was held that he was liable for the market-price of the stock at the time of the decree. If the investment is profitable, the cestuis que trust are entitled to the profits; if disastrous, they are entitled to interest on the money; and if the investment has been made with funds of the estate mingled with funds of the executor in various stocks, and the funds of the estate cannot be traced and identified in any particular stocks, the cestuis que trust are entitled to select the most profitable stocks.4

acted upon. If a testator gives any directions in his will to continue his investments already made, trustees must of. course follow such directions; and if they follow them in good faith, they will not be liable for any losses, unless they are negligent in failing to change an investment, when it ought to be changed to save it; (a) for it cannot be supposed that the direction of a testator to continue a certain investment relieves the trustees from the ordinary duty of watching such investment, and of calling it in when there is imminent danger of its loss by a change of circumstances. If no directions are given in a will as to the conversion and investment of the trust property, trustees to be safe should take care to invest the property in the securities pointed out by the law. It is true that a testator during his life may deal with his property according to his pleasure, and investments made by him are some evidence that he had confidence in that class of investments; but, in the absence of directions in the will, it is more reasonable to suppose that a testator intended that his trustees should act according to law. Consequently, in States where the investments which trustees may make are pointed out by law, the fact that the testator has invested his property in certain stocks, or loaned it on personal security, will not authorize trustees to continue such investments beyond a reasonable time for conversion and investment in regular securities. 1 But in States where there are no fixed funds or securities in which trustees shall invest, the fact that a testator has invested his property in particular stocks, shares of corporations, mortgages, or other securities, thus indicating his confidence in such investments, will go far to justify the trustees in continuing them. 2 So trustees, in the usual course of dealing, may take notes on short time for small sums of rent due their estate, that having been the usual course of dealing with the tenants by the testator.3 Taking all the cases together, it would appear to be a settled principle that trustees are not justified, in the absence of express or implied directions in the will, in continuing an investment permanently, made by the testator, which they would not be justified themselves in making. The principle probably has this qualification, that if a trustee continue such investment in good faith, and a loss happens, he would be held to replace the original sum only, without interest.4

§ 466. Except upon emergency, to protect the fund from depreciation, or to convert wasting securities to those of a permanent character, or investments in securities that are not authorized by law into such as are allowed, trustees may not sell or vary specific securities given in trust, nor securities left by a testator in which he has himself invested

even if trustees have express power to vary the securities, they will not be allowed to do so capriciously, or without some apparent object; and they ought not to sell out an investment without having in view an immediate reinvestment: if they do so, they may be held to pay the loss that may occur.2 If an investment in a particular fund or stock is directed by a testator, it cannot be varied except by the consent of all the parties interested; and if there are parties not sui juris, or not in being, the court itself will not order a change.3 Where an investment was not to be varied without the consent of the testator's wife, and she waived the provisions of the will, her consent was still held necessary.4 In those States where there are no stocks, funds, or securities, prescribed by law, or by the order of court, in which trustees must invest in order to be safe, and investments are once made by trustees in safe and proper securities, or where investments are left by the testator in such securities, the courts will be very adverse to a change, and will not allow one, except for some very controlling motive. The reason is, that where there is no rule governing investments by trustees, except that they shall act in good faith and upon a sound discretion, courts are very averse to change proper investments once made, and select others by so very indefinite a rule. 5 (a)

An investment on securities of a description authorized by the trust, where the breach of trust consists only in not exercising due caution in taking it, stands on a different footing from an investment of an unauthorized description, which the beneficiary must either accept or reject. In re Salmon, 42 Ch. D. 351; 1 Ames on Trusts (2d ed.), 487, and note. But the trustee's liability for an improper investment is not affected by the fact that the security upon which it was made has since been disposed of, as against a beneficiary who never consented thereto or impeded the trustee's obtaining the benefit of such investment. Head v. Gould, [1898] 2 Ch. 250.

A trustee who distributes a trust fund among strangers at the request of a beneficiary, and upon his covenanting to indemnify him, cannot afterwards recover under the covenant for the loss of a beneficial interest in the fund to which he subsequently becomes entitled. Evans v. Benyon, 37 Ch. D. 329; Crichton v. Crichton, [1895] 2 Ch. 853, 858.

A pretended investment, when fraudulent, as when a trustee seeks to place among the trust assets doubtful or worthless securities owned by himself, is voidable at the option of the beneficiary, to whom any third party participating in the cannot acquiesce in an investment, until his interest falls into possession, so as to be bound. If the improper investment has been made, at the request of the tenant for life, and such tenant has received an increased income by reason of the improper investment, such increased income can be recovered back from the tenant for life.2 But if the tenant for life protested against the illegal investment, and desired the trustees to make a proper investment, the increased income from the illegal investment cannot be recovered back.3 In all cases the assent to an illegal investment must be so formal that the trustees are justified in acting upon it. If it is a mere expression that a certain investment would be safe, without any intention that the trustees should act upon it, the cestui que trust will not be bound.4 So an assent to a particular investment cannot justify a subsequent mismanagement of the investment.⁵ And acquiescence by the cestui que trust will not be presumed from mere lapse of time, if he has done nothing to acknowledge it, or has received no benefit.⁶ Any party whose rights are endangered by an improper or unauthorized investment may apply to the court for redress; 7 but if the investment was made by mistake, or has been corrected, the trustees will not be removed, or they will not be deprived of the funds.8

§ 468. It is difficult to lay down any general rule that is equitable and applicable to all cases, as to the interest that trustees shall pay upon trust funds in their hands. In England, (a) if trustees suffer money to remain in their own hands, or in the hands of third persons, or in bank for an unreasonable time, in addition to their liability for its loss during such delay, they will be charged with interest at the rate of four per cent; but if the trustees are grossly negligent or corrupt, or improperly call in the money from a proper investment, and suffer it to lie idle, or if they use it in trade or speculation, or invest it in improper places, the court will charge them with interest at the rate of five per cent; and, in certain special cases of misconduct, the court will order annual or semi-annual rests, for the purpose of charging them with compound interest. In the United States there is no law by which different rates of interest can be applied to different degrees of negligence or misconduct; and the only question here is, whether simple or compound interest shall be imposed. The general rules, so far as they can be drawn from all the cases, are as follows: (1) If a trustee retains balances in his hands which he ought to have invested, or delays for an unreasonable time to invest, or if he mingles the money with his own, or uses it in his private business, or deposits it in bank in his own name, or in the name of the firm of which he was a member, or neglects to settle his account for a long time, or to distribute or pay over the money when he ought to do so,2 he will be liable to pay simple interest at the rate established by law as the legal rate in the absence of special agreements.3 This their gains from the use of the money. 1 If the trustee cannot show what amount of interest he has received, he shall be charged with legal interest from the time when the regular investment ought to have been made.2 There may be an exception to the rule, that a deposit of the trust-money in bank in the name of the trustee, or a mixing of the trust fund with his own, will impose a liability of legal interest. There must be some element of a breach of trust in the transaction, or a breach of duty. 3(a) If therefore the sums are small, and the trustee receives no credit or profit from the act, or if the act was accidental, or beneficial to the cestui que trust, legal interest will not be imposed upon the trustee:4 or if the trustee was a member of a firm of bankers, and he deposited with the firm in his name as trustee, he will not be charged with interest, although the firm made a profit from the deposit.⁵ The proper mode of taking the account of trustees is to treat all the income of the trust received during the current year as unproductive, and to charge against the income of the current year all the disbursements, including the compensation or commissions of the trustees for the same year, and to strike a balance, upon which, as a general rule, interest is to be allowed, but in such a way as not to compound it.2 If, however, these balances are too small to invest, or for any reason the trustees might equitably keep them on hand, interest will not be allowed upon them until the balances so accumulate as to be properly invested, or until the trustees ought to invest them.3 Of course, as soon as a trustee properly pays the fund into court, his liability for interest ceases.4 But so long as any litigation is pending over the fund, and the money is not brought into court, the trustee is bound to keep it invested, and he is liable for legal interest. 5 But a guardian is not liable to interest while the settlement of his account is pending.6

§ 469. (2) If a trustee is directed and bound to invest in a particular stock or fund within a certain time, or within a reasonable time, and he neglects to make the investment as directed, the cestui que trust has his election to take the money and legal interest thereon, or so much stock as the money would have purchased at the time when the investment ought to have been made, and the dividends thereon.1 It has been held in some cases, that if trustees were directed to invest in stocks, or in real estate, and they neglected to do either, the cestui que trust might have the amount of stocks that could have been purchased, and the dividends thereon.2 On the other hand, it has been held, and is now established in such case, that, as the trustees might have invested in real securities, and such real securities might have been of less value than the original fund, the cestui que trust can have only the money and legal interest thereon, and cannot claim the amount of stocks that might have been purchased.3 If trustees are directed to invest a certain fund separately, they will be liable for losses occurring by reason of neglecting this provision.4 In Wisconsin, it has been held that if a trustee is directed to invest in United States bonds or in real estate security, the interest which he might have obtained upon proper real estate security is the measure of his liability for failure to invest the fund.5

times even biennial rests will be allowed in computing the compound interest where the trustee has used the fund in his own business. There has been considerable conflict of opinion and authority upon the matter of compounding interest against a trustee. Lord Cranworth said, that a trustee might as well be charged with more principal than he had received as to be charged with more interest.2 In another case, it was said in England that a trustee would be charged with more than four per cent interest: 3 (1) when he ought to have received more; (2) when he did receive more; (3) when he is presumed to receive more; and (4) when he is estopped to say he did not receive more. 4(a) Compound interest was allowed in one case where the trustee held the fund after the minor cestui came of age without making any arrangement with the child or explaining to him his rights.5 The burden is on the trustee to show that he made no profits, or received no benefit from the money; 6 and if he refuses to account or to show the amount of profits received, the court will give compound interest, in order that it may be certain that the cestui que trust gets the profits of the trade or business in which the trustee has employed the money. 1 To justify the compounding of interest, there must be a wilful breach of duty,² and not simple neglect; there must be some special and peculiar circumstances.3 Compound interest will not be given against negligent trustees where the facts do not indicate a withdrawal of the funds from their legitimate channels of accumulation, or a realization by the trustees of profits on the assets.4 If the money is simply used in business, and it appears that the profits were not equal to the interest, annual rests will not be made.⁵ It appears now to be the settled doctrine, that compound interest will not be given as a penalty for a breach of trust, nor will it be given for an employment of the money in the course of trade, if the profits made in the trade can be clearly ascertained, and are less than legal interest, or less than five per cent; but if nothing appears as to the profits, the courts will presume that the ordinary profits of trade are made, or five per cent in England and the legal interest in the United States. And if the interest or profits of the fund are retained in the trade. instead of being paid out, it will be presumed that the trustees made a similar rate of interest or profit upon the sum retained in trade, and therefore annual rests will be made, and compound interest given; not as punishment or penalty, but because the fund and the income employed in trade are presumed to produce that amount of income, interest, or profit. The trustee must seek out the cestui que trust to pay the income to him, or he must pay interest upon it. So, where a trustee receives property and sells it, he must account for the proceeds. And if he refuses, he will be charged with the highest value that can be sustained by the evidence.2 But a mere payment into bank to the general account of the trustee is not such an employment of the money as to justify compound interest. 3 A trustee is accountable for all interest and profits actually received by him from the trust fund, and for all which he might have obtained by due diligence and reasonable skill.4
